Washington, March 9.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo issued a statement denying unequivocally the charge made by Senator Lodge that the administration originally had intended to purchase interned German ships should the ship purchase bill become law. Referring to the Lodge statement Mr. McAdoo said:

"The shipping bill never did have in view the purchase of the interned German ships or any specific ships."

The statement then launches off into a rather sharply worded attack upon Senators Lodge and Root for their alleged inconsistency in voting against the ship bill out of fear that the president would purchase belligerent ships whereas, he points out, they had voted for the amendment to the ship registry laws permitting the purchase of belligerent ships by American shipowners.

Mr. McAdoo asserts that the only reason why the president refused to accept an amendment of the ship bill prohibiting the purchase of interned ships was that such a provision would have meant "the surrender of a vital American right."

"The purpose of the bill," says the statement, "was to give the government authority to buy or build any kind of suitable ships for the purposes of American trade and commerce. Had the bill passed the president would not have sanctioned the purchase of any ship that would have caused complications with any power. This assurance was given to every senator who made inquiry and was conveyed to the senators in the chamber as coming from the president himself."

FIGHT ON, SAYS GOVERNOR

Pennsylvania Chief Starts Battle Between Pro and Anti Liquor Men.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 9.—The greatest fight between liquor and anti-liquor forces in the history of Pennsylvania was started by Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh when he returned from Philadelphia.

"The fight is on," he said. "It is not a question of a member of the legislature voting to represent a district. A legislator is a sworn officer of the commonwealth. He should obey the will of the commonwealth and not hide behind local conditions."

Representative Brumbaugh of Blair, a cousin of the governor, introduced a bill which would prevent the "taking or transporting" of liquor into any township, borough, town, ward, city or county where there is no licensed house. The penalty is imprisonment for one year or a fine of $500.

Representative Samuel J. Barnett of York would prohibit treating. The retailer and his bartenders would be responsible for the enforcement of the law.

SELECTION OF SEED POTATOES.

Dr. G. M. Twitchell of Maine, Tells How To Grow Tubers.

Three important lessons face the successful potato grower, thoro preparation of the land, seed which has been improved by selection thru a series of years, and intelligent and ample fertilization. I am not going to omit the very necessary part of the work covered by care and cultivation, but I am forced to the conclusion that we come nearer to good work here than in the three points mentioned above.

Experience is teaching that old time methods of seed selection will not suffice. We say seed runs out but that is not the right way to put it. It is the man who runs out the seed, simply by neglecting a few simple rules. The man who fails to select his seed in the field before digging time, is a certain loser. It is a tremendous strain on the pocket book of the average farmer to be obliged to send away year after year for fresh seed, yet this is the rule with the great majority.

The time to commence the selection of seed is when the plants are eight inches high. Every exceptionally strong shoot should be marked and followed thru the season. When digging time comes, watch for these hills and, if the stalks be strong and stout, the leaves green, large and strong, and if these hills carry six to eight good sized potatoes and very few small ones, save these hills for seed. You cannot afford to save good specimens from hills carrying any number of small potatoes.

In May, 1913 I, cross plowed and harrowed, and two weeks later plowed again and fitted for planting. The result was the complete killing out of the couch grass so that only three hours hand work has been necessary during the entire season, and that only to brush the earth about the hills after the hiller had been used. The yield obtained never would have been possible but for the preparation. Three plowings seem unnecessary but here was where I saved money. It is not a question of how many times to plow, or harrow, but to have the field in the best possible condition for growing a crop. If we are to realize most this initial step cannot be neglected.

There is today no room for "guess-it-will-do." Profit comes from the last fifty or one hundred bushels, not the first. The item of cost of production must ever be reckoned with, and the secret is to minimize the hand labor. At the last harrowing I applied, at the rate of twelve hundred pounds to the acre, the following mixed chemicals—500 pounds of meat tankage, bone meal, acid phosphate and muriate of potash, thoroly mixed together, and four hundred more, of the same, in the planted when planting. As it would be three weeks before a quick acting nitrogeneous fertilizer would be called for I cut out the nitrate of soda, at this time, and reduced the cost. Just as the potatoes broke ground, and I could follow the rows, I applied, at the rate of four hundred pounds to the acre, this mixture—nitrate of soda 400, meat tankage 400, bone meal 400, muriate potash 300, and raid phosphate 500. This gave a 5-10-7½ mixture. The field was planted June 2nd and cultivated every five days as long as we could get between the rows. I should have said that we started the hiller as soon as the last named application of chemicals was made. The rapid growth and uniformly vigorous tops gave the best possible proof of the value of the fertilizer used and the methods of application. The bugs were out in numbers and the first application, of the non-arsenical insecticide I have used the past ten years, was made just as the little slugs hatched. It never pays to wait for them to get their growth. A minute application just as they hatch will do more than ten times as much a week later. The secret of protection is to be ahead of the pests, not behind. The only time to do effective work is before the tissue of the leaves have been injured. This applies to the flea beetle as well as potato bug and blight spore. As this insecticide is both a bug destroyer and preventive of blight, as well as promoter of growth, four applications were made, the last when the vines covered the ground completely. It is impossible to lay too much emphasis on the complete preservation of the leaves and vines just as long as possible, for growth of the tubers is most rapid from the twelfth to fifteenth week, and that growth is impossible if the leaves and stalks have been in any degree destroyed.

One fact is certain, that it is absolutely necessary to feed liberally, at the right time and in the proper manner. This calls for some study of the soil, and knowledge of its requirements. Land producing a generous amount of clover does not call for as much nitrogen as other fields lacking in this nitrogen gathering friend of the farmer. It pays to use fertilizer generously. The man who stints in feeding, animal, field, or crop, merits certain failure. On old fields or pasture, ideal potato land, I would never use less than one ton to the acre. We forget that it costs as much to grow one-hundred bushels as three hundred. The man who uses a little will save at the spigot and waste at the bung. First of all we must provide for the food of support, and this means far more than some of us realize. Then comes the food for growth, and the development of a hill full of large, smooth, well shaped tubers. Too many of us are trying to grow a peck of potatoes in a two-quart hill. It doesn't pay. It is a ruinous policy and the sooner we learn to feed liberally the sooner we will find the road to bumper crops. The many queries coming from hard working farmers wanting information regarding fertilizers and fertilizing puts a responsibility on every friend who has worked over the problem. For one I feel that I must give more care to the preparation of the land, be more critical in the selection of seed, feed for the largest growth and yield, never with a thought of saving a dollar in fertilizers, keep the barn manure away from the potato field, and cultivate so frequently that no weeds will be seen, and the surface of the ground will be a complete dust mulch to hold the moisture. All these are necessary in Maine and I guess will hold in Maryland.

RUSSIAN FLEET STRIKES

Three Turkish Forts Damaged—Operations Continue In Dardanelles.

London, March 9.—On behalf of the Russian naval general staff the official press bureau made the following announcement:

"On Sunday our fleet bombarded Zunguldiak, Kozlon and Kilimli (ports on the Black sea), destroying all structures and plants for the shipment of coal. The bombardment was followed by a terrible explosion and fire. Four batteries were silenced and eight steamers destroyed. Our casualties were three men wounded."

The British admiralty made public the following statement concerning the operations of the allied fleet against the Dardanelles:

"The operations against the Dardanelles are progressing in fine weather. Vice Admiral Carden reported that March 6 the Queen Elizabeth, supported by the Agamemnon and Ocean, attacked Forts Hamideh 1, Tabia and Hamidieh 3 by indirect fires across the Gallipoli peninsula.

"The Queen Elizabeth was replied to by howitzers and field guns and three shells from the field guns struck her without, however, causing any damage.

"Meanwhile, inside the straits, the Vengeance, Albion, Majestic and Prince George and the French battleship Suffren fired on Souain Dere and Mount Dardanus batteries, and were fired on by concealed guns."

REPULSES ARE NUMEROUS

All the Belligerent Capitals Report Driving Back the Enemy.

London, March 9.—The French official statements announce progress in the Champagne district and in the Vosges. The principal advances were in the vicinity of Perthes and about St. Mihiel.

Berlin reports gains in both the eastern and western war zones. All attacks were repulsed in the Champagne district, while to the east of Le Mesnil a night counter attack of the Germans resulted in the capture of forty Frenchmen. In the east the statement deals with the repulse of Russian attacks all along the line.

Petrograd tells of a repulse of a German attack on the Pilitza river around Nowo Miesto and the checking of a new drive toward Warsaw. In other sectors of the front there were German repulses.

Complaint of Germans Dismissed.

Toledo, O., March 9.—The complaint made by local Germans against United States District Judge John M. Killits has been dismissed by the government. Killits made a speech recently in which he was declared to have said he did not care how soon somebody dropped a thousand bombs on Emperor William's head. The complaint was filed with President Wilson and asked that the jurist be disciplined.

MEXICO CITY TO BE LEFT TO MOB

Obregon Intends to Take Forces From Capital

PILLAGING ALREADY STARTED

Washington Sends Carranza Strongest Note Possible Outside of Armed Force and It Is Believed by Officials That Conditions Will Be Changed. Obregon Encourages Poor Classes to Attack Foreigners.

Washington, March 9.—Mexico City is about to be evacuated by the Carranza forces. Abandonment of the capital by General Obregon may occur at any moment. Official advices to this effect were received at the state department.

These dispatches disclose as imminent the abandonment of Mexico City to the mercy of mob rule. Desultory pillaging already has begun and it is feared that when the protection of the Obregon troops is removed the lowest characters will proceed to plunder the city.

Estimates received at the state department give the number of Americans in Mexico City as 2,500; Germans, 1,800; Chinese, 2,000; Turks, 2,000; French, 1,900; Spaniards, 12,000; Cubans, 1,200; English, 1,000; Italians, 700; Japanese, 500, and other nationalities, 800.

Secretary Daniels announced that the cruiser Tacoma had been ordered from Haytien waters to the Mexican coast. He asserted, however, that in all probability the battleship Delaware, now the only battleship on the east coast of Mexico, would join the fleet in Cuban waters soon. Other warships there are small craft, the Sacramento, Des Moines and Petrel. Mr. Daniels declared that no general movement of warships to the Mexican coast was contemplated at this time.

The chief demands made upon Carranza are that communication between Mexico City and Vera Cruz be kept open for general traffic, particularly passenger travel.

The latest representations to Carranza go as far as it is possible without actually threatening the use of force.

Because Carranza has not answered these representations definitely the state department refuses to assume that it is the intention of Carranza and Obregon to leave Mexico City without military or police protection of any sort. Officials take the stand that it is due Carranza to assume that he will arrange for some sort of protection of the city until it is demonstrated that such is not his intention.

Since Obregon has been in charge of Mexico City thousands have been thrown out of employment and are now destitute; the scarcity of food has become an acute problem, bringing into existence large numbers of people of the lowest classes actually hungry. General Obregon has issued statements inviting the suffering to "blame the selfish foreigners" for their present condition and giving notice that he would not use his troops to stop them if they should undertake to seize from the rich the necessities of life.

How soon a Villa or Zapata force can occupy Mexico City after its abandonment by the Carranza forces is a matter of uncertainty here. It is believed Zapata is in a position to take the capital more quickly than is Villa. The Constitutionalists assert that when Obregon leaves it will be to move forth against the Villa and Zapata forces so that occupation of the city by either one of these forces may be delayed indefinitely.

Monterey Taken by Carranzaists.

El Paso, Tex., March 9.—Monterey fell into the hands of the attacking Carranza army, according to advices at the Carranza consulate in El Paso. General Pablo Gonzales, who commanded the victorious army, is declared to have sent 200 troops to Monclova to assist General Maclova Herrera, operating in that district.

Carranza forces are getting close to Juarez and doing much mischief in the rear of General Villa. Confirmation is had of the Carranza report of the cutting of the railroad between Chihuahua and Torreon last Friday by Carranzaists and today came the news of the cutting of the railroad south of Juarez only eighty-six miles. This was done Sunday when a Carranza band captured a freight train loaded with provisions and some military equipment consisting of saddles and clothing.

The New Drug Law And Its Provisions.

Druggist R S. McKinney, of Taneytown, has furnished the following article explanatory of the new Federal Drug Law, which went into effect on March 1. As its operations will be far-reaching, and will affect a great many, in one way or another, we are glad to give it publicity, and suggest that all who are interested read it carefully. Mr. McKinney says:

"The abuse of certain drugs and the large increase of "dope fiends" in recent years have been matters of great concern in medical and pharmaceutical circles, as well as to criminologists. Numerous laws have been passed to abate the evil, but with little success. The latest and most far-reaching thing that has been done, is the passage by Congress of what is known as the Harrison Anti-Narcotic law. Being a Federal law, it applies alike to all parts of the United States.

"It places the sale of narcotic drugs, opium and all its preparations, and cocaine in all forms, under the direct control of the Internal Revenue Department, the same as liquor and tobacco. The law affects all who sell, dispense, give away or in any way handle these drugs. It includes doctors, druggists, dentists and veterinarians, all of whom must pay a special tax to the Revenue Collector, of one dollar per year.

"All orders for narcotic drugs must be in duplicate on blanks sold by the collector, one copy to be preserved by the purchaser, and the other by the seller, for two years and always subject to examination by the collector.

"The only other way these drugs may be furnished is by a physican's prescription, and that only upon the original which can not be refilled. The only exception being preparations which contain opium, but which can be used for external purposes only, or such preparations as contain not over two grains of opium in each ounce.

"The law is very stringent and the penalties for violation is a fine not exceeding $2,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years, or both fine and imprisonment.

"Since the passage of the law the medical and pharmaceutical journals, as well as pharmaceutical manufacturing houses, have given considerable time and space to the explanation of the law, so that dealers and dispensers are reasonably well informed in regard to it. There are some points, however, that affect the public and are of general interest.

"For interest, laudanum, has been a household remedy in many families for ages. After March 1st, no one can go to the drug store and buy a dime's worth of laudanum: the druggist dare not sell it without an official order, or physician's prescription, if it contains more than two grains of opium to the ounce. There are also many home preparations, chiefly diarrhea mixtures, cough syrups, etc., containing laudanum or some form of opium can no longer be put up, although the druggist has been filling the same for years. The sale of all medicines containing excessive narcotics will be stopped.

"In some cases the law may be a hardship, and it will cause inconvenience for dealers, yet if faithfully enforced, no doubt it will eventually prove a great benefit to humanity in curtailing the dope evil, which, though not very prevalent in rural communities, in many places had reached gigantic proportions. Incidentally, the one dollar per year tax paid by all who are affected by the law, will bring in no small amount of revenue."

A New National Hymn.

My country, 'tis of thee,
Land where things used to be
So cheap, we sing,
Land where folks once could buy
Things that are now so high;
To thee, with many a sigh,
Our memories cling.

Some of the people swear
That what they eat and wear
Takes all their wad.
Others avow that they
Now eat but once a day,
And, for that cannot pay,
So help them, God.

Thy people's humble plea
Is that Thou now wilt free
At least one leg.
On flesh of beef and swine,
We do not ask to dine
But give us, Lord divine,
One good, fresh egg.

Our fathers' land, with thee,
Blest home of Liberty,
We choose to stop.
We don't exactly like
So soon to henceward hike,
But we must hit the pike
If things don't drop.—Ex.

LACKING KNOWLEDGE GOD'S PEOPLE PERISH

"My People Are Destroyed For Lack of Knowledge."

Jesus' Teachings Harmonized the Law and the Prophets—Jewish Doctors Had Failed to Teach the Deep Things of the Law—Opposition to Bible Study—Jews Typical of Spiritual Israel—Jewish Age and Harvest Typical of Gospel Age and Harvest.

August 9.—The Photo-Drama of Creation continues to awaken deep interest in Bible study. Its orderly presentation of the world's masterpieces of art illustrative of sacred history is very impressive. Every subject dear to the Christian is depicted.

Pastor Russell preached today from the text, "Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the Key of Knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered."—Luke 11:52.

The word lawyer in New Testament usage, the Pastor began, has a very different meaning from our usage. It applied to those religious teachers of the Jews who made special professions of sanctity of heart and earnest desire to know God's will and to teach it. Today the corresponding class are designated Doctors of Divinity.

It was customary amongst the Jews, the speaker continued, that lessons from the Law and the Prophets should be read daily in the synagogues. The people were thus familiar with the letter of the Scriptures. The majority of them were illiterate; for educational facilities then were not what they are now. Consequently only a few claimed to have knowledge of the spiritual part of the Law and Prophets These were chiefly of the literary and wealthy classes. To these the common people looked for guidance.

The people were hungry for the Message which Jesus brought. The nation would have gone over promptly to Jesus if the Doctors of the Law had given the word. Moreover, Jesus' teachings harmonized the Law and the Prophets, over which the Scribes and Pharisees and the Sadducees long had disputed. Had these Doctors of the Law been as hungry for Truth as were the people, undoubtedly their differences of interpretation of Scripture would have speedily disappeared in the light then shining upon the Bible through the Holy Spirit, Jesus and His Apostles being Jehovah's mouthpieces.

The Pastor then drew a parallel between the Jewish Age and its Harvest and the Gospel Age and its Harvest Now, as then, God's people are perishing for lack of knowledge. Now, as then, the Doctors of Divinity will not use the Key of Knowledge themselves; and have buried it from the people under a mass of forms and ceremonies.

But Is Knowledge Necessary?

It was then shown that in our Lord's day the Jewish Doctors of Divinity contented themselves with telling the people what to do and what not to do, but did not help them to understand the deep meaning of the Law and the Prophets. So it is today, the speaker declared; a minister stands as a representative and mouthpiece of the Church creed, which in roundabout terms declares that whoever does not live a saintly life will suffer an eternity of torment. Is not this a grievous burden to put upon any conscientious soul? he asked. Has it not caused untellable anguish to many of God's true people? Has it not driven from God and the Bible thousands of the most intelligent minds in the world?

As the Jewish Doctors of Divinity carried no such burdens, neither do Christendom's Doctors of Divinity. In private they acknowledge that they carry no such burdens. In public they give the inference that they do—not so much by positive terms as by implication, tone, inflection of the voice and by the fact that they represent creeds which so teach. These influential teachers are not to be excused because of the claim that in their official capacity they lose their personal responsibility and shift it upon those who made the creeds and those who adopted them. The people no longer trust the creeds. They realize that a greater light shines today than when those creeds were formulated.

The people trust the Bible, the Pastor declared. They understand our modern Scribes and Pharisees to give assurance that the creeds of Christendom properly represent the teachings of Scripture. The creedal chains would become ropes of sand if the prominent Doctors of Divinity would publicly renounce the creeds, as nearly all of them do in private conversation.

Systematic Key-Hiding.

Next it was pointed out that our modern Scribes and Pharisees are proving themselves to be the antitypes of those addressed by Jesus. Taking away the Key of Knowledge, they urge the people not to bother their heads about doctrines, but to leave these subjects to the clergy. Bible study has degenerated into a study of geography, customs, etc., rather than an effort to understand the phophecies or the interpretation of them given by Jesus and His Apostles.

Little Problems of Married Life

By William George Jordan

[Copyright, 1910, by Fleming H. Revell company.]

VIII.—Little Compromises That Make For Happiness.

THIS life of ours is a constant series of compromises, of concessions, of surrenders of what we hold dearest and acceptances of what seems second best.

It is compromise, sacrifice, paying tribute, placating power, making terms with the inevitable—compromise with some one, something, some system. Sometimes it is involuntary, sometimes under protest, with the same variety of cheerfulness we manifest when we surrender our watch to a highwayman. Some of these compromises are unjust, unwise, cowardly; some are necessary.

There is one place where the spirit of compromise has only its beautiful side—that is, the home. In the home, where we can turn a key and lock our world in and the smaller world out, compromise reaches its highest dignity. It is love manifesting itself in kindness, thoughtfulness, tenderness, forbearance and self surrender. Love makes such compromise an instinct of the soul. It is as inseparable from real love as perfume is from the rose that exhales it. Compromise in its true sense is settling differences by mutual concessions. To be real it must ever be mutual. If the spirit of compromise be ever on the part of the husband only or the wife only it is unjust. It then means absolute selfishness on the part of one, stimulated and intensified by the unselfishness of the other. It makes a Dead sea of love wherein the waters of affection flow without issuance—constant assessments with no dividends.

If marriage meant the wedding of a saint and an angel there would be no problems to solve, no perfection to attain, no progress to make. This may be why there are no marriages in heaven.

On earth, except in the pages of fiction, it is different. Husband and wife are usually strongly human. No matter how lovingly united or how sweet their accord, they never have the same temperaments, tendencies and tastes. Their needs are different, their manner of looking at things is not identical, and in varying ways their individualities assert themselves. Concession is merely a buffer or spring in the home machinery. It eases the jolts, lessens the friction, distributes the strain, reduces the wear and tear, prevents each part from injuring itself or another. Concession in the home is the fine diplomacy of the heart. It is delicate self adjustment to the individuality of another. It is self sacrifice in trifles without sacrifice of principles.

A man who before marriage used to write his initials fourteen times on an evening dance card may, after attaining the dignity of husbandhood, claim he is too tired to go into society, too wearied to go to entertainments or to make calls, though his wife may still desire to see her old friends and to keep alive some of the wires connecting the home with the outside world.

Here is an opportunity for a compromise, for him to realize that the pleasures of both are to be considered, that a graceful surrender occasionally to her desire is but equity. If he does it under visible protest, with the disguised cheerfulness of one going to the dentist's, he has killed the merit of his compromise.

If she feels that during the whole evening away from home he is suffering the orthodox after death fate of the wicked he has spoiled it all, wrecked the pleasure of both. He should make her radiant in the thought that he has been glad to do it if it gave her a little change and extra happiness. His deference to her wishes will stimulate in her a desire to reciprocate, to make some sweet little sacrifice for him and never let him know how much it may cost her.

At any critical moment if both express at the same time a desire to defer to the other's taste the result is foreordained for happiness. This makes matrimony not merely union, but unison and unity. It makes it a duet rather than two solos.

Matrimony is not a game of chess where one must be victor. It more resembles true conversation, where the pleasure arises from the united contributions. In the choice of a home, in the matter of furnishing, in the question of servants, in the management of the household, occur daily little problems that seem to solve themselves in the spirit of compromise, of quietly talking matters over, of gentle conference of two, working to the attainment of a common aim and a single ideal. These, after all, are only questions of taste and of judgment Often more subtle and vital are those problems that relate to temperament.

Sometimes a word of impatience may bring its echoing reply in the same spirit to the lips of the other, but a second's firmness, just a momentary self control, an instant's translation of the thought into another key of sweetness and sympathy, and the desecrating discord has been passed in safety. Sometimes, too, a silence of gentle reproof may be oil of compromise on the troubled waters.

Most of the surrenders in married life are in trifles where it really makes no difference which surrenders. The great questions, the large problems, usually unfold all their phases under the sunshine of conference and the issue is the dual wisdom in a single verdict which is unanimous. If the matter be vital and the jury of two cannot agree on a verdict, then it seems part of wisdom of compromise for the one who is the abler judge of what is proper and fitting in the special instance to decide the momentous question with the force of a final vote.

There are occasionally topics of conversation upon which the two cannot agree, where the husband or the wife feels the rightness or wrongness of a certain subject with an intensity that seems to brook no opposition. It may be as far outside of the field of logic as the most distant star is beyond the solar system—then what is the use of trying to put new life into a dead issue by discussion?

When the signs "thin ice" are conspicuous, it really might seem like prudence to confine the conversational skating nearer to the shore line. Argument in general is dangerous, and often a graceful dropping of the subject is a kindly admission that there may be two sides to the question.

Do you not think we often expect too much of those who are dear to us and that this very exaggeration may often render us unjust? The optimistic effort to make the best of things, to look as closely as possible on the sunny side of life and its problems, to keep away from needless worry and useless regret, will do much toward lubricating the wheels of the domestic regime. It is a talent worthy of cultivation in the home—the special ability not to see certain little inharmonies that may adjust themselves if they are unnoted.

The spirit of compromise does not demand a continuous performance in the way of self surrender and self sacrifice. It does not require ceasing to be a voice and becoming an echo. It does not imply or justify any loss of individuality. It means simply the instinctive recognition of the best way out of a difficulty, the quickest tacking to avoid a collision, the kindly view of tolerance in the presence of the weakness and errors of another.

There are men who take no more genuine interest in their home beyond paying the bills than if they were merely occasional guests. They seem to regard home as a mere dormitory and a dining room. They often wonder in a vague way why their marriage is not successful. If it were a success it would be a miracle.

There are wives who spend most of their days outside the home walls, devoting their golden hours of possibility to dress, visits, theaters, gossip, idleness, frivolity and amusement. The house that they might convert into a shrine of love and peace and happiness is delegated to the care of servants. Their children are practically orphaned under the trusteeship of nurses. These women are losing the realities of life in chasing shadows. They are mere lodgers in their own homes. They are too much interested in the side lines of life to spend earnest thought on making the real business, marriage, a success. They are often the ones who, in bursts of feminine confidence, bemoan the failure of their married life and display their robes of martyrdom.

Nature meant husband and wife to supplement each other, to be stronger because of their union, differing in their qualities, in their powers and possibilities, but harmonized and uniting for the best solution of their life problems. The husband can find no help in the counsel of his wife in an emergency if he has stifled her power of individual thinking or permitted it to become dulled and deadened through disuse.

And the tastes and pleasures which were her resources in the years before she met him need not be renounced merely because they fail to appeal to him. The books she loves to read, the picture which for her holds a beautiful meaning—such things may fail to touch him, but that is no reason that her joy in them should be spoiled. If he finds no pleasure in music, this in itself is no reason why she should shut this avenue of inspiration from her life if it carries with it any heartening message to her soul. If either attempts to rule the other it will be found but a petty victory, an empty triumph.

The lasting goal of each must be its love raising each to the highest power of individuality, with no thought of competition, no desire of superiority, so that they move, hand in hand, toward a common goal, the good of each being ever the joy of both. In this spirit of true respect for individuality they will find that most of their problems will be solved and made clear and luminant under the glowing sunshine of their trustful confidence, conference and comradeship.

BREEDING DAIRY COWS IRREGULARLY

There exist two dangers of allowing a milk cow to remain open for an indefinite period, writes a correspondent of the Rural New Yorker. In the first place she is less apt to conceive when mated, and in the second place she is apt to go dry for a long period after the mating is finally made in case she does settle. It is customary in large dairies, where the calves are not an important item of value, to permit the cows to freshen once in fifteen or sixteen months.

Ordinarily, however, for dairy farm practices it is much more desirable to mate them so that they will freshen

Lindenwood Hope, the Holstein-Friesian cow herewith shown, is an animal of surpassing merit. She produced when four and one-half years old in seven days 30.61 pounds of butter, in thirty days 125.7 pounds of butter and in 365 days 1,161.31 pounds. Her milk yield for the year was 25,901.6 pounds, testing 4.5 per cent of fat. Her butter record is the world's greatest for her class. During the test she carried a calf for seven months of the year, and hers is the best record ever made under like conditions. Lindenwood Hope is owned by G. W. Rising, Fayette, O.

once each year. This practice stimulates the milk flow, and unless a cow is particularly a persistent milker she is less apt to give as much milk if irregularly bred and not permitted to freshen at frequent intervals. The animal will keep in good condition physically if not bred. In fact, she is very apt to put on an excessive amount of flesh, and this is one of the reasons why she is less apt to conceive when mated.

Instances are frequent where cows have been used for family purposes and not bred for intervals of two years or more, but it is the exception rather than the rule to have such animals give milk enough to pay adequately for the care involved in their maintenance. If desired to carry a cow over from spring freshening to fall freshening or if necessary to avoid calving during fly time the practice is justified.

SILAGE FOR HORSES.

Handled With Care It Makes an Excellent Winter Feed.

The value of silage for horses is greatest as a means to carry them through the winter season cheaply or to supplement pasture during drought. To cheapen the ration of brood mares in winter no feed has more value than good corn silage. If grain goes into the silo with the stover no additional grain is needed for brood mares, hay being the only supplemental feed necessary. If there is little grain on the corn the silage should be supplemented with one pound of old process linseed oil meal or cottonseed meal daily per thousand pounds live weight, sprinkled over the silage.

Horses to be wintered on a silage and hay ration should be started on about five pounds of silage daily per thousand pounds live weight, the grain and hay ration being gradually decreased as the silage is increased until the ration is twenty pounds silage and ten pounds of hay daily per thousand pounds live weight. It will require about a month to reach the full feed of silage, but the period may be decreased somewhat, depending on the judgment and skill of the feeder.

Mares fed in this manner will be in splendid condition for foaling, and, so far as the writer's experience goes, the foals will be fully as vigorous, with just as much size and bone, as if the mares were fed the conventional grain and hay ration.—U. S. Department of Agriculture Bulletin.

Weed Seeds In Silage Killed.

That the seeds of the common field weeds when siloed with corn, peas or any other forage used as silage will not retain sufficient vitality to germinate in the spring when returned to the land mixed with manure is the belief of experiment station men. While there are not experiments on record with regard to the combined chemical action of silage and manure on the germination of seeds, it is quite likely that there is little danger of seeding valuable fields with noxious weeds in this manner.—Kansas Farmer.

Watch Straw Fed Horses.

Horses' mouths should be examined regularly once a week when feeding on wheat straw. The beards from the grain ball up in the horse's mouth and penetrate the gums, sometimes causing the animal to have a very sore mouth, and it refuses to eat. The hard clots are easily removed. A change of feed occasionally for a day helps to keep the horses' mouths free from cankers.

Rich Strippings.

When the farmer understands that the last strippings of a dairy cow are over 500 per cent richer in cream than the first few pulls he may be a little more thorough in his work during the milking hour.

SHORT RUN.

We've had enough of wintry weather,
Of frosts that bite, and winds that blow;
The flakes that float as fluffy as a feather,
The slush below!

We weary of the wind's wild woe,
The rains so rude, the roads so rough!
We like a little blustering breeze—but, oh,
We've had enough!

Kodaking seems to be the order of the day, and quite a number of our young folks are getting a very nice collection of "snap shots." Developing and printing is very interesting work, and helps to pass the time away these long evenings.

The sugar season is almost here again and that "spells" a good time for the young folks. Mr. J. H. Wilson has his camp partly opened up and is ready and waiting for the thaw.

Mr. Milo Wilson has returned from College Park and has again taken up the role of farmer.

This little snow gives us a rather bad impression of some of the dogs in this district. Better keep your dog fastened up nights, or he might come up missing.

Mr. Jesse White has finished sawing timber at this place and is moving the mill to his farm near Bethlehem.

Mr. Jonas Harvey of Armstead, spent the week end visiting his brother Alex at Steiding.

Daniel Wilson lost his cap a few days ago, and after a long search the missing article was found in the swill bucket. Funny where the women puts things when they're cleaning up, isn't it?

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Harvey spent Sunday at the Wilson Homestead farm.

Mr. J. H. Wilson who has been enjoying poor health most all winter, complains of feeling better at this writing.

Mr. J. C. Myers of Eagle Rock, spent a very pleasant Sunday at the home of J. H. Wilson.

A jolly crowd from the Glade, namely Mrs. Joe Harvey and daughters Miss Anna and Mrs. Casteel, Miss Lorena D Witt and Messrs. George Kimmell, and Dewey Harvey spent Sunday at J. H. Wilson's.

Mr. Cyrus Harvey was calling on his aunt, Mrs. S. E. Harvey Friday and Sunday evenings.

The True Sign of Spring.

Walt Mason says: Most harbingers of Spring are fakes; the man depending on them wakes to find they fooled him and he sees he has the grip, or some disease, He sees some harbingers on deck, and says, "The Winter's gone, by heck: a soft wind from the south-lands blows, and I shall change my underclothes, and put my overcoat in soak, and dance and sing and laugh and joke." And then a blizzard comes along, and shows him where he got in wrong. Oh, don't assume that Spring is here, when jimcrow harbingers appear; but wait until the clucking hen is fussing round the yard again, intent on hatching sundry chicks into this world of politics. And don't be fooled by pullets young, which cluck around ere Spring is sprung; they're too impatient in the cause; the fire of youth is in their claws. But wait serenly till you've heard the clucking of the wise old bird, which has outlived the zeal of youth, and long since cut her wisdom tooth. When she gets busy, when she begs for nest of straw and fourteen eggs, then, gentle reader, you may shed your underwear of flannel red; for when the old hen plays her game, we realize that Spring has came.

Plant Every Acre.

Farmers of Garrett county, this is the year to plant big crops. Plant more corn, more oats, more spring wheat than you intended.

Stretch the productive power of your land to the utmost this year. Do not let a single acre go to waste. Use every foot of land that you have, to the very best advantage.

The whole world is looking to you this year. Europe is depending on the United States. The yield of grain in the countries at war will be greatly reduced. We must make up the deficit.

Prices will be good. It will be impossible for America to raise enough to depress the markets.

Not only do the farmers have a great business opportunity this year, but a great moral obligation.

Some of our abundance will be required for charity:

Let us plan to meet this demand, too.

THURSDAY MARCH 11, 1915.

CONGRESS has disappeared, but Bryan still survives.

IN these March days it is difficult to determine whether to get the lawn mower in shape or the snow shovel.

CONGRESS voted medals to the A. B. C. mediators. We don't suppose there is any use in inquiring what for.

IT will be hard to fill the holes left in the United States Senate by the retirement of Burton and Root.

A PRESIDENT'S isn't such a snap after all. Think of having $25,000 a year for traveling expenses and not being sure whether you can go to the San Francisco Exposition.

THERE is something useful in everything; for instance, have you noticed what good use the Democratic brethren are making of the European war? Comical isn't it?

"GONE to lunch. Will be back in two years," was a conspicuous sign hung on the door of the office of Andrew J. Gallaghan, secretary to the corporation counsel of Chicago.

COPPER ore valued at $230,202 was invoiced at the American consulate at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, for the United States during last year, compared with $77,000 for 1913.

A CENTENARIAN ascribes her long life to the fact that she eats anything she likes at any time she wants. But in the present high cost of living this may not always be ready to hand.

MORE than a million persons have up-to-date visited the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco. Evidently, people are thinking of something else besides the war to account for an interest like this.

PRESIDENT Wilson after calling it a "great Congress" rather indefinitely added. "Business has now a time of calm and thoughtful adjustment." Just what business is saying wouldn't look well in print.

OAKLAND, Grantsville, Kitzmiller and Friedsville should have their public school term increased to nine months. Local pride should demand this, laying aside the incalcuable value to the children of their community.

WITH all its extravagance the late Congress neglected to appropriate funds for the expenses of the Trade Commission, and it is now wandering around Washington seeking quarters to organize without being able, so far, to find any vacant rooms at the disposal of the government.

THE Repblican would like to see some movement put on foot to paint the exterior of the High school building. The building in its present condition is certainly not prepossessing. It should be made an attractive place in keeping with the church edifices of the town.

THE News, Kanawha, W. Va., says: "Take a plunge into the good old Republican swimming hole, boys, the water is fine! Lather your body with protection soap, rub yourself down with a prosperity towel, being careful to remove all of the old and dirty political scruff, and then you'll feel like a new man. Get in readiness at once to take a hand in the big political game next year!

WITH this issue of the Democrat Mr. H. A. Rasche, recently the accomodating B. & O. R. R. agent at Oakland, becomes associated with Editor Deffinbaugh as editor manager and foreman of the Democrat printery. Mr. Rasche is a printer and a popular young man of Oakland and doubtless will add largely to the popularity of the Democrat as the organ of the Democratic party of Garrett county.

EVERY friend of our Maryland school system ought to study the three official bulletins of the U. S. Bureau of Education, No. 38, series of 1913 ("Economy of Time in Education"), price 10 cents, No. 32, series of 1913 ("An Educational Survey of Montgomery county") free, and No. 30, series of 1914, on the subject of consolidation of rural schools, free. Apply to the "Hon. Commissioner of Education, Washington, D C.," for free copies; and to the "Superintendent of Documents, Government, Printing Office Washington, D. C.," for a copy of No. 38 of 1913.

PRESIDENT WILSON has definitely abandoned his trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition this month.

The international situation and Mexican developments are given as the reason. It is understood, however, that the President rather welcomed the interference. He has resented the charge that he intended using the fair as an excuse for a "swing around the circle" that would launch his campaign for reelection. His political advisers urged this, but other friends told him a cross-country trip, with 30 or more speeches, would be unwise at present. Their position was that time should be given for business to adjust itself to the new legislation. They won out over the politicians.

BLAMING IT ON WILSON

With a "morning after" contemplation of the accomplishments and blunders the Sixty-third Congress has put in the records, many of the Democratic members of that bady are shifting the blame for its extravagances on the President. They charge that if the President had taken heed of Treasury conditions at the beginning of his administration and cautioned Congress accordingly, expenditures might have been kept below those authorized in the last Congress, controlled by the Republicans.

It is quite true that President Wilson is responsible for the blunders of the Democracy for he dominated both branches of Congress since its first meeting in 1913 up to the beginning of the final session last December. But there are greater faults to be charged up against him than the excessive appropriations. If the tariff had not been tampered with in the way he ordered it to be mangled in the name of "revision," the country might have forgiven the extravagant performances of the party. The results of that tariff legislation is one of the chief crimes to be charged up against the administration. It was more responsble for the "war tax" imposed on the people than the immoderate dips made into the public funds. Post mortems by the Democracy, however, will be fruitless in fixing the responsibility upon the President. He stood for the party, and now the party will have to stand for him.

If the late President-run Congress has achieved anything in the way of beneficial legislation or service to the country it remains to be proved. The only measure that has been tested, the Underwood bill, has not only failed ignominiously, but spread a trail of distress that has reached to the uttermost parts of the country. If the party had committed no other blunder its false economic policy has been enough to seal its doom in 1916.

RIDER THAT DIDN'T RIDE.

The unbusinesslike Postoffice Department took a sly way of endeavoring to crawl out of the large deficiency hole it placed itself in, which not only resulted in failure but caused the postoffice appropriation bill itself to fail of passage. The more the crude methods of the late Congress are studied the more reprehensible they appear. The Postoffice Department undertook, ill-advisedly, to broaden the scope of the parcel post system by increasing the limit of packages to be transmitted to fifty pounds, which practically transformed the railway mail service into a freight carrying service. Naturally railroads required more pay for an increased service, and they were entitled to it.

Representative Moon, at the instigation of the head of the Postoffice Department, put a rider on the postoffice appropriation bill, which was confiscatory of the mail pay of the railroads. If this rider had prevailed it would have made the Postmaster General the sole dictator of what the railroads should be paid for mail transportation, and practically have forced them to carry the parcel post packages without any additional compensation.

The Senate intervened to prevent this rank injustice, and the obstinate refusal of Representative Moon to withdraw the rider caused the entire appropriation bill to fail. This left the Postoffice Department without any funds whatever for the conduct of its business, and necessitated the eleventh hour adoption of an emergency resolution continuing the old appropriations until the meeting of the next Congress. Otherwise an extra session would have been obvious.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. DELIA TOTTEN.

Mrs. Delia Totten was born in Preston county, W. Va., more than eighty years ago. She was the daughter of Thomas Brown, one of the most prominent citizens of Preston county and of this part of the country. He was prominent in political life being a lawyer and his home was the stopping place of many of the notable men of the day as they passed to and from the capital. Washington was at one time a guest of the old homestead. She was connected with some of the prominent families of Morgantown. Mrs. Totten's girlhood was thus spent in these surroundings and thus she came in contact with the best people of the day. At an early day she became a christian and identified herself with the Presbyterian church of Kingwood, W. Va. After her marriage to Wm. P. Totten, which occurred August 26, 1863 she transferred her membership to Oakland and became one of the charter members of the church. Mr. Totten being an Elder and the superintendent of the Sunday school for years, she became closely identified with the interests of the school and church. She was for a long time a teacher. She was interested in every department of the church and was faithful in her duties, until the increasing infirmities of age interrupted her work. For about 26 years she has been a widow, her husband, one of the prominent business men of the town, having passed away. Never very rugged, she nevertheless managed to be active in her sphere and was ever ready to help and sympathize with those in trouble. Her last illness was brief, yet it was borne with fortitude and christian resignation. She felt it was her last sickness, but met the end with an unfaltering trust in her Saviour, and expressed herself as ready to depart and be with Christ. All was well. On Monday morning her remains were carried to the church she loved and appropriate services conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. C. Ely D. D., assisted by her old time friend Rev. J. M. Davis, were held. The house was well filled with her friends who had gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to her memory. Her body was laid beside that of her husband in the little cemetery on the hilltop on their old homestead.

Among the friends from a distance were her brother Mr. John Brown of Kingwood, Mrs. Emory and Miss Moreland of Morgantown, and Miss Leary of Fairmont. All that was possible was done to make her comfortable in her last illness, but her time had come. She answered the call and went over the river to enjoy the rest of the Saints of God. She came to her grave like a shock of corn cometh in his season and was gathered into the garner of heaven.

"She went up from the wilderness leaning on her beloved
Into the joys of the ransomed
Into the light of his love
Into the fadeless beauty, of mansions prepared above.
Into the sinless perfection that her soul so longed for here,
Into the blessed reunion,
The communion of saints most dear."

MRS. JANE SMOUSE

Mrs. Jane Smouse, widow of the late John Smouse of Oakland, died at Pittsburgh, Pa., on Friday, March 5, 1915, after an illness of long duration. Mrs. Smouse is survived by her son George, and daughter, Mrs. D. G. Scott, both of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Smouse is remembered by many of the older residents of Oakland. She removed from here to Pittsburgh nearly a quarter of a century ago.

A. B. MURRAY

Mr. A. B. Murray died at the Home Sanitorium Tuesday morning at 2:30 o'clock from dropsy. The remains were taken charge of by his brother, Campbell Murray and taken to Reynoldsville, the boyhood home of the deceased, for interment. The deceased was 62 years old. He had resided here and in this vicinity for 17 years, having driven here with his brother Campbell from home. He is survived by two sisters and five brothers.

The body of Mrs. Elizabeth Knecht, brought to Frostburg, was one of the first interred in the new St. Michael's cemetery. She died on Keyser's Ridge, Garrett county, Thursday, March 5, 1881, aged 76 years.—Miners Journal, Frostburg, Md.

Some mixture: The same oldtime, non-make good Democratic administration: The same old practice that in order to keep alive man is compelled to give his note on some bank, but worst of all we are now compelled to use what little saliva is left in the performance of licking "war-tax stamps" in time of peace and place them on not-knowing-how-to-pay notes. It is Up To Parents To See That Boys and Girls Attend Church.

Parents, it is up to you to see that your boys and girls GO TO CHURCH. You are responsible for them and their conduct. If your boy or girl sulks at GOING TO CHURCH, be firm. It is no time for indulgence. Have your child JOIN ONE OF THE CHURCH SOCIETIES. The mind of the young boy or girl is easily influenced for good or evil. The words of the preacher will make an impression. GOING TO CHURCH by the young makes for better men and women. The lessons they learn will stand by them in the battle of life.

Every boy and girl should GO TO CHURCH next Sunday.

They should GO EVERY SUNDAY.

A TRIP TO THE EASTERN SHORE.

Made In March By Members of the Maryland Legislature.

Last March the members of the Legislature of this State visited Cambridge to inspect the State hospital located in that splendid city. Governor Goldsborough had arranged for two of the boats of the Oyster Navy to take the party from Annapolis to Cambridge, they were the steamers Governor R. G. McClair, commanded by Capt. James A. Turner and the other by Capt. Edward M. Dixon. The writer was invited to accompany them to Cambridge.

We steamed down the Severn river to the Chesapeake bay, then in the bay 22 miles and then 15 miles up the Choptank river. Although the morning was rather chilly, I sat on the deck of the steamer and took in the scenery enroute. It was certainly a splendid ride and a very delightful idea of a part of the Eastern shore formed by what we saw.

Annapolis was left at 10 a. m., and at 2 p. m., Cambridge, one of the most charming, well built, cleanest and inviting cities of the State was reached. Here a number of automobiles, in charge of the city committee of arrangements met the excursionists and took us a ride over the city and out one of the State roads, beyond the site of the Esatern Shore State Hospital for the Insane, then in process of building. This road was as level as a floor, and was 45 miles in length, and passed through a well farmed country, with cheerful homes and good buildings.

We were favorably impressed with the attractive and beautiful homes, of modern architecture throughout the city, of the cheerful looking school buildings, of the beautiful church edifices, the substantial looking bank buildings, and the splendid store buildings with their well displayed show windows, showing that the city had wide awake merchants.

Among the delightful looking homes were those of Governor Goldsborough, State Comptroller of the treasury Harrington and Senator Shepherd.

The city has a population of 7,000. The country surrounding it is as level as a prarie. The streets are paved and well kept. Several large canning factories are located here, packing oysters, tomatoes and other vegetables in season, and from all indications a flourishing business was conducted.

After a most enjoyable ride of one hour, we landed at hotel Dixon for a ner. You want to spell dinner in capital letters. It was great, it was complete in every condition; the dining room was attractive; the table bountifully loaded with the good things of life, and served in the very best manner. The dinner was well cooked, well served and was most enjoyably eaten by a lot of hungry men. The several courses were a credit to the hotel management and would have been a credit to Baltimore's best hotels. Oysters, fresh shad, taken ten right from the home waters, turkey, prime roast of beef, and in short everything that man could ask for, after waiting eight hours for dinner and riding by boat and automobile over half a hundred miles. Before eating dinner the company united in singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and they sang it, my, but it did make one feel good all over. Then followed the dinner, wit and humor and good fellowship. After dinner came a period of speech making. Then a visit to the United Charities Hospital of Dorchester county. It was just what one would expect in a community like Cambridge, with a wide awake citizenship. Everything was in perfect harmony with the surroundings. The best that money and brains could produce.

The hospital grounds were well kept, the interior of the building was clean, cheerful, inviting and well kept. The nurses were good natured, good looking and pleasant, made you feel, if you were to be sick or injured, you would like to be a patient here.

From the large verandas a most delightful view of the river is enjoyed, for miles and miles a charming outlook is before you. The physicians in charge are well qualified for their duties. We talked with several persons who had been inmates of the hospital and all spoke in the highest terms of its work.

Mrs. Dupont of Delaware was having a three story building completed, as an annex to the hospital for the use of women. A splendid gift for the benefit of womanhood.

The time has come for our departure, a well and profitably spent day is near its close, a day we shall long remember with gladness.

We must not forget to speak of the efforts of Senator Shepherd to make this day so successful and enjoyable. A most courteous gentleman, a useful member of the Senate, and a public spirited citizen, the kind of a man needed in every community to make things move.

Home is reached about 9 p. m.

John J. Livengood of Salisbury, a veteran of the Civil War and famous coon hunter, who is now in his 79th year, is still making the anvil ring in his blacksmith shop and shoeing horses as of yore. Since the recent retirement of his brother, Jeremiah, at the age of 80, John J. Livengood is probably the oldest working blacksmith in Somerset county. George Shockey, the noted horseman of Greenville township, regards "Uncle Shad" as Mr. Livengood is familiarly called, the most expert horse-shoer in the country. In his younger years no horse was too vicious to be shod by "Uncle Shad," but he now confesses he would rather leave the bad ones to the young fellows. Mr. Livengood is well known in this vicinity and has a host of warm friends hereabouts.

Miss Emma Buckholder spent Sunday afternoon with friends at Mountain Lake Park. She was accompained by Milton Swartzentruber.

MASON

We are experiencing some winter again as a change from the balmy days of the past month.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Martin are at present staying with Mr. Martin's mother. We are greatly pleased to have them in our burg.

Mr. D. S. Davis, of Pleasant Valley, was here last week.

We are sorry to lose our teacher, Miss Georgia Davis, who is leaving her school here to enter school in Salem, W. Va., where she expects to take music. Miss Marguerite Hart has taken up the work which we have no reason to expect to be anything but successful.

Some of our young folks, we are proud to say, have been attending Sunday school at Shadydell.

On last Wednesday evening, at Mason School, quite a large crowd enjoyed listening to a debate and a short programme rendered by the school and other interested parties. The question for debate was: "Resolved, That The World is Growing Better," affirmative, Marshall Wolfe, Walter Welch, Hurley Miller, negative, William Aronhalt, Charles Kelley, Harry Stahl. The question was ably handled by both sides, but according to the decision of the judges this old world is not so bad after all for they decided 2-1 in favor of the affirmative.

The "Clippings of Mason Square," by Edgar Kelley, was very interesting as it caused us to "see ourselves as others see us" with no one slighted.

Misses Nettie Ridder and Edythe Kelley who were on the sick list last week, are convalescent.

Mr. and Mrs. Haskell and children visited at Hurley Miller's Friday of last week.

Mr. Ocie Biser, who has been employed in Ohio for the past three years, and his bride, have been visiting in Mason.

Lesson XI.—First Quarter, For March 14, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xi—Memory Verses, 12, 13—Golden Text, Prov. xvi, 32—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After the Lord had brought to Samuel the man whom He had chosen as king for Israel and Samuel had anointed him he returned to his home, having met on his way all whom Samuel said he would meet, for all came to pass just as Samuel said. The Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he became a changed man (chapter x, 6-10). All this was a private matter between the Lord and Samuel and Saul, for when Saul reached home he only told that Samuel had assured him that the asses had been found, but he said nothing of the kingdom. Then Saul called the people to Mizpeh, reminded them of the Lord's deliverance from Egypt and all enemies and of their rejection of God in demanding a king and then proceeded to have them elect a king with God's permission. It was, no doubt, done by lot, as the land was divided, for "the lot is cast into the lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord" (Num. xxvi, 55, 56; Prov. xvi, 33). First the tribe was found and then the family and then the man (chapter x, 20, 21; compare Josh. vii, 16-18), and thus they were guided to the man whom He had already chosen and anointed. Although elected, he could not for a time be found, so they inquired of the Lord, and He told them where to find him. Whether it be a person or a thing that cannot be found, He that is perfect in knowledge knows where to find the lost (Job xxxvi, 4).

When the people looked upon the man whom God had chosen they could not refrain from shouting, "God save the king!" or, as in the margin, "Let the king live!" (x, 23-25.) The band of men whose hearts God had touched were a comfort to him, so that he was able to seem as a deaf man to his enemies (x, 26, 27). Our lesson chapter shows how Saul by the Spirit of the Lord began to deliver Israel and to obtain the confidence of the people. I suppose there is scarcely a day in the life of any child of God when there is not an occasion to say, "Now, the serpent" (Gen. iii, 1), for he is ever going about to make trouble. Nahash, whose name signifies "serpent," was moved by the devil, whose he was and whom he served, to seek to bring reproach upon Israel (verses 1-3). Saul heard of the distress of Jabesh Gilead and in a very striking way summoned the people to gather unto him and Samuel, and 330,000 gathered, and word was sent to the distressed that they would have help by the morrow. That night or in the early morning (verse 11) Saul came suddenly upon the Ammonites and so completely routed them that two of them were not left together (verses 4-11).

The morning deliverances of the Bible are full of interest and are all suggestive of the morning that is coming, when the Lord shall finally and forever deliver Israel (Ps. xlvi, 5, margin). Compare Ps. xlix, 14, and see Ex. xiv, 24, 27. Think also of Dan. vi, 19-23, and of the deliverance that came to the disciples in the morning watch (Mark vi, 48). But, while believers may well rejoice in the glorious morning that is coming and in Him who is to us the Morning Star (II Sam. xxiii, 5; Rev. xxii, 16), it is also written that there will be no morning for such as do not believe God (Isa. viii, 20; margin and revised version). When the people saw the great deliverance wrought by Saul they asked to have Saul's enemies put to death, but Saul would not listen to it, saying, "There shall not a man be put to death this day, for today the Lord hath wrought salvation in Israel" (verses 12, 13). It was the same power that wrought for Israel at the Red sea (Ex. xiv, 13, 30) and on so many occasions in all their history, and their greatest deliverance is yet to come (Zech. xiv, 3, 9). Samuel then gathered the people to Gilgal, and there they made Saul king before the Lord, offered sacrifices, and all Israel rejoiced greatly (verses 14, 15). Thus far all seemed to be going well, but when man has his way there is soon failure, for "verily, every man at his best state (apart from God) is altogether vanity" (Ps. xxxix, 5).

Chapter xii tells how Samuel rehearsed the history of the nation from their coming out of Egypt, the Lord's dealings with them under Moses and Aaron and how many a time He delivered them in the days of the judges. He also asked them to testify as to whether during all the time that he had judged them he had ever taken anything from them or defrauded any one or taken a bribe to blind his eyes, but they called God to witness that they could find no fault in him in any of these matters (xii, 1-5). To show them that he was right before the Lord as well as in their eyes and that they had done wrong in asking for a king when the Lord Himself was their King he asked the Lord to send thunder and rain that day, and He did so. The people seemed to see their sin and asked Samuel to pray for them (xii, 6-19). Samuel assured them that, though they had done this great wrong, yet if they would truly turn to the Lord and fear Him and serve Him in truth with all their heart He would for His great name's sake forgive them and not forsake them and he (Samuel) would not cease to pray for them.

Attendance at Church of Representative Men More Powerful Than Sermons

MEN should GO TO CHURCH.

What is the matter with our men? They are quick to proclaim their faith in God. They will strongly resent the intimation that they are nonbelievers. Yet when they are asked why they don't attend church they are ever ready with an excuse. If the leading men in this community, one and all, would start right now to attend church regularly their example would be all powerful. Their continued attendance would be more effective than a dozen sermons.

IT IS NO EXAGGERATION TO SAY THAT 75 PER CENT OF THE REGULAR CHURCHGOERS TODAY ARE WOMEN. A HUSBAND WILL TAKE PRIDE IN HIS WIFE GOING TO CHURCH. IN FACT, HE WILL ENCOURAGE ALL HER CHURCH ACTIVITIES. IT IS RIGHT THAT HE SHOULD. IT IS ALSO RIGHT, AND ONLY JUST, TOO, THAT HE SHOULD BE SEEN IN CHURCH. SURELY THERE IS NOTHING THAT HE NEED FEAR IN THE HOUSE OF WORSHIP. SOME ARE QUICK TO CRITICISE THE PREACHER. IT WILL BE SAID THAT HIS SERMONS ARE DRY. AGAIN IT WILL BE SAID THAT HE IS SENSATIONAL IN HIS METHODS. THE READING OF THE GOSPEL OF THE DAY, THE WORD OF GOD, IS NEVER DRY. NEITHER IS IT SENSATIONAL.

It is true that we live in a rapid fire age. It is true that minutes count. It is true that the calls of business and social activities are pressing. But no man is too busy, none so much in demand but that he can arrange to spend a small part of Sunday in church. There isn't a man who attends church but feels better after the service. CHURCHGOING IS UPLIFTING. It takes our mind off the fleeting things of this world. CHURCHGOING is not far removed from the sublime.

GO TO CHURCH next Sunday!
GO TO CHURCH the following Sunday!
GO TO CHURCH every Sunday!

TO BALTIMORE BY AUTO.

The Trip From Oakland Can Be Made in Ten Hours.

Baltimore to Oakland in ten hours in an auto, over the State road, a delightful ride over and among the mountains with magnificent outlooks, full of inspiration, through picturesque valleys, prosperous towns and by beautiful farms and charming landscape. Take a day off and enjoy the ride and yourself. See enroute Garrett county in its most charming and beautiful dress. Spend a few days in and about Grantsville on the Pike, then on to Accident, a good place to enjoy several days, then to Oakland as headquarters, with side trips to Terra Alta, Aurora, Brookside, Table Rock, Deer Park and Mountain Lake Park. It will be the time of your life, with a bracing atmosphere, sparkling pure water and over splendid roads and drives.

A visit among the mountains and through the rich valleys of Garrett county using Oakland as headquarters, would furnish one a most delightful summer outing. There are many charming country roads back, and among the hills, with enjoyable scenery, beautiful, well kept farms and everything that is pleasing to the eye. Not tiresome long drives, but drives full of interest and pleasure from the beginning to the ending.

The pioneer days of Garrett county are rich in historical facts, but those days have passed away.

The bear, the deer, the wolf are rarely met or killed. In their stead are to be found signs of culture, refinement and industry. The cabin of yesterday is no more, but the home of comfort, convenience and happiness is here. Signs of life are seen everywhere, real life, successful life.

Ye Olde Tyme Syngging Concert.

An old time musical concert and entertainment will be given at the Lutheran church upon a date yet to be fixed, but in the near future. Many old-time songs will be sung, the singers costuming for the various parts.

CIRCUIT COURT WAS IN SESSION TWO DAYS

Adjourned Tuesday Afternoon After Arguments in a Number of Cases.

The non-jury term of court convened Monday at 10 a. m. Judge Robert H. Henderson presiding. The court continued in session until Tuesday afternoon. The docket was gone over, and a number of cases were continued.

The case of Mosser heirs vs Robert Fries, late treasurer, growing out of a tax sale was heard and the Mosser heirs given six months to redeem the land.

The State vs. Samuel Thomas and wife was heard and they were pronounced not guilty of the charge of larceny The court intimated that the wrong parties had been indicted as proven by the evidence.

Judge Henderson's talk to the young men, who were witnesses in the gambling case tried Tuesday afternoon, was appropriate, impressive and pointed. He said, You are on the black list. You could not get a recommendation for any position of trust or honor. He advised them to act that they might get their names off this black list. It is to be hoped that the officials will see that gambling in Oakland is abandoned, especially by those under 21 years of age and that those conducting gambling dens be brought to speedy justice.

The cases against Walter Coddington, constable of Accident district, charged with false arrests under the dog law, was continued until the June term.

The Stats vs. Lawrence; charge, conducting a gamdling room; guilty, fine $25 and costs, about $50.00.

At the close of the business of the court, a touching tribute to Mr. Roy Hammond, deceased, was made.

Dorsey Guard of Guard, was at Addison, Pa., one day last week and purchased two very fine horses from James W. Rush.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS

Weekly Gleanings From The Oakland High School.

Mesdames J. E. Harned, George Legge, George Porter and A. D. Naylor visited us Friday afternoon and heard the Yorkists render a short but entertaining programme.

The parents meeting last Friday night was a great success. Excellent talks were given by Mrs. Bremer and Mrs. Tower and Mr. S. T. Jones. The Glee Club sang and Miss Eleanor Hinebaugh played two piano selections. Closing remarks were made by Supt. F. E. Rathbun. Another parents' meeting has been arranged for the near future and we hope that more parents, interested in the students and the general welfare of the High School, will be present.

Report cards were given out last Thursday and with the exception of a few, all were returned in good condition the day following. The cards are large and rather easily soiled. One of the faculty has offered a reward to the owner of the cleanest card at the close of the year. This, of course, applies to the students of whom the teacher has particular charge.

The Glee Club will sing at the Presbyterian social at the residence of Rev. and Mrs. Ely next Friday night, March 19. The occasion is to be in honor of St. Patrick.

Arrangements are being made to hold a literary contest between the students of our High School and the Preparatory department of the University of West Virginia, at Keyser. The contest will consist of an original oration, a debate and a reading. Particulars will be published later.

Last Friday night our girls team played the Beall High School girls team at Frostburg. The game resulted in the score of 6-16 in favor of the Beall High team. On Saturday night our team played the Eureka team of Frostburg at Mt. Savage. The score for this game was 11-18 in favor of the Eureka team. Both games were extremely interesting and the one at Mt. Savage was pronounced by our team as "rough." But no ill feelings was entertained by any of the teams and our girls returned in fine spirits, ready for another game which will be played in the near future. Playtord Naylor accompanied our team and refereed both games.

Miss Julia Rowan, a commercial senior, was absent several days last week on account of the illness of her mother.

"Friends, we met here in this building (High School) one year ago today, and one year ago today Europe was peaceful and prosperous. But today Europe is engaged in the greatest war the world has ever known, involving nearly three-fourths of the world's population. What will the outcome be? No one knows.

"The cities of Belgium were flourishing in peace and prosperity, but today they are in ruin, and the people are dying of starvation. The cry is for world peace, but instead we have war. What is the cause of it? The nations of Europe have for many years been building large navies and collecting vast armies. Each one claimed to be superior over the other and today they are fighting to see who shall hold supremacy.

"This war will prove the advantage of a strong army and navy, and it will also prove its disadvantages. Europe will soon be where she was forty or fifty years ago, and she will not be able to replace what she has destroyed, which has been destroyed by the will of a few haughty chiefs. It will also have some effect on this country. Things are already high, but after the war they will still be higher, because we will not only have to supply food for our own people, but for the people of Europe. The men will not be there to sow the grain, to use the scythe, and to handle the plow, as thousands are being slaughtered every day."

Position wanted: Wanted, a position as body guard of some fine looking young lady, who is afraid to go home in the dark. Any lady wishing same will please apply to Joe Rathbun, the able bodied joker.

The following students have made not less than 95 per cent in deportment for the sixth month of school: First year: Helen Casteel, Eva Folkenstein, Frances Miller, Mary Drake Naylor, Coyla Barnhouse, Victor Harvey, Edward Scott and Robert Sliger; second year: Mildred Dixon, Lillian Helbig, Pauline Jones, Carol Miller, Beulah Ralston, Winifred Weimer, third year: Clara Bush, Louise Harned, Carrie Thrasher, Mildred Thrasher; fourth year: Dottie Doman, Lulu Friend, Evelyn Helbig, Grace Laffey, Edwana Peddicord, Harold Conneway, Delbert Davis, Harold Dawson, Robert Garrett, Ross Isenberg, Playford Naylor, John Scott and George Queer; post graduate Robert White.

In the Yorkist's wit and humor, prepared by Felix Robinson, was found this item: "Dicks Dawson received a note saying, "please send me a dime's worth of calomel and soda for a man in a capsule."

Mrs. Paul Naylor chaperoned our girls on their recent trip to Frostburg and Mt. Savage.

GENERALS COOK AND KELLY CAPTURED FIFTY YEARS AGO

Hotel In Cumberland Was Headquarters of Staff of 8th Army Corps

On midnight February 21st, 1865—just fifty years ago, Major General Benj. F. Kelly and Major General Geo. Crook, and Col. Thayer Melvin, adjutant of the staff of Generall Kelly, were captured in Cumberland, Md., by Captain Jesse McNeill's Company of Partisan Rangers, C. S. A. In the capture of the officers, some valuable horses were also taken, including the bronco pony of Col. Sam B. Harrison, of Piedmont. The town of Cumberland had at the time of this capture 9,000 men in the garrison, all in winter quarters on the hill in rear of the Rolling Mill grounds, or to the North of Black's Hill. Captain Wahle's Ohio Company of Cavalry was on duty on the New Creek road near the two mile water station, when they were approached by a squad of cavalry when halted replied, was a "squad of Ringgold Cavalry of Pennsylvania Volunteers, returning from a scout without either the countersign or parole." When they crowded up and effected the capture of the outpost—the second outpost was near the Robert Read place and consisted of a small squad of infantrymen. The Whale cavalry was forced to disclose both the countersign and parole, then it was an easy matter to take the town. At the Baltimore street bridge the guard was so badly frightened that he threw his gun into the Will's Creek, and escaped through the Dr. Smith building. General Kelly and Col. Melvin were captured in the Barnum Hotel (Windsor) which was headquarters of the 8th Corps; and General Crook was taken a prisoner to the Revere House then under the management of his father-in-law-to-be, the late John Dailey, and by the way he was captured by his brother in-law, Jim Dailey, and our old friend Johnny B. Fay. The most amusing thing of the capture was a performance was on the 22nd day of Februay at Belvidere Hall for the benefit of the Episcopal church. It consisted of songs, Mrs. Jarley's wax works, and many tableaux given. Mrs. [illegible] Rogers [illegible] the wife of General B. F. Kelley, was on for several songs. The hall notwithstanding the capture of the general officer of the preceding night, was crowded and most of the audience was officers and soldiers. When Miss Mary Clara, a daughter of Col. Robert Bruce, commenced to sing a popular song of those days, like the present song of a "Long Way to Tipperary" entitled "Oft He Kissed Me When He Left Me," which came with the refrain, a soldier in the audience cried out "No Kelly didn't for I'll be dammed if he had time to do it."

Miss Mary Clara almost fainted and could not be induced to complete part of the program.

The late Robert Shriver of the First National Bank had charge of Mrs. Jarley's "Wax Figgers." Capt. Chas. J. Harrison of Somerset, Pa., was in the "Three Jolly Pigeons" and the writer was in the piece from Dickens in the hit of the Yorkshire Schools of Nicholas Nickleby as "Mrs. Squiers."

Going back to the capture, the big guns in the fort boomed out that there was something unusual taking place. Cavalry had been ordered to intercept the raiders, from Winchester, Va., and others from New Creek and Cumberland, started in pursuit but it was all for nothing as the famous generals and Judge Melvin were landed in due time, as the guest of the Confederacy at Libby Prison.

General Kelly has often written and told the writer of his famous ride without even a saddle blanket, towards the sunny south as the involuntary guest of McNeill's Rangers who he always said treated General Crook and himself with great consideration and kindness.

It is now over and many of the figures in this war history have for many years answered the last roll call.

THE DEATH RECORD.

STANHOPE O. CRANE.

Mr. Stanhope Ordway Crane, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Crane, of Kingwood, W. Va., died in Morgantown Sunday night following a second surgical operation. The deceased was aged twenty-six and was quite well known in Oakland where he visited quite recently. He was gifted to a remarkable degree in music. He is survived by his bride of a few weeks and also by his parents and a large circle of friends and relatives. His funeral occured yesterday afternoon at Kingwood.

MRS. SARAH E. HOOK.

Mrs. Sarah Ellen, wife of Mr. Ezra B. Hook, of Blooming Rose, died on March 2nd, 1915, aged 62 years, one month and 24 days. The deceased lady had been afflicted for a long time with dropsy. Mrs. Hook was the mother of five children, two of whom preceded her to the grave, those surviving her being a son and two daughters. She is also survived by her husband. "Aunt Sadie," as she was familiarly known by the people of the Blooming Rose neighborhood, will be greatly missed and her departure is sincerely mourned by a very large circle of friends. Her funeral occurred from the Brethren church and was conducted by the Rev. George Vansickle, assisted by Rev. A. L. Donachy, of the Baptist church. She was a good and loving wife, a devoted mother, a true friend and neighbor and a model Christian; ready and willing at all times to help the needy, cheer the sorrowing and comfort the distressed. She had set her house in order and by saving faith had maintained it unto the end. The sympathy of the community, goes out to those who are left to mourn, especially in view of the fact that within less than a month three deaths have occurred in Mr. Hook's immediate family.

TO REJUVENATE BOARD OF TRADE.

A Meeting Called for Tuesday Night at the Court House.

A preliminary meeting of the business men of Oakland was held on Monday evening of this week for the purpose of reviving the board of trade which was formed in Oakland several years ago, but which failed to accomplish that for which it was organized.

In anticipation of anything that may be coming Oakland's way and in order to interest outside capital, a meeting of the citizens is called for Tuesday evening of next week at the Court House for the purpose of reorganizing the Board. All are cordially invited to be present.

REDFIELD'S SCAPEGOAT

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

Secretary Redfield is doing his very best to make the Department of Commerce an adjunct of one political party. His whole energy appears to be expended in a campaign to have it appear that a low tariff is a good thing, and that where business is depressed it is due to incompetence, and not to reduced duties. Recently Secretary Redfield told New Jersey potters that they didn't know their own trade.

Now this apologist-in-chief for the Underwood tariff law tells the Montgomery county manufacturers that their lax methods are responsible for their reduced sales. But does Secretary Redfield intend to indict the heads of all American industries?

Steel mills were last year operating only 40 per cent of their capacity. Were all steel makers incompetent? Locomotive plants were working less than third capacity. Were the chiefs of that industry incompetent? More than that the coke ovens were out of blast. What fault has the Secretary to find with the coke producers? Coal mines, saw mills, leather factories, brickmakers, and virtually every industrial plant was in 1914 running at greatly reduced speed.

Has all America suddenly become incompetent? We have supposed that the United States has been right in the van with its industrial ingenuity, and that in a great many fields we led the world. But in order to make out a good case for his pet tariff theories the Secretary of Commerce informs us that our methods are obsolete.

In short the astute Mr. Redfield places most of the blame for the worst trade depression in 20 years upon the people who have billions of dollars invested in industries, and yet do not have sufficient sense to operate their own works successfully.

KITZMILLER

John Bishop was called to Oakland Monday to look after a suit he has against the Standard Oil Co. Mr. A. M. Craver and Ex-Sheriff Lee accompanied Mr. Bishop to Oakland.

A. Guy Barrick was called to Oakland the first part of the week.

Mr. Cal. Browning, of Deer Park, who has been visiting here for several days, returned home Monday.

The mines are working about two-third time.

The revival meeting in the Methodist church continues with much interest. Rev. Dawson has charge of the services. The attendance has been quite large. The preaching has been effectual.

Dr. E. J. Miller has been appointed physician for the Hamill Coal & Coke Co., and entered upon his duties.

Constable Craver has collected the dog tax or shot the dog. There are only three dogs at large, where tax have not been paid. No. 13 is the banner district.

Mrs. E. J. Miller, who has been visiting in Grafton, W. Va., returned home Saturday.

BLOOMING ROSE

As our former letter escaped the waste basket, we will give you a few more items.

Our sympathies go out to our neighbor and friend, Quinter Hook and family. Three times has the hearse been there in three weeks. First it took his two youngest children, the last time it took his mother. Sometimes we wonder what this all means. Let all be ready.

We have had some wintry weather in the past week.

James Frazee and Orville Friend have been trading stock with Asa Humberson. The last trade "Orv." made he "got" a rooster to boot. Trade again, Orv; a rooster is better than nothing.

"Fatty Humberson was a visitor to C. W. Friend's on Saturday evening.

We are going to have a candidate from here for sheriff, in the person of James Frazee. Mr. Frazee was a candidate two years ago, made a good run then and expects to make a better one this time. This end should be recognized and honored by this office. "Let the people decide." We will have something more to say on this subject later on.

The scare over diphtheria has about worn off the people.

Horse Training.

Having taken Prof. Beery's course in horsemanship for training and taming all kinds of bad, vicious horses, such as balkers, kickers, runaways, maneaters, or any other kind of bad ones, we will take such horses to train on commission, or exchange guaranteed good, honest work horses for bad ones. SIGNS OF DEMOCRATIC PROSPERITY

A Pathetic Case—Soup Houses Continue to Be Established.

In a Williamsport, Pa., furniture factory, when the employes went for their dinner buckets, one man got hold of another's pail by mistake. It contained nothing but boiled potato parings. He first thoughtt it a joke on him. Holding up a handfull, he shouted, "who belongs to these?" There came forward with the speaker's dinner pail the claimant, a middle aged man, trying to restrain his tears. He was a new employe. He said:

"These are mine. I have been out of work months, till I got this job. My family has had nothing but boiled potatoes to live on. They eat the potatoes; I eat the skins. We are overjoyed at my getting work, and I am only waiting the first pay day to get them what they need." A hush fell on that assemblage. The thought quickly took form in action. Every man contributed from his dinner pail to the potato paring man, until he had more than 5 men could eat. A sum of money was placed in his hands to tide the family over till pay day, and it has been many a day in that factory since the contributors ate their noon day meal with such zest and satisfaction.—Phila. North American.

Notwithstanding such statements as the above, President Wilson would have us believe that prosperity is just ahead of us. It may be, but how did the country get into such a condition as the above. In good old Republican days, "the full dinner bucket" existed. How came about the change? Let a Democratic congress answer. Says, Mr. Democrat, "The above is a rare occurrance." You are mistaken. Here is an item from the daily paper of last Friday:

Wilkes Barre, Pa., March 12—Owing to the distress among the unemployed of Wilkes Barre and the Wyoming valley the first of several free soup kitchens will be opened next Wednesday. The kitchens will be under the direction of Matron Bertele, of the United Charieties, and funds will be supplied by the Central poor board and the chamber of commerce.

How do you account for this "distress among the unemployed?" Surely the war in Europe is not responsible for idle mills, idle factories, closed mines and general depression. No, not at all. The two years of "dull times, have been under Democratic tinkering with the tariff and a general interference with business enterprises. Ask the Garrett county merchants? Ask the clerks who have been laid off until business brightens up. Ask the laboring men who cannot pay their indebtedness. Ask the thousands who are "watching and waiting" for the promised day of prosperity.

COVE

Elmer Harman, who has been on the sick list for several days, we are glad to say, is improving.

H. E. Speicher and family spent Sunday at the home of Lewis Kamp.

Charles Schlossnagle was a pleasant caller at the home of T. O. Collier.

Mrs. Emma E. Brown and family, also Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hockman and daughter Altha, visited George Kolbfleisch and family.

T. O. Collier and son Joe were business callers in Friendsville.

George Schlossnagle one of the oldest residents of this vicinity is still able to be around and can read well; he is very much interested in the present European war.

Charles Hanft and Wm. Georg were hauling logs the past week.

A number of our young people attended the spelling bee at the Bear Creek school. Robert Kamp won first prize.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Frazee and daughter Anna visited the home of T. O. Collier Sunday.

Mrs. Charles Halman honored her mother-in-law, Mrs. Lewis Harman by serving her a birthday dinner. Several guests were present.

Food to Germany By Mail.

A most important and novel experiment, looking to the shipment of food to Germany in a way which Great Britian may find impossible to prevent was made by Dr. George Barthelme, of the Cologne Gazette, Washington. Dr. Barthelme simply put the proper amount of postage on an 11-pound sack of flour, addressed to a friend in Germany and consigned it to the United States parcel post.

Under the law that sack of flour sets out for Germany as United States package mail. If it reaches its destination safely, Dr. Barthelme said last night, a million Germans and Austrians in this country will soon be shipping parcels of foodstuffs to individuals in Germany, and Great Britain's embargo on these supplies as contraband of war, the Doctor thinks, will have been circumvented.

CASH LOW IN U. S. TREASURY.

Never So Empty Since Grover Cleveland's Administration.

Statements issued today by Chairman Fitzgerald of the House Appropriations committee and Republican members, agree that the appropriations of the last session of congress totalled $1,115,-121,409, that contracts involving additional appropriations of $37,400,000 were authorized and that a treasury deficit is probable.

Chairman Fitzgerald's statement did not give the total of appropriations for the entire Sixty-third congress. Mr. Gillet placed the total at $2,231,000,000, greater than that of the Sixty-second congress and $177,000,000 more than the last Republican congress appropriated.

Mr. Fitzgerald estimated that should the condition of the treasury continue as at present until June 30, the total deficit would be $133,000,000, offset, however, by the income tax collections which are estimated at about $80,000,-000.

Mr. Gillett asserted in his statement that the treasury "has not been so empty since the Cleveland administration."

Mr. Fitzgerald declared the tariff was in no way responsible and that until the outbreak of the European war the new law had proved an effective revenue producer. Mr. Gillett did not agree with that.

Mr. Fitzgerald said the effect of the war was worldwide and that as it goes on, reduction of customs imports and the other revenue will continue.

Mr. Gillett assailed the Democratic leaders for what he characterized as extravagance.

"The appropriations of this session have shamefully disregarded the principles of sound business and true economy," he said. With revenue falling and precarious, with business and commercial conditions feverish and uncertain, with a steady monthly deficit and no assured prospect of its relief and with a cash fund reduced to a point that has generally been deemed unsafe, the administration has recommended and the congress has authorized expenditures on a larger scale than ever before, and no step has been taken to meet the prospective deficit.

"The executive has been more reckless and improvident than congress, and with less excuse. The prevalent opinion that congress is mainly to blame is incorrect. It is the executive who is primarily at fault."

Another Business Crime That the Administration is Responsible For.

From the Daily Iron Trade.

Mr. Wilson's grief over the cruel fate of the ship purchase bill should be tempered by the consoling thought that by signing the LaFollette seamen's or or seamen's union bill he has perhaps accomplished more to burden the American merchant marine and retard its growth and to stir up trouble with foreign nations than if his darling measure has been forced upon the statute book.—New York Sun.

And we won't have long to wait.

The press dispatches are carrying the statement on the authority of the president of the Pacific Mail that the new law will add $800,000 a year to the operating expenses of that steamship line.

A regular service between this country and the Orient.

The greatest profit ever it has made in any one year of its history has been $200,000.

As a result of the seamen's law.

This line, as has been so often predicted, will be Compelled to sell its ships—in all probability to the Japanese—

Pull down the American flag for good,

And put out of business the last remaining trans-Pacific fleet.

This will mean

The hauling down of the Stars and Stripes upon a fleet of ships that was the only one which had the courage and enterprise to carry them in the face of the most severe handicap.

In the way of American navigation laws.

While the flags of other nations always have been prominent.

Preaching the doctrine of foreign enterprise, ambition and energy

That, to the unlearned observer in foreign lands,

It is really short of a business crime

That, at the behest of two or three well known leaders or organized labor,

This fearful business iniquity should become a part of the whole body of American law?

And once again, has the vital thrust been driven at American enterprise?

Well may the American business man inquire

WHAT NEXT?

We were told months ago that the war on the part of American government against American business had ceased.

But every day the prospect becomes more dreary—

And the sunrise of March 4, 1917, seems

So far away and below the horizon that

The heart sickens.

No Time To Read.

We often hear people say that they have no time to read, that it is not worth while to subscribe for papers or magazines because they are so busy the papers would just lie around unopened.

We sincerely pity anyone who cannot find time for anything in this life but work; whose life is so badly ordered and whose time is so poorly apportioned that the mind must be starved in order that the body may be fed.

We have heard people say that they had no time to go to church; no time for play or enjoyment; no time to spend in mingling and co operating with their fellowmen. God pity such dull, colorless, Robinson Cruso lives! The question may well be asked, is such a life worth the struggle?

Mantaining an existence is only a means to an end—the end being the established of an intelligent, useful life and the development of an immortal soul. No time for these things!

Every Progressive home in Garrett county should receive the weekly visit of The Republican. It would make each member of the home circle happier and more successful in life. A clean county newspaper is a valuable asset in any home.

It seats five adults comfortably, without crowding. It is a big, spacious five-passenger touring car.

It has the famous Overland 30 h. p. motor of remarkable strength, speed, durability and economy, developing more power than you will ever require.

With left-hand drive, center control, 33" x 4" tires, demountable rims (with one extra) electric head, side, dash and tail lights, electric horn, top, top cover, robe rail, speedometer and ventilating, rain-vision type windshield, this car at this price is destined to be known as the greatest motor car achievement of the season.

THURSDAY MARCH 18, 1915.

THE United States has 50,000 more miles of railroad than the whole of Europe.

ALL things comes to him who owns a piece of land and pitches in and works to beat the band.

THIRTY-TWO car loads of Michigan and Wisconsin potatoes sold in Chicago last Monday for 32 to 40 cents a bushel.

PRESIDENT Wilson said he makes no provision for the morrow. It's hard for some of us to make provision for the next meal.

ONE tenth of the total population of the country lives in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia. It might be called the "submerged tenth."

IF it is true that the business men of the country don't know how to conduct their enterprises, the Democratic party is not a complete instructor.

IN the fall of 1916 there will be a Presidential election. Two years more of patience, soup houses, and the "watching and waiting" policy will end.

IF they keep on shooting men under the American flag, in Mexico, and foreign nations persist in using Old Glory as a blind, what will the 4th of July orators say?

CONGRESS having adjourned, now watch the fur fly as the candidates, especially in the Democratic party of Maryland for the governorsnip, get themselves into the arena.

DEMOCRATIC leaders are becoming alarmed over the predicted $133,000,000 deficiency at the end of the fiscal year. It is recognized that the condition of the Treasury is a most serious one.

THE Department of Justice has announced there would be no prosecution in connection with election irregularity charges in "Uncle Joe" Cannon's Illinois dirtrict. It was not considered that a sufficient case could be made out.

THE Secretary of State, Mr. William Jennings Bryan, has sent a few more notes of strong protest to Mexico, and the Stars and Stripes have not been saluted. Strong protest is Bryan's strong hold. In the meantime the President is watching and waiting.

THE advice of ex-President Taft is the more to be respected and followed because it is from a man who has occupied the highest place in the gift of the nation, and speaks with authority of the problems which now confront us. And he holds up the true lesson of patriotism as distinguished from the jingo spirit.

WE want to suggest to the patrons of the public schools throughout the county that they make a special effort to have their children attend the school every day from now until the schools are closed. The best thing you can do for your boys and girls is to give them a good education. Life will be happier and more successful because of a good education.

BRITISH Columbia millmen have been asked to bid on a contract for 500,000,000 feet of lumber to be used in constructing 100,000 two-room houses in France. The houses are to be built at government expense for the use of people who have lost their houses and other property in the war. The order would, if secured, be sufficient to keep the largest mills in the province occupied for some time in cutting the lumber.

THE Vice President's flag will be a snow-white square of bunting, on the field of which will be a blue bird representing the eagle in the coat-of-arms of the United States. This makes the Vice President's flag the reverse of the President's flag, which consists of the coat-of-arms of the nation on a blue field. This will be the first time in the history of the American Navy that there has been prescribed for the Vice President a destinctive flag to be displayed on naval vessels while he is on board one of them.

School No. 1, Election District No. 5.

The above is a reproduction of the school building recently completed at Accident, this county, situated alongside of the picturesque State Road. The cost of this building was $4,425, payment for which was arranged in part as follows: $1,000 contributed and a like amount loaned at 4 per cent. by the citizens of that neighborhood. This is one of the best constructed school buildings in the county. Stone foundation, slate roof and outside walls of buff colored brick. Dimensions 35 x 50 feet, two stories, with a well-proportioned belfry, pro-style portico and balcony supported by massive columns. Each floor has a large hall and two rooms which, by an arrangement of folding partitions, may be thrown into one large room, making a most excellent assembly hall for school purposes. The ample grounds surrounding the building are well graded and provided with cement walks which add much to its beauty. Workmanship of the entire structure is of the best. The building is a crowning achievement to the educational equipment of the school facilities of the county, reflecting great credit upon the citizenship of our people. The Accident school employs three teachers and has an enrollment of one hundred and ten pupils with every evidence of an increasing patronage, for which provision has been made. The architect was George F. Sansbury of Cumberland, Md., and the contractors were F. G. Fox & Son, of Friendsville, Md., who carried out the plans and specifications minutely.

How about the fair next fall? We have been looking for some announcement on the subject from the fair management. This is the hour to create enthusiasm, to awaken the farmer, gardener and manufacturer. The plans for the spring work are being made. They should include plans for exhibits at the fair. Two successful fairs have have been held. A record has been made, benefits have been derived and because of the fair a greater interest has been created in farm life. Garrett county has been greatly benefitted by the two fairs, more than any man can conceive. We believe this year is going to be the best year in the history of Garrett county farm products, in every department of the firm. Hence the fair would be of unusual interest, profit and success. The management should cover, in our opinion, every part of the county in their plans, and interest one or more persons in each district in the selection of exhibits and awakening of a more general interest.

The people are inquiring about the fair. Let us hear from the authorities on the subject.

IT is interesting, this watching and waiting for President Wilson's prosperity. The times are so prosperous that our Garrett county miners are working from one to three days a week. So prosperous that Government officials are looking for a deficit of $133,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year, near at hand. The prosperous business man of today is the bill collector. He is kept busy, on the move all the time; as to collections, that is another matter. He is going but, the getting, that is postponed on account of the approaching prosperity.

THE LOCAL OPTION LAW TO BE STRICTLY ENFORCED.

Occasionally you hear on the streets of Oakland the remark, "when the saloons close in Oakland you will be able to get liquor. Bootleggers will be on hand and meet the demand." Possibly they may for a short time, but if they are, they will have to be very sly in their trade.

Public sentiment in Garrett county is five to one against the sale of liquor, and public sentiment will see that the law is strictly enforced. Thanks to Senator Speicher we have a drastic law and that law is being carefully looked over. It was enacted for a purpose and that purpose will be carried out to the letter.

The people of Garrett county mean that rumselling shall cease, and that no drunken men shall be seen in this county.

The sentiment in favor of a rigid enforcement of the law is growing all over the county. No trifling will be permitted, and the State's Attorney can be relied upon to do his full duty in prosecuting every man arrested for violating the local option. Back of him will be loyal Justices of the Peace and efficient constables ready to do their full duty in the matter, as will also Sheriff Scott. Public sentiment controle the enforcement of any law. We have the law against the sale of liquor. It is now the duty of every loyal citizen of the county to see that that law is enforced and if violated that the violater be punished according to the law.

PUT THE UNEMPLOYED TO WORK.

For some time President Wilson, governors of States, congressional and other legislative committees, have been investigating the question of the unemployed. There is a splendid solution of this problem, but from the President down, all seem to be overlookiug it. We are spending hundred of millions of dollars every year on the the navy, the army, and in foreign possessions. Why not spend some money on the 2,225,000 miles of public highways in the United States? To do this will not only pay money to the unemployed, but will make the nation stronger and greater.

For congress, legislatures, cities, counties and townships to appropriate money and begin the construction of a fourfold system of public roads—national highways, State roads, county roads, and township roads—will be of untold value to all the people of the United States and will be a splendid permanent investment.

The Ohio State Journal of February 6, last says: "We want more internal improvement and less of the infernal kind. If we make our nation grand within, it will be strong without. It seems hard to get this into the average congressman's brain. His idea is that a man must carry a pistol to make himself safe, rather than make the back alley fit to live in. He is ignorant of the relations of things. So are many of his constituents. The legislatures of all the States should combine to insist upon the national government improving our highways—nationalize them."

The question of the unemployed is one that should awaken congress and legislatures to the fact that suitable appropriations for the improvement of the public roads will give immediate work to the unemployed, bring immediate relief to their families and be a lasting and profitable investment to all the people.

Every dollar expended in increasing road building and every dollar employed to carry expert advice and reliable information on road construction into various sections of our country, is a distinct contribution to the welfare and happiness to the people.

Another encouraging note of the complete unification of the Republican voters that is going on in the country comes from Maine, where municipal elections have recently been held in seventeen cities, disclosing great Democratic losses. The chairman of the Maine Republican State Committee sees in the results of these elections a strong drift to the Republican party from both the Democrat and Progressive parties. Chairman Parkhurst takes a great comfort from the fact that in 1914, when the State election was also held, the Republicans carried only seven of these cities, while in the elections just held they carried eleven of the seventeen and reduced the majorities in cities where they did not win.

The Republican State chairman points that it is of particular significance at the present time that the Republicans have carried Augusta, the the capital, and a Democratic stronghold for the last six or eight years, by a good majority; they have also carried Waterville, also Democratic for a number of years, and the home of United States States Senator Johnson, a Democrat, by a substantial majority, indicating the return of these cities to the Republican ranks.

The percentages of gain in the seventeen cities that voted out through the State would give the Republicans a plurality over the Democrats of 25,000. Further, the result in these elections is accepted by those familiar with conditions in Maine as evidence of the return of the Progressives to the Republican ranks, of a growing opposition to the Democratic administration in Washington, and of rallying to the Republican party of voters who in recent years have been acting with the Democrats, and as an assurance of a Republican landslide in 1916,

Rev. Bremer Complimented.

The Advocate of Lonaconing has the following:

Before going to Oakland the Champs had been warned against an unscrupulous referee. He was supposed to be the dark horse, the sixth member of the Oakland team. If that referee was in Oakland Saturday night, he was not in evidence. The game was run by the Reverend Mr. O. A. Bremer, and his ability as a capable official is unquestioned. He handled the game in a manner worthy of the highest commendation, and his decisions were accepted by both teams without argument. One thing about Referee Bremer that is to be admired, is his method of handling the fans and rooters. He exercises just as much control over them as he does over the players. "Cat calling" and all evidence of vulgarity were noticably absent during the progress of the Oakland game. The team was treated royally by the Oakland boys and the trip was made as pleasant as any the locals have taken this season.

Luther Brotherhood.

At the Lutheran church there has been organized in recent weeks a Lutheran Brotherhood composed of the men of the church. The brotherhood meets at regular intervals for the purpose of furthering the work of the church and also for social purposes. At the last meeting held on Monday of last week the membership of some thirty men were divided into two classes or clubs, known as the reds and blues and a contest was inaugurated, the purpose being to ascertain which of the two could secure the greater number of new members for the brotherhood Sunday school class. On Sunday morning Capt. Henry Lauer marshalled his forces and marched them in a body to the church. His army numbered forty-one, while the blues brought in a much lesser number—but they are still at work and hope to make a better showing. The brotherhood class numbers nearly sixty now and the interest is growing.

"Booze" Shipped as Typewriters

Fairmont, W. Va., March 16.—The mystery of the enormous number of typewriters being carried on railrod trains from Oakland, Md., and Point Marion, Pa., to this city was solved today. Typewriter covers were merely used as covering for tin boxes of booze hauled into the state. The apparent prosperity in the typewriter industry divulged the secret.

An Alarm of Fire.

An alarm of fire was sounded yesterday afternoon, which aroused the town. A fire was discovered under the comb of the roof of Hotel Frantz, adjoining the Naylor building. Soon a large crowd of people had gathered. The fire was extinguished by the use of several hand fire extinguishers, before the hose could be attached to a water plug. Some of the roof sheathing was burned. The weather boarding of the Naylor building was scorched. This is the third time a fire has occurred at the same place.

PARENTS' MEETING AT OAKLAND HIGH SCHOOL

Some Excellent Speeches and Interesting Papers Presented.

The parents' meeting held in the assembly hall of the High School, Friday evening, March 12th, was a complete success. Much interest was manifested by all who were present. It was unanimously voted by the audience that another meeting be held in the near future.

The meeting was opened by a few introductory remarks by the principal, after which Miss Eleanor Hinebaugh rendered two beautiful piano solos.

Mr. S. T. Jones made the first address, his subject being "The Teacher In and Out of School." Mr. Jones pointed out the fact that the schools of Maryland, and those of Garrett county in particular, are making rapid progress. He said he knew of a time when the schools of Maryland were not popular; when the teacher and even college instructors did not know as much as students in the Oakland High School. In the last twenty-five years the schools of Garrett county have advanced a hundred fold. Teachers have made great advancement in scholarship, teaching ability and deportment. The teacher in school must be an excellent example in deportment, scholarship and leadership, as well as take an active part in the legitimate activities of the community. Indeed, he must take a great interest in every phase of school life it he would interest his pupils and exert a wholesome influence. He should not talk at but to the children. He occupies a responsible position, for he moulds the lives of the pupils. Next to the preacher, the teacher exerts more and greater influence than any other profession.

Mrs. O. A. Bremer spoke on the subject of "Occupation and Amusements of the Pupil Outside of School." She handled this subject in an intelligent and interesting manner, maintaining, throughout her discussion, that there must be a happy medium, a proper proportion between the work and play element of the pupil's life. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Play and work go hand in hand. Each pupil should have a definite task assigned, and he should perform that task alone, thus cultivating independence and self-rehance. The teacher must not fail to teach the dignity of labor, constantly keeping before the mind of the pupil the aim of perfection. Credit in school should be given for work done in the home, especially in the vocational arts--Domestic Science and Manual Training. This is known as the Oregon plan, and is being carried out with success in some of the Garrett county schools. Amusements are necessary and should be encouraged, but they must be wholesome and contribute toward character building. There are two kinds of amusements, the one kind is when the pupil is alone, engaged in reading, etc., the other is where he is with others, engaged in play of some sort. Parents and teachers should oversee both kinds of amusements. It is the duty as well as the privilege of both parents and teachers to keep young. They should take an active part in all proper forms of amusements, both in the home and in school. Pupils should be constantly engaged in doing something when not asleep. The absence of occupation is not rest. When the pupil does nothing, or has nothing to do, he generally embarks in mischief. There must be a variety of physical and mental amusements, but they dare never dissipate work and must always contribute toward the attainment of good citizenship.

Mrs. E. Z. Tower read a carefully prepared and most instructive paper on the subject of "Sanitation." The audience made a unanimous request that Mrs. Tower's paper be published in The Republican, therefore no comment is made here, as the article may be read, which is as follows:

If I can give you one new thought that you will remember and that will be of benefit to even one school boy or school girl, I shall consider that neither my time nor yours has been spent amiss this evening.

The science of sanitation and of hygiene are so nearly related, and the one so closely follows the other, that the terms are almost synonomous. Thus, sanitary science is defined as "that branch of biology which teaches man the correct mode of life," and hygiene is defined as the science of preserving health.

Writings on health are among the oldest in the world, for the subject has engaged the attention of the profoundest thinkers and the most renowned leaders of men.

We have only to point to the elaborate directions in the Mosaic laws for the preservation of health through scrupulous attention to cleanliness, the isolation of the sick, the extreme care in the use of wholesome articles of food and drink. Throughout the whole of their history the Jews enjoyed remarkable immunity from epidemic disease, the most of the instances in which such disease occurred being represented as those in which they departed from the law, and doubtless relaxed the wholesome vigilance enjoined by it.

In mediaeval and modern history they have often, even down to our own time, been spared the ravages of epidemics, when their Christian neighbors were perishing around them. It is highly probable that the periodical cleansing of their dwellings involved in the thorough search for the leaven preceding the yearly passover, had a notable influence in preventing that continuous deposition of organic matter which is no doubt one of the most powerful factors in the production of disease. On the other hand, the filthy habits of the neighboring populations in the middle ages, whose religion taught that the salvation of the soul depended upon the debasement of the body, offered a premium to plagues of every kind, for there is no parallel in ancient history to the terrible invasions of disease which from time to time ravaged Europe down to quite recent times.

The rapid development of sanitary work in the schools during the last two decades shows the result of the wide spread realization of the importance of preventive measures in the conservation of natural and human resources. The prevention of waste has become in fact the dominant issus of our entire political, industrial and educational situation.

Our highest boast is coming to be that we, the present generation, are living not only for ourselves, but also for the generations that are to follow.

The surroundiugs in which the child passes the first years of its life should conduce to its healthy development and not impede it, as is so often the case in the large number of our schools. The aim of modern education should be to foster the physical as well as the intellectual and moral development of the child, not only for the advantages of health itself, but also for the sake of establishing a sound physical basis, without which true progress in the culture of the intellect is impeded or prevented.

When the State assumes the responsibility of educating the children, it also obligates itself to carefully guard their health, both physical and mental. This obligation is due to the public who intrust the care and training of their children to others during a large portion of their lives The State should not be content simply to "hold physical childhood unharmed while mental childhood is getting its schooling." It should strive to promote physical health and vigor as an indispensible accompaniment to intellectual training. As one means to this end medical inspection of school children is of great benefit in preventing the spread of contagious diseases. The medical inspector aided by the teacher, who should not hesitate to act, will take advantage of early information of the appearance of suspicious symptoms in any child, by sending it home at once for its further observation and treatment, if necessary. If the disease be infectious, any other children in the family, though well, should not be permitted to attend school until the cure is complete and all danger from infection is past.

The medical inspection of school children which has been conducted in numerous cities and in some entire states, show that only about one-third or less, of the children enrolled in public schools are free from defects, which to a greater or less degree interfere with their progress in school work. The inspections have shown that of the approximately twenty million children enrolled in the public schools of the United States, about fourteen million are handicapped in one way or another. Among the more numerous defects are found to be, malnutrition, defective teeth, obstructed breathing due to adenoids, or diseased tonsils, those who show tubercular tendencies, defective vision, defective hearing, spinal curvatures, organic heart disease and various forms of nervous diseases.

Knowledge without health cannot push us. Success in life depends as much on the integrity of the energy getting processes as on the accumulation of knowedge. The school should not confine its work to the latter. Emerson is literally correct when he tells us that the strong heart helps us to resist temptation. So do healthy muscles and a sound digestion.

Sanitary science deals with the food supply as well with other conditions, such as proper clothing, habitation, care of the body, etc.

Regularity of meals and care in the selection and preparation of the child's food cannot be too strongly emphasized, and in such matters the parents in comfortable circumstances are often at fault as well as those who have less to prepare. Children pay the penalty when mothers have not been rightly educated.

Parental neglect and ignorance are often responsible for underfeeding and for pampering the child in its food habits. The same cause is responsible for insufficiency of sleep, over excitement and many other enervating influences which affect the child's ability to digest and assimilate its food. The child does not thrive upon what it eats, but upon what it can digest and assimilate. The effect of malnutrition on mental development is probably very great, though difficult to measure. The over-wrought nervous child is nearly always ill-nourished. Decaying, aching or irregular teeth and diseased gums are at the bottom of many cases of malnutrition. Adenoids and enlarged tonsils induce a condition of general toxaemia which profoundly affect nutrition. Many cases are traceable to eye-strain, or to other reflex nervous disturbances.

Insufficient clothing aggravates malnutrition by robbing the body of its heat. The child who is scantily fed and scantily clothed is compelled to burn its candle at both ends. The assimilation of food depends not only on the food itself and the soundness of the digestive apparatus, but fall as much upon the appetite stimulated by bodily activity. The tissues can starve for oxygen in the out-of-doors, if the bodily functions are not stimulated by exercise. So may the child who hugs his books six or more hours a day suffer malnutrition in the midst of plenty. The exercise of the body should have its place in the school regime as well as the training of the mind.

Air is food as truly as meat or bread. We feed the stomach at most but three or four times a day; the lungs about 15 times a minute. We are nice and discriminating about the food which we offer the stomach, but we complacently consume lung food which is clouded with dangerous mineral dust or filthy with organic matter derived from the skin, teeth and mucuous membrane of other persons. To a sense of smell of ordinary delicacy a first whiff of typical school-room air is likely to be found nauseating and stifling like the morning air of an unventilated bedroom. The immediate effects produced by ill-ventilation, are headache, drowsiness, lassitude, faintness, dizziness, nervousness, and in extreme cases, even death.

The indirect and remote effects of chronic exposure to unsuitable air, are not so well known, because they are not so spectacular, but they are none the less real. Bad ventilation is a factor in the production of nearly all kinds of diseases which have their seat in the respiratory passages, including tuberculosis, pneumonia, diphtheria, colds, laryngitis, pharyngitis, nasal and bronchial catarrh, hypertrophied tonsilitis and adenoids. Imperfect aeration of the blood is a result which in turn causes general debility. This means lowered resistance to fatigue, to disease, and probably also to temptation, neither physical nor moral victories go to the aenemic.

It has been estimated that during repose 3,000 cubic feet of fresh air for each person every hour is necessary to properly dilute and render harmless the carbonic acid expired.

The carbonic acid is not so dangerous in itself, but it is used as a measure for the amount of organic matter present in air vitiated by respiration. More air is necessary during work or in sickness. An over-crowded school-room is almost impossible to properly ventilate. A room should be so ventilated that the air is in constant motion--the foul air carried out and fresh air admitted in such a way as not to make a little draught which strikes but a small part of the body and gives one a cold, but an imperceptible current of air, large enough to pervade every portion of the room. This can best be secured by having the same window open both above and below; this prevents a direct draught from one window to another. We have obtained a rather satisfactory solution of the ventilating difficulty at the Grammar School by using a board under the lower sash, in which are two eight inch openings; into these openings are fastened two elbows of stove pipe. The pipe is so placed that the free end is turned up in the room so that as the fresh air enters it is diffused up into the school room instead of down upon the heads of the nearest pupils; the opening above, formed by lowering the upper sash, is protected by a screen of thin sheet iron so placed that there cannot be a direct draught down into the room.

A very good way to arrange for ventilating a sleeping room, and not create a direct draught upon the sleepers, is to raise the sash six or eight inches from the bottom, and pinning a newspaper across the opening, leaving the bottom and top of the paper loose, and only fastening the ends. This creates an influx of fresh air, but diverts the direct current so that one portion ascends and the other descends.

The hot, dry still air of the school room sucks up every bit of moisture from the furniture, from the skin and throats of the children. All the mucous membranes exposed to such air become parched and unhealthy. Diseased conditions of the nose and throat result; catarrh becomes the rule; diphtheria, pneumonia and tuberculosis are more easily contracted. Another effect of this kiln-drying to which the children are subjected, is to make them irritable. Self control becomes more difficult and concentration is impossible. "Cleanliness is next to Godliness," so says the old saw and truly.

The excretions of the body are a most important element in the factors that go to make up health or disease. The pores of the skin are the sewers through which much of the waste material of the body is carried off. When the proper precaution as to bathing are not taken, these minute waste pipes become clogged, and the result is that they do not perform their offices properly, and the waste instead of being excreted is retained in the system, poisoning the blood.

Bathing regularly is indispensable to the general health.

The advice the old man gave to the son about starting on a journey, was good. He said, "My son, fear God, love your neighbor, but above all, wash yourself."

The O. H. S. Glee Club sang several selections in a very creditable manner. The Club was highly praised by the audience.

Supt. Rathbun emphasized many of the important points of the different addresses. Mr. Rathbun takes a great interest in the welfare of the schools of the schools of the county, and hopes more parents' meetings will be held and that they will be the means of accomplishing much good.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Little Foxes.

To the Editor of The Republican.

In eastern countries it was a custom to plant vineyards and gardens in the terraces, one above another and to these terraces access was had by stairs. These little pests of the vineyard concealed themselves and taking advantage of the thick foliage did much mischief among the tender grapes, especially in the Spring time. The size of these pests peculiarly fitted them for their work, and stealthily creeping among the vines carried on their depridations undetected by the keen eye of the keeper of the vineyard. Away with the little Foxes that spoil the vines. They are the little sins that creep into our lives and spoil them. A big sin never gets in without the little ones having first paved the way. These are the ones that spoil so many lives that otherwise might be useful. Route them out of their retreat in our minds and hearts; drive them back to their lair, or hide them from the light of day.

The darkness of night so suitable for the depridations of the larger foxes, so favorable for the gratification of the big sins, does not frighten the little ones back to their holes—it only makes them bolder, for when the light of morning has chased away the gloom of night, they are as busy as bees, slyly nipping the tender twigs. Even the glory of noon-day witnesses no cessation in their work of destruction, for they are still eagerly grabbing the tempting fruit. Worse still the vines slowly wither for want of the life blood sapped by the foxes. The sun is slowly sinking below the horizon, the twilight of evening is quietly stealing over the earth, till the sable goddess of night usurps the shining beauty of the day. Will not the darkness cause them to flee away? It only makes them bolder and more eager in their pillaging. In the vineyard of the world, there lurks thousands of little foxes, intent upon plunder, and busily engaged in spoiling the thrifty vines, and in the garden of our lives, contemptible little foxes are stealthily creeping and growing fat at the expense of our fruit. They appear in the form of those unwatched and apperently insignificant little things that destroy our peace of mind; they nibble at our domestic happiness and make home less attractive and pleasant than it should and otherwise would be. You may erect the most attractive and convenient house possible, you may furnish it with the finest upholstery, deck the walls with the rarest pictures that art can produce, there may be living in it persons whose interests in life are common, who bound togetner by the ties of affection are living apart from others, and each of them may be possessed of good and noble traits of character, correct principles, kindliness and even religion, yet through the influence of one of these preverse and contemptible little foxes, the beautiful clusters of happiness that hang on these promising vines, may never come to maturity. These unexpected and unwelcome little critters are the pests of good people who look upon them as rather creditable little animals that may even do some good but are not capable of doing much harm. But a sadder mistake is they seldom make as they too often discover to their sorrow a very common little fox that has free access to the domestic vines of many people is Faultfinding.

We would doubtless be correct in saying that there is not one who likes to have his bones picked by this pesky little fox. He ought to have his teeth pulled for no one likes him, yet there are comparatively few who do not derive some satisfaction, if not real pleasure in finding fault with others and with things that do not please them. As a rule what is a pleasure for us to do is a pleasure to others to have us do.

It is a pleasure to give and it is a real pleasure to receive. We derive pleasure in loving and in being loved. It is often a pleasure to find fault but not to be found fault with. Generally the very ones who are most ready to find fault are the ones who can least endure to be found fault with and while they bind grevous burdens on the backs of others are themselves no willing to carry a finger's weight of the burden.

It cannot be denied that there are things in life which ought to be different. There are faults to be spoken of and corrected, but to do this opens the door of faultfinding to would be critics, who, while they may mean well impose upon others countless inconveniences which annoy them. Parents by reason of their position are oft times the fault finders of the household. Too often from one or the other, flows a stream of personal complaints, until the atmosphere is chilled and darkened by the mists of quarelsomness; a most uncongenial atmospher for the tender vines for it causes mildew to form on the fair clusters. Venus falls in love with his Adonis because she appears to be so angelic, so he begins at once that constant adoration system that precedes marriage. She is so good, so fair to look upon, so tender and delicate that she ought never to know anything of fatigue or exertion or sorrow, while her pathway should be strewn with roses. By and by this golden age comes to a close—the romance of life gives place to stern realities, while the adoration system is exchanged for that of faultfinding. Now nothing about the home suits his fastidious taste. The meals are so irregular, the coffee is not made right, the meat is overdone, or if he orders it rare, he is almost sure to want it rared over again.

The coal or gas is wasted; in short there is too much extravagance which is sinful and thus he intentionally or otherwise is constantly inflicting wounds on the heart of his wife, until, provoked and indignant, she takes up the same cudgel and then it is "diamond cut diamond" and the keen shafts of her sarcasm penetrates the joints of his armor. Contention rages; and for such trivial things as a broken dish, a spoiled dinner and a waste of fuel, many generous and even religious people are guilty of throwing away the very thing for which houses were built, fuel burned and home established—their happiness. Of course Adouis just dotes on having her Venus remind her with a good bit of piquancy, that she doesn't do things like his mother did. But faults must be pointed out and corrected they say.

True! but there is a right and wrong way of doing this. Would you know the proper way. Go to your Bible and learn of Paul, how to temper with gentleness and praise the reproofs necessary to be administered. He first speaks approvingly of the good, assure them of his love and then carefully [illegible] the mark. But one greater than Paul has taught us the true way of reproof. His last hours on earth were troubled with the old contest, "who should be the greatest" and when all else had failed He took a towel and water and humbled himself to perform the office of a servant.

The reproofs given in the spirit of the Master are the most effective ones. This rule will kill the little fox of "faultfinding." Try it.

Yours truly,

JOHANNES.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.—First Quarter, For March 21, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xiv, 1-13. Memory Verse, 7—Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 12—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Our first introduction to Jonathan, the son of Saul, is in chapter xiii, 2, where we find him the captain of a thousand men smiting a garrison of the Philistines and thus inciting them to gather against Israel in numbers as the sand which is on the seashore (xiii, 3-7), causing many in Israel to hide wherever they could—in caves, rocks, high places and in pits and to flee over Jordan, while those with Saul followed him with trembling. It was sad indeed and a reproach to God to have His people in such distress, but the fault was wholly with them. Let us lay it to heart that when believers are cast down or overcome instead of victorious it is a reproach to our God.

Samuel had instructed Saul to wait at Gilgal seven days until he should come and offer sacrifices and show him what to do (chapter x, 8). Saul waited seven days, but not quite the full time, and, as he said, forced himself and offered the burnt offering, and just as he had finished Samuel came and reproved him and told him that his kingdom would not continue, but that the Lord had sought Him a man after His own heart (chapter xiii, 8-14). Did you ever wait all but the time that would have brought the person or thing you expected and then grow restless and just missed it? If so you can probably sympathize somewhat with Saul. But next time wait more patiently and the full time, for, though He tarry, He will surely come in the fullness of time, whether it be for some deliverance in your daily life or to the air for us all.

Jonathan is one of the most beautiful of all the characters in the Bible and his love for David one of the most beautiful of love stories—a rare man indeed, seemingly raised up by God to be a true friend and comfort to David. But we shall meet him again in our studies. In our lesson verses he is a real hero and, with his armor bearer, starts a wonderful deliverance for Israel. His reliance was on the Lord and his courage most unusual, for what could two men expect to do? He must have remembered Deut. xxxii, 30, and the assurance that one should chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight, for hear him encourage his armor bearer with the words, "It may be that the Lord will work for us, for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few" (verse 6). It may have been that he thought of the great deliverance by Gideon's three hundred (Judg. vii, 4, 7), and possibly Asa long afterward was encouraged by the remembrance of Jonathan (II Chron. xiv, 11). I have been personally strengthened and encouraged by each of these records and expect some day in the kingdom to have good fellowship with Gideon and Jonathan and Asa and lots of others whose records have greatly helped me.

Jonathan's helper must have had the same spirit as his master and greatly helped him with his good words, "Do all that is in thine heart; behold, I am with thee according to thy heart" (verse 7). They sought guidance of the Lord and received the token they asked for if He would have them go forward (verses 10, 12), so they bravely scaled the rocks, just these two, and the Lord wrought a victory and fought with them by a great earthquake (verses 13-15). When Saul and his men heard of the battle and the noise of victory they, with those who had been in hiding, took part in the defeat of the Philistines, and "so the Lord saved Israel that day" (verses 19-23). The rest of chapter xiv tells of what looks like a great mistake of Saul's, which caused much trouble and but for the interference of the people on behalf of Jonathan might have resulted in his death. Saul had evidently begun to go astray, as shown in his not waiting the full time appointed by Samuel and also in his receiving no answer from God when he asked counsel of Him.

When one has ceased to be controlled by God there is no knowing what he may do, for if God is not controlling it is the devil. Even in the record of Simon Peter when he testified of our Lord, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," Jesus said, "My Father who is in heaven revealed that to thee." In the same chapter it is recorded that Jesus had to say to him, "Get thee behind me Satan; thou art an offense unto me, for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men" (Matt. xvi, 16, 17, 23). The tongue is an unruly member, sometimes blessing and sometimes cursing, but this ought not so to be (as. iii, 8-10). There is one good thing written of Saul in chapter xiv, 35. He built an altar unto the Lord—his first one. It is also written that he delivered Israel out of the hands of them that spoiled them, but it is also written that there was sore war against the Philistines all the days of Saul (verses 47, 52). Contrast chapter vii, 13, "The hand of the Lord was against the Philistines all the days of Samuel." It was better for Israel under the rule of Samuel than under Saul, for Samuel was the Lord's representative, while Saul was given to them in answer to their cry for a king that they might be like other nations.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

It seemed natural to see Albert White among the clerical force of Harvey Bros' store last week.

Jerry Uphole will open a meat market in Loch Lynn, in the room used as post office for a few years. He purchased the large refrigerator used in Leighton & Harvey's store. We learn that neither of the stores at the depot will handle meats this summer.

Emory Freeland and family enjoyed a visit from Mr. Freeland's father the latter part of last week.

There was a real enjoyable social at Haydenhurst Friday night.

Floyd White has postponed his trip to the Pacific coast. He feels thankful to the public which gave him such a handsome vote. He believes in the old adage, "There is many a slip between the cup and the lip."

Clarence Mayer, of Cincinnati Ohio, was in Mountain Lake Park Sunday looking at houses for rent. His family will go to Baltimore in the fall, spending the summer in the Park.

Jack McGuffin has been confined to his home the past two weeks with rheumatism.

Sunday evening the two year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Burcher, living near Loch Lynn, got hold of a bottle of peroxide and drank a portion of it, and in a very few minutes was suddenly ill and died before relief could be had. Mr. Burcher recently moved to this section from Ohio and was making for himself and family a home on a tract of land adjoining Loch Lynn.

Mrs. Bassell and daughter, Miss Finnell, returned to the Park Saturday, from several months visit at Parkersburg, W. Va., and are preparing Allenhurst for summer guests.

We are all glad to see Harrison Arnold back in the People's Store, having returned to this place, after spending the fall and winter in Clarksburg, W. Va. Harrison is very popular in this section of the country. He is a splendid salesman, polite, accommodating and always on his job.

Miss Evelyn Pritchard, who has been visiting in Grafton, W. Va., has returned to the Park.

Mrs. Camden, who has spent a month or two in Baltimore, returned to the Park Monday night.

Mrs. Shaw has moved into a portion of the Pennsylvania House, Loch Lynn, as has also Rev. Jones, pastor of the Baptist church.

Tuesday morning the trees were covered with snow, presenting a beautiful appearance. By noon the snow was gone and in its place the stickiest mud you ever saw prevailed on the public roads.

Revival meetings are in progress in the U. B. church, Rev. Barnhouse pastor. The congregations are large, the singing is excellent and the sermons convincing. There has been some bad behavior, but it will cease, or else a trip before some Justice of the Peace will follow.

Yesterday morning as Edward E. Friend was walking from his stable to the house he slipped and strained the ligaments of his leg. He was assisted into the house and Dr. Henry McComas was called, who promptly responded and rendered the necessary aid. Mr. Friend will be confined to his home for a few day.

Harvey Bros. have fitted up an office room in their store room. It has quite a business look.

The friends of A. E. Rambeau will be surprised to hear of his marriage to Miss Lena Frances Dvoracek, of Bellaire, Ohio, which occurred Friday evening, March 12th, at the parsonage of Rev. Pease, of the Unitarian church. The groom, who is the son of Dr. A. Rambeau a former Park resident, and who himself spent many summers at Mt. Lake Park, holds a very good position with the Wheeling Steel & Iron Co., of Wheeling, W. Va. The happy couple will live in Bellaire for the present.

BREEDLOVE

Prof. James King, who has been visiting relatives at Sines, Md., has returned.

Percy Sines and D. B. Friend were calling on B. B. Lewis Sunday.

E. M. Sines is working for S. H. Lewis at this writing.

We have been informed that our good friend, A. L. Sines, of Sines, Md., is a candidate for county treasurer subject to the decision of the Republican primares. That Mr. Sines is a capable honorable gentleman cannot be questioned and therefore should have the support of voters in Garrett county.

MAYSVILLE.

Within two miles of the Maryland—West Virginia State line is Maysville, a village of 47 houses, school house, and a three story store building, with hall on third floor.

Our public school has an enrollment of 72 scholars.

Next Sabbath Rev. William J. Barnard will preach in the school house. Preaching every first and third Sunday of the month. This is Parson Barnard's third year.

Osborne Tasker, of this place, spent the first part of the week in Oakland.

The coal mines are running three days in the week.

The Coal Company will make no charge for house rent until four or more day's work is given to the working men weekly.

We are at last to have a conty road. We have none now. The County Commissioners have agreed to expend $600 to give us an outlet.

What we think about the dog tax and hog laws would fill a book.

DEER PARK

Mrs. Haulenbeek will move into her cottage Saturday. The first summer visitor to arrive.

All the cottages on the B. & O. grounds are rented for the summer.

We are informed that quite a number of rooms have been reserved in the B. & O. hotel for the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. David Walters, of Deer Park, are visiting in Keyser, W. Va.

Mr. C. R. Savedge has purchased an up-to-date Ross ensilage cutter and a 12 horse power gasoline engine, both on wheels. He has also bought a silo.

Mr. Charles Ashby, agent for the Frederick Silo Co., has sold in this vicinity, forty-one silos. The farmers of this district are going to have some fat cattle for the market.

Mr. William Shaffer is still confined to his home and is very sick.

Charles Ashby has his saw mill in full operation, with a large number of saw logs on hand. The mill is located on the B. & O. side track, near the tower.

Calvin Browning is building a new barn.

Farmer Wilson, who purchased the Lafayette Friend farm, is having lumber sawed for a new barn.

Mr. E. C. Friend sold his personal property Tuesday and on Wednesday eturned to Keyser, W. Va.

The collection of the dog tax in this district is slow work. It is a very unpopular law.

A Birthday Surprise.

A birthday surprise was given at the home of Mr. Bruce Blocher in District No. 9, in honor of his wife, it being her anniversary. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Thos. H. Layman, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Layman, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Layman, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Opel, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Blocher, Mrs. Margaret Reichelt, and Mrs. James Carey. At about ten o'clock the neighbors came driving in sleds and sleighs and motor cars, bringing their children and numbering thirty one in all. When the old farm bell tolled for 12 o'clock they were invited into the large dining room where a table was decorated with all the eatables that could be gathered from a first class Garrett county farm and bought from a first class grocery store of which the grown people enjoyed and also another table in an adjoining room for the little folks. After dinner the guests were entertained with music and songs of the finest kind. About 3:30 all returned home wishing Mrs. Blocher many more happy birthdays.

ONE PRESENT.

Kitzmiller School.

March the twenty-fifth has been set aside as Patron's Day or Visiting Day, in our school. We shall have all regular work and classes on that day, but take the pleasure of extending a special invitation to every parent, father and mother, to come and visit us at our work. Your child longs to know how much interest you really have in its training for the duties of life. The teachers would like to become acquainted with the parents of the community, so, will you not give us the opportunity?

In the evening a special program will be carried out in the M. E. church. Rev. J. E. Scott, of Grafton, and County Superintendent F. E. Rathbun, of Oakland, will be the two special speakers. Everyone is invited to meet with us and appreciate the good things that will be said.

Can we depend upon your being present?

Teachers of Kitzmiller School.

OUT OF TOWN HAPPENINGS

A Variety of Interesting Paragraphs for Republican Readers.

Clarence Nicklow and family, of Friendsville, Md., were Addison, Pa., visitors.

Mrs. James Wilt and daughter Mrs. Daisy Reitz of Bond, spent Sunday in Luke, Md.

Mr. Thomas J. Crowe, of Finzell, Md. was a business caller in Frostburg Thursday.

Nathan Michaels, of Aarons Run, this county, was a week end visitor at Westernport.

Miss Cora Coddington, of near Hoyes, is confined to her hoom and has been for several weeks, with dropsy.

Automobile tourists will find a garage at Friendsville, Grantsville and Oakland all equipped for prompt service.

The sugar camps throughont the county were in full operation part of the past week. The indications are for a splendid harvest of maple sugar and molasses.

Mr. W. R. Loraw, of Erwin, W. Va., where he is engaged as a scaler with Glade Lumber Company, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Loraw, at Ottaway on Saturday and Sunday.

Slipping and gliding of horses and vehicles on state roads in Garrett county and other counties of the state will end this year with the application of the regular spring coating of oil and stone chips. An extra proportion of stone chips will be put on the road immediatly after the oiling. This will elimate the glassy like smoothness of the surfaces of state roads which was the cause of so many complaints from farmers and users of highways last fall.

The past ten days several schools were closed because scholars were taken from the school to work in the sugar camp. This is not fair to the teachers, who expected to teach a full school term, nor to those scholars who wanted to secure an education, but the school failing to maintain the required average had to be closed. The enforcement of the law requiring attendance at school should be strictly enforced.

State and County Offices to be Filled. Primaries Six Months Off.

Already things are beginning to look up for the election in November—seven months away. The primaries take place in September. Many aspirants for places on the tickets of their party have verbally announced their candidacy for nomination and will wage hard campaigns to secure the positions.

State ticket—Governor, Attorney-General, Comptroller of the Treasury.

County ticket—State's Attorney, three members of the House of Delegates, one County Commissioner, Sheriff, County Treasurer, Three Judges of the Orphans' Court, County surveyor, members of the State Central Committee for Garrett County, the County Central Committee and delegates to the State Convention.

Only those who are affiliated with the Democratic and Republican parties can vote at the September primary.

Uncle Sam is Solvent.

While the nations of Europe are fast traveling along the road to bankruptcy, the United States of America was never in so favorable a position with respect to its debt and its credit. If the government cared to, it could pay off the interest-bearing debt merely with the gold held against gold certificates in the Treasury. And its credit is so good that when it wants to borrow money it can obtain funds at a minimum rate of interest. Most of the bonded indebtdness pays only 2 per cent interest, while the charges on the rest range from 2½ to 4 per cent.

All this must be gratifying to the American citizen. The smallness of the national debt and the excellent credit Uncle Sam possesses in the money markets of the world are calculated to give him a thrill of patriotic pride and they have their monetary value to him also, for it goes without saying that the smaller the national debt and the lower the interest rates on what Uncle Sam owes, the lower will be the taxes he must pay.

PERTY ON ALDER STREET CHANGED HANDS

Purchased By James P. Treacy, Who Will Erect a Garage on Lot.

Monday morning a deed was placed on record at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court transferring the Jarboe property located on Alder street, to Mr. James P. Treacy, who paid a figure approximating $7,000 for it.

The property transferred is now occupied by Capt. and Mrs. James Brock as their residence and also by Mr. Arthur White, who conducts his grocery in the old postoffice building adjoining the home of Capt. Brock. The lot faces eighty-two feet on Alder street and runs back to the alley alongside The Republican building a depth of about 150 feet.

Mr. Treacy contemplates making some changes on the Alder street front of the lot so as to afford him an entrance from that street and upon the rear of the lot he will erect a commercial garage, work upon which will begin as soon as weather conditions will permit.

WENT SUDDENLY INSANE

George Wilson, of Loch Lynn, Was Stricken Yesterday Morning.

Yesterday morning Mr. George Wilson, of near Loch Lynn, was placed in jail by Justice Rudisill pending investigation relative to his mental condition, Mr. Wilson having shown indications of violent insanity when he entered one of the stores at Loch Lynn Heights and began to act in a manner indicating that he was of unsound mentality.

He was brought to Oakland and committed as above stated and will be examined either today or tomorrow by physicians. Mr. Wilson has been a most industrious, quiet citizen and has been highly esteemed by all who know him. His present condition is greatly regretted.

Got In The Wrong Shop.

Friday last a West Virginia ex-constable drank too freely of Oakland's booze, and got weak in the knees and unsteady in his movements. While in one of the city restaurants he fell from one of the high stools at the lunch counter and cut his face. He started up the street and ran into a telephone pole. He called upon a citizen of the city for a little financial help, and received it. He followed the gentleman into Squire Rudisill's office. He managed to get to a chair, but was in a shaky condition. The Squire gave him a commitment to jail, to which place he was escorted by Constable Friend. On his way to the jail he asked for a drink of whisky, and said, "I made a bad mistake, I thought I was going into a saloon, but instead landed in a court room." Nevertheless he was glad to get to jail and find a place to lie down.

Saturday morning he was arraigned before Squire Rudisill, and having spent all his money in the saloons he could not pay his fine, and was returned to the jail for one week.

Festival And Box Social.

There will be a festival and oyster and box supper held at North Glade Easter Monday night, for the benefit of the M. E. church. Come one and all and bring your friends.

OBTAINED SUMS UNDER FALSE PRETENSE IS CHARGE

Baltimorean Accused of "Working" Merchants Along Creek and in West Virginia.

Charged with obtaining money under false pretense, Fred Reddish, of Baltimore, Md., was arrested Tuesday afternoon at Kitzmiller by Constable Craver was brought to the Oakland jail for a hearing. It is alleged that Reddish had been representing himself to merchants of Western Maryland and West Virginia as being a son of J. J. Underhill, a commission merchant of Baltimore, and also a son of F. W. Damast, of that city.

His plan was to call on the merchants, it is alleged and tell them that certain salesmen who represented the firms of Underhill and Damast had left the company, and that he wished to settle up their accounts. He is said to have made several large collections in Frostburg, Lonaconing, Westernport and Kitzmiller, Md., and Keyser, Piedmont and Blaine, W. Va.

Reddish was given a hearing before Justice Rudisill yesterday morning and committed to jail for the action of the grand jury.

He made a full confession to Sheriff Scott and offered to refund the money he had collected at Kitzmiller.

After being taken back to jail Reddish employed an attorney and is endeavoring to secure bond for his appearance at court.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MISS MAGGIE CLEARY.

The funeral of Miss Maggie Cleary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cleary, of Bloomington, occurred on last Wednesday. Death came to her suddenly on the morning of March 15th, bringing grief to her many friends. She had lived such a beautiful and exemplary life that she was regarded as one of the noblest characters of young womanhood in this section. She was a loyal and devoted member of St. Peter's Catholic church, Westernport, Md. While she was crowned with all the virtues making life purest and best, she was not blessed with good health and for several years had been a patient sufferer. On the tomb of General Montcalm in the chapel of a convent of Quebec is this inscription. "Fate denied him victory but blessed him with a glorious immortality." Providence denied Maggie Cleary vigorous health but blessed her with a glorious immortality, not only in the life beyond but in the hearts of her many friends. K.

MARGARET REBECCA LEGGE.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Rebecca Legge, of Auaora, W. Va., occurred in Oakland on Tuesday of this week, the deceased lady having died on Saturday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Schrock with whom she had made her home for some years. Mrs. Legge was born on March 15th, 1842. Her husband, abrother of Mr. George W. Legge, of Oakland, died in 1903. Mrs. Legge was ill for about two weeks, but her condition was not considered serious until the evening prior to her death. The funeral was conducted by the Rev. Woods, pastor of the Aurora Lutheran church of which Mrs. Legge was a life long and consistent member.

MRS. BERNHARDT STEIDING.

Mrs. Bernhardt Steiding died at her home near Deer Park, last Friday. The funeral services were held in the Lutheran church at Deer Park, Tuesday at 10 o'clock a. m. and were conducted by Rev. O. A. L. Bremer, pastor of the Oakland Lutheran church. The interment took place in the Deer Park cemefery. The deceased is survived by her husband. She was aged 71 years.

Otherwise William is O. K.

My husband, William Stikes, left my bed and board just before election day without just cause or provocation. All persons are warned against boarding or trusting him on my account, as I will not be responsible for the results, as he is a loafer, a drunkard, a liar and a Bull Moose.—Springfield (Mo) Leader.

An Unlabeled Suitcase.

The first arrest under the new provision of the West Virginia dry law was made at Piedmont Saturday when an Italian was arrested for carrying a suitcase containing two dozen bottles of beer without the required label on the outside. Justice Baer fined him $100 and 60 days in jail.

Miss Clara Tibbetts, of Bloomington, and Miss Pearl Walker, of Kitzmiller, have opened a millinery store at the latter place.

ARBOR AND HIGHWAY DAY.

Free Trees for Roadside Planting to Aid in Making it of Practical Value to the State.

Arbor and Highway Day by proclamation of the Governor Friday, April 9th, has this year a special significance, because it is the first anniversary of the passage of the Roadside Tree Law by the Legislature of 1914. This law places all trees now growing beside the roadways or along the streets of incorporated towns under the supervision of the State. In addition to the care and protection of existing trees, the law provides for the planting of new ones.

The State has spent approximately $15,000,000.00 in constructing improved roads which compare favorably with any in the country. The next step in their improvement is to beautify them and make them more attractive by the planting of shade trees. What is more attractive than a well-shaded street or roadway, particularly if the trees are uniform in size and kind, giving a distinctive character that cannot be obtained except by systematic effort and the execution of carefully thought out and well executed plans? The State Board of Forestry, which is charged with the administration of the Roadside Tree Law, is prepared to cooperate with towns, associations and individuals in the work of planting trees along the streets and highways.

Suitable trees can be purchased and planted along Maryland's highways at a cost of $1 to $2 each. Trees that grow to a large size should be spaced not less thon 50 feet apart, while those that do not reach as great size should be spaced from 30 to 40 feet apart. In the first case it would take about 200 trees to the mile, and in the second 300 to 350 to the mile Is there any other investment that would bring a better return in public benefit or would there be a more appropriate way of celebrating Arbor Day? So many people would be directly benefited by the planting of the trees that a small contribution from a large number would easily pay the cost of the work, and give each a financial interest in an investment for the welfare of the community.

In order to assist in this movement and furnish demonstrations of well-shadded highways, the State Board of Forestry will furnish free either Locust or Tulip Poplar trees for a mile of planting in each County of the State, also supplying a competent man to supervise the work under the following conditions: The mile to be planted must be along an improved road outside of the corporate limits of any town, and the abutting property owners must all have given their approval of the planting; the trees will be planted within the right-of-way of the road; where Tulip Poplar is used they shall be not less than 50 feet apart, where Locust is used not less than 30 feet. The applications will be considered in the order in which they are received, but the State Board of Forestry reserves the right to accept the proposition that offers the best opportunity for demonstration in each County.

This offer is open to County Commissioners, associations or individuals that may be interested. With Arbor Day and the planting time at hand, it is important that quick action be taken.

Oakland Girls Won At Midland.

The most exciting basketball game of the season was played at Midland on last Friday night between the Oakland and the Midland girls. The game throughout was full of thrills and the enormous crowd gathered to witness the game cheered lustily at the clever playing on both sides. At the end of the first half Oakland led Midland by six points, but in the second half the Midland girls gathered themselves together and piled up enough points to tie at the sound of the whistle with the score 15 to 15.

The referee, through no fault of his own, announced that the score was 15 to 14 in favor of the Oakland girls but the score had not been correctly counted and the spectators left the hall. With no one to witness the extra quarter necessary to decide the game, it was not played and stood a tie.

The lineup:

Oakland		Midland
Hendrickson	F	Marshall
Thrasher	F	Winner
Sincell	C	Mc Gowan
Clark	S C	Beverage McGuire
Bush	G	Russell
Ravenscroft	G	Gibson

Field Goals—Hendrickson 2, Thrasher 3, Marshall 3, Winner 2.

Fouls Goals—Hendrickson 5 out of 11, Marshall 2 out of 8, Winner 3 out of 8.

Referee—McGuire.
Umpire—Naylor.
Scorer—Firlie.

Every school teacher in Garrett county should prepare for the observance of Arbor Day.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING

Held at The Court House Tuesday Night.

The Oakland Board of Trade held a meeting in the court room Tuesday night with about sixty persons representing the business interests of Oakland present.

The committee to solicit members reported that fifty names had been secured.

Secretary Blake, of the Chamber of Commerce, Cumberland, delivered an address—rather a practical talk, full of suggestions and illustrations of the way to build up a live progressive organization, taking in the best interests of the county.

The following board of directors were appointed: Edward Offutt, Jr., Senator H. J. Speicher, W. H. Smouse, Henry Lauer, C. F. Hammond, Thomas Gonder, and D. M. Dixon.

Another meeting will be held in two weeks. The board of directors will select the Secretary. The by-laws will be considered at the next meeting.

It was suggested that the dues be fixed at one dollar a month, and farmers who join the association be assessed a fee of $5 a year.

A Farmers Institute.

Tomorrow the Citizens National Bank at Frostburg will have charge of a Farmers' Institute which is to be held at the Lyric Theatre there. The object of the institute is to arouse interest in potato culture and to that end a number of experts will be present and deliver addresses.

Arrangements are being made to serve dinner to out-of-town farmers for which no charge will be made. The bank has sent out hundreds of invitations and expect enough responses to make the institute successful.

This is but one of the many steps the Citizens Bank will make use of to arouse interest in the local growing of seed potatoes.

Boost Garrett county. Boost enthusiastically.

SAINT PATRICK'S SOCIAL

Held at The Presbyterian Manse Friday Night.

On Friday evening, March 19, a very enjoyable St. Patrick's social was held at the Presbyterian manse, Dr. and Mrs. John C. Ely being host and hostess.

Despite the inclement weather more than fifty guests were present. The following musical and literary program was rendered with charming effect:

Selection, M. E. S. S. Orchestra; vocal solo, Miss Allie Trayer; song, O. H. S. Glee Club; piano duet, Misses Lois Fraley and Isabel Hamill; vocal duet, Harold Conneway and Joe Rathbun; reading, Miss June Dunnington; piano duet, Misses Frances and Isabel Hamill; song, O. H. S. Glee Club; piano duet, Mrs. C. E. Bender, Ross Isenberg; selection, M. E. S. S. Orchestra; song, O. H. S. Glee Club; selection, orchestra.

After being entertained by the sweet strains of music, dainty refreshments were served.

One of the features of the evening was a measuring game. All those who took part in this game paid five cents per foot of their statute. The heights ranged from three to six feet, more or less. A nice sum was realized.

On Saturday afternoon, April 3d, the Methodist Aid Society will hold an exchange in Sturgiss' Pharmacy. They will have on sale eggs, bread, cake, rolls and pies. This is the Saturday before Easter. All special orders for any of the above leave with Mrs. Jackson.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions on the death of J. Roy Hammond, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hammond, of Oakland, Md., were recently passed by the Bar Association of Garrett county:

WHEREAS, In the exercise of an all wise and inscrutable providence, death has been permitted to invade and remove from the ranks of the Garrett County Bar, J. Roy Hammond, its youngest and most promising member; and

WHEREAS, By the death of our brother, the court and bar, as well as this entire community, have not only suffered an irreparable loss, but the blow has fallen with inexpressible severity upon his parents and friends, he being an only child, and

WHEREAS, Cut down, as he has been, at the very threshold of manhood, and just as he had completed a long course of preparation in fitting himself to take up the work of his chosen profession, his sudden and untimely passing is peculiarly sad and the loss thereby sustained is a personal one to each and every member of the bar.

Therefore, be it RESOLVED, That in the death of J. Roy Hammond the court is deprived of the life work of one who gave promise of acquiring a high station as a member of the bar; that by his gentle disposition, his frankness, his sincerity and his love of truth, he had endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact, and was a general favorite in the community.

And be it RESOLVED, That it is the sense of the Garrett County Bar, that while his earthly career has ended, he did not live in vain, for he had established a character, and that character was his career; all else added would have been only material.

And be it RESOLVED, That this expression of our sympathy and respect to the memory of our departed brother be reported to the court at its next sitting, with the reuqest that the same be spread upon the minutes of the court, and that a copy hereof be delivered to the parents of our deceased brother.

Talk With Garrett County Farmers.

Riding to Mountain Lake Park one evening last week, I talked with a farmer, from the vicinity of Bond, He had been in Oakland to buy a few tons of hay for use on his farm. He said it was the first time for a number of years he had to buy hay. He always raised the feed needed on his farm. To buy hay or feed was a loss to any farmer. Heretofore he sold feed. His idea was the right one. All farmers should raise their feed supply. The farm should be made a revenue producer. Thorough cultivation of the soil and the proper use of fertilizers mean cash in the farmer's pocket.

Many farmers in different parts of the county are burning lime. Advantage was taken of the good sledding to haul lime and prepare for lime burning. Especially is this the case in District No. 8. Many cars of lime have been shipped into the country. The farmers at different points have contracted for the ditching and draining of their meadows, with a view of furnishing hay for market or for feeding cattle.

In the vicinity of Loch Lynn, Mr. Simon Baker and Mr. Henry B. Harvey have arranged for quite a lot of ditching. Good drainage is a necessity for profitable farming. The farm should be run for profit.

Cultivate carefully and well every acre of ground. Be thorough in your work. If ten acres can be made to produce as much as 25 acres are now producing, adopt the ten acre theory and put the other 15 acres in pasture.

It is not to the credit of the farmers in the vicinity of Oakland that turnips, parsnips and cabbage have been brought and are being brought to the Oakland market to meet the demands of the public and sold, turnips at 25 cents per peck.

Let the garden produce more cabbage, turnips, parsnips and carrots than are needed for the home. Have some to sell every time you come to town.

This is the year for every farmer in Garrett county to do his level best for record breaking crops. There will be a big demand for all kinds of farm produce, especially for wheat, corn and oats.

Switzerland will spend $15,000,000 in buying commodities in this country. Greece has agents in the United States today buying wheat, and these agents are buying from 25,000 to 40,000 tons per month.

This is only a start of what is to come. All Europe will be calling upon us for food supplies, for horses, cattle and hogs. If this war continues America will be the market place of the world. Will we be prepared for this demand? Will the farmers of Garrett county be ready to furnish their share of the order sent in?

This is the farmers opportunity to better his condition, to increase his usefulness, to add to his bank account or pay off a mortgage.

Get the boys interested. Give them an acre or two for their best effort. The proceeds of their labor to belong to them for their own enjoyment. Give them a lift in cultivating their plot of ground. This will interest them in the farm and farm life.

Raise something, especially fine, for the fair at Oakland next fall. Plan to capture several blue ribbons. Be enthusiastic farmers, put vim in your work and life in all you do. Be good natured and useful.

Lesson XIII.—First Quarter, For March 28, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Neh. ix, 26-31. Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Prov. xiv, 34—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I.—God's Patience With Israel, Judg. ii, 7-19. Golden Text, Hosea xiv, 4, "I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely." God did everything for Israel that infinite love could do and asks so pathetically in Isa. v, 4, "What could have been done more to my vineyard that I have not done in it?" He asked only that they make no league with the inhabitants of the land, who were all idolaters, but keep themselves wholly for Him.

LESSON II.—Deborah and Barak Deliver Israel, Judg. iv, 4-16. Golden Text, Ps. xxxiv, 17, "The righteous cried, and Jehovah heard and delivered them out of all their troubles." It is the same story over and over again—they sinned, the enemy oppressed, they cried to the Lord, and He delivered them. This time He uses a woman, but a man went along who would not have gone without Deborah.

LESSON III.—The Call of Gideon, Judg. vi, 11-16, 33-40. Golden Text, Ps. lxv, 4, "Blessed is the man whom Thou choosest." Now the oppressors are the Midianites, and the oppression is very severe—so great that if a little grain is to be kept for one's own use it must be thrashed in secret. Gideon while thus occupied is visited by the Lord (verse 14) and called to be the deliverer, strengthened by the assurance that the one who sent him would be surely with him (verses 14-16).

LESSON IV.—Gideon and the Three Hundred, Judg. vii, 1-8, 16-23. Golden Text, Zech. iv, 6, "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts." The sifting of an army of 32,000 down to 300 because all the rest were afraid or loved their own comfort was a very unusual proceeding and suggests the question, How many professed followers of Christ today are ready wholly to renounce self and follow Him fully?

LESSON V.—The Birth of Samson, Judg. xiii, 8-16, 24, 25. Golden Text, Judg. xiii, 4, "Beware, I pray thee, and drink no wine nor strong drink." This was the longest and in some respects the worst of all the oppressions, forty years under the Philistines, but again the Lord delivered. Again the Lord came personally to talk with the human agents, this time to visit her who was to be the mother of the deliverer and tell her the manner of the man.

LESSON VI.—Ruth Chooses the True God, Ruth i, 6-18. Golden Text, Ruth i, 16, "Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God." All the deliverers were in a measure typical of the great Deliverer, but this is the story of one who came into the direct line of our Lord's human ancestry. By the overruling of human failure this devoted Gentile plays a wonderful part in the great drama of history, the heart of which is His story.

LESSON VII.—Samuel Called to Be a Prophet, I Sam. iii, 1-13, 19, 20. Golden Text, I Sam. iii, 9, "Speak, Jehovah, for Thy servant heareth." The quarter's lessons seem to be wholly on the line of the Lord "delivering or preparing or calling the deliverer." Now it is a broken hearted, persecuted woman who is called to be the mother of the deliverer, and her song or prayer is very similar to that of Mary in Luke i.

LESSON VIII.—The Death of Eli and His Sons, I Sam. iv, 1-13, 18. Golden Text, Jas. i, 22, "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deluding your own selves." Poor old Eli was in a measure out of fellowship, and God had to speak to him through Samuel. The elders also were out of fellowship and relied upon the ark rather than upon the Lord, so that the Lord humiliated them by allowing the ark to be taken, Israel defeated, Eli's sons slain.

LESSON IX.—Samuel, the Victorious Leader, I Sam. vii, 3-17. Golden Text, I Sam. vii, 12, "Hitherto hath Jehovah helped us." After Samuel returned to Ramah, his birthplace, which he seems to have done after Eli's death and the loss of the ark, he led Israel back to the Lord in penitence and devotion and so defeated the Philistines that they came no more into the coast of Israel all the days of Samuel.

LESSON X.—Saul Anointed King, I Sam. ix, 17; x, 1. Golden Text, I Pet. ii, 17, "Fear God; honor the King." That which God had foreseen now comes to pass, and the people demand of Samuel a king (Deut. xvii, 14). Samuel felt greatly hurt, but committed all to the Lord and was told to grant them a king, but under protest. Then the Lord sent him the man and afterward controlled the lot so that the people elected him.

LESSON XI.—Saul Gains His Kingdom, I Sam. xi. Golden Text, Prov. xvi, 32, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." The Lord gave Saul a victory over the Ammonites and thus the esteem of the people. He also gave Saul victory over his own spirit so that he could forgive his enemies (x, 27; xi, 13).

LESSON XII.—Jonathan and His Armor Bearer, I Sam. xiv, 13. Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 12, "Let us put on the armor of light." Although only two years of Saul's reign had expired, he already began to fail in obedience and was told that his kingdom could not continue.

Real Riding Comfort

NEW underslung rear springs make the Overland one of the easiest and most comfortable riding cars in the world.

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

The Overland swivel seat gives absolutely free movement of the springs, prevents binding and reduces possibility of breakage.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

SECOND PAPER

There are other little foxes whose depredations must be guarded against.

Among those may be mentioned:

Fretfulness, the nettles in the garden of our lives and how apt we are it they sting us to hurl them at our neighbors.

Grumbling, too; that is like a chilly north west wind, but it must yield to the zephyrs of patience; while scoldings, the real thunder storm with hail and lightning, must be dispersed by the sunlight of a cheerful disposition.

They are useless, nay worse; they are positively sinful. Yet these are in great part the venting upon others, those morbid feelings which are the result of dyspepsia, overwork or indisposition. Sometimes they are the result of a genuinely mean disposition.

The little fox of fault-finding does not confine his depredations to social circles only, but thrusts himself into the church also, and like Jacob of old takes hold of the horns of the altar, thinking he will be safe, but he must be dragged out and slain at all hazards.

He will sap the life current of our churches and he is hindering the spiritual progress of the members and seriously interferes with the effectual working of the church.

Here is one, zealous in good works, comes forward and puts his hand to the wheel, having only the good of the cause of the Master at heart. He is really trying in his way to do something for the Master and the good of all concerned, yet how often do we find such meeting with poor success and little or no encouragement because a dozen eyes are watching the progress of the scheme and throwing cold water on his best efforts by constant fault-finding.

These self constituted Judges, with the keenness of a vulture's eye, detect every error, and while they magnify that, they pass over with what they call the christian grace of silence the many good features of the work and the virtues of the worker. They like to look at the dark side. It isn't arranged properly. It's all wrong; it can't succeed. The leader is too unpopular. He is behind the times, too old fogy, or too sensational. He hasn t any influence and so you might as well give up the whole scheme, for it will surely fail, and sure enough it does fail, while the laborer, disheartened and discouraged, abandons his task, all for the want of charitable co-operation and sympathy, while the vine he was trying to cultivate is spoiled by the perpetual nibbing of this pesky little fox,

The officers of the church are reminded of their duty by having their faults arrayed before the public. An other with whom the habit has become chronic, finds fault with the preacher when he is doing as well as they have a right to expect, and they censure him severely for doing what he couldn't do to save his neck. Another gives the choir a slap in the face as he sweeps past and leaves it to smart under the sting of the blow purposely inflicted, and while they are performing a very important and honoralbe duty in the worship of the sanctuary, this self conceited fox has his ears pricked up to listen and though he has not a whit more music in his soul than a bull-frog on a log, he slashes the rest with the keen blade of his criticism and very charitably likens their music to the filing of a cross cut saw. He is daft to the melodies and beauties but awake to any error, simply because he is a constitutional faultfinder.

Even ministers are not exempt from the wiles of this contemptible fox but they are sometimes guilty of this sin.

After indulging too freely, may be in mince pie or a big dinner, they go to prayer meeting and finding but few there feel discouraged and vexed at the negligence of the members and thence begin to slash the recreant ones over the shoulders of the faithful few, not realizing that he is berating the stand-by's instead of the shirks. It is a good deal better to be a fault mender than a fault finder.

There is an old adage which reads thus: "Cast not dirt into the well which gives you water." That means that you are not to find fault with those who feed you, nor with the trade from which you get your support, nor with the Lord who gives you all things. A safe rule to follow is never find fault with what you do not understand. When you see one finding fault with the goods, set it down he expects to buy. "It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer." He says it because he intends to buy, but he wants it as cheap as possible. He thinks he will save a bit. A very wise and good man said "Look to your own failings before you look at my faults." The poet says:—

"In other men we faults can spy,
And blame the mote that dims the eye,
Each little speck and error find;
To our own strongest errors blind."

An old rhyme says:

"Many find fault without any end,

Some people would fall out with their bread and butter. In other words they will find fault with the way in which they earn their living and find fault with the brook that furnishes them water and the raven that brings them their bread. Indeed nothing is safe from fault finders.

Let me close with Shakespeare's estimate of the fault finder. He says:

"It is his nature's plague, to spy into abuses; and oft, his jealousy shapes faults that are not."

Yours truly,
JOHANNES.

FROM OAKLAND TO DEFUNIAK SPRINGS.

The route selected was via B. & O. railroad to Cincinnati, thence by the Louisville and Nashville railroad to DeFuniak Springs, Florida. It was the passing from the cold, rough atmosphere of this mountain region to the sunshine of one of the farthest states South, from the snowy winter, to the warmth and flowers of the South, land.

Oakland was left in the darkness of night and breakfast was eaten in Cincinnati about 8 a. m. The day was spent in that beautiful onetropolis of Ohio. It was the city of the wife's girlhood days, where lived her loved ones. Before leaving this city we purchased 12 large sized oranges for a cent a piece. They were delicious but we thought, wait until we reach Florida and get the ripe fruit off from the trees, then we will know what delicious oranges are. We had talked this subject over before leaving home.

About seven o'clock the next morning we reached Nashville, the capital city of Tennessee, our home of some years previous. Now greater in population and a city of good schools and a number of profitable manufacturing establishments. The day light ride through Tennessee, via Columbia, was an enjoyable one. Several well fought battle fields were passed.

The ride through Alabama, in the daytime, was not as pleasant as we had anticipated. The buildings and farms were not attractive and did not indicate progressive farming or thrift. An hour or two was spent in Birmingham, and a glimpse of the Pittsburgh of the South had. Here are located the greatest iron industries of the South. Persacole, Florida, is reached the next morning and a change of cars made, after eating breakfast; a view of the bay had, and as we traveled toward our destination many trees were seen covered with the long moss of that state of flowers.

At last we reach DeFuniak. As the train pulls into the depot and stops at the station we hear the music of the band, employed by the Chautauqua Association of that resort. It made one feel good. Many persons were assembled to see the train come in and to greet friends who were to spend more or less time in town.

The hotel was crowded, we were assigned a room in the sleeping quarters across the street from the main hotel building and took our meals in the hotel dining room. The meats used were brought from Chicago.

It was amusing to see the way they lighted the town up at night. Electricity was unknown, street gasoline lamps were not in style, but instead a stand was built in the center of cross streets, about five or six feet high. The top was about three feet square and covered with earth. A rich pine tree was cut down, trimmed of branches, hauled to the stand and sawed into blocks about sixteen inches long, which were split up, when darkness came a fire was built on top of these stands and kept going until 11 or 12 o'clock. The smell of the "fatty" pine was enjoyed and healthful.

The roads were sandy, shoe top deep. Ox carts took the place generally of wagons. An ox cart ride was the mode of excursion travel. Through the day the shade of umbrellas was enjoyed. At night a few pine knots took off the chill from the sitting or bed room.

At DeFuniak is a large, clear spring or lake, the attraction of the place. As Mountain Lake Park is a summer resort DeFuniak is the winter home of many Northern families, especially from Wisconsin. Wallace Bruce the orator and writer has a cottage here.

A Chautauqua is in progress for four weeks, including the latter part of February and the first part of March. The program is like that of Mountain Lake Park, during Dr. Davidson's days. Excursions once a week are run on the railroad, which adds largely to the attendance.

There are many nice attractive homes in the town, with beautiful flower beds. A State Normal school is located at DeFuniak, with a fine faculty. Two or three church edifices, a number of stores and a printing office.

Before leaving Oakland some friends said, "Ship me a box of nice oranges." We promised to do so, but alas! we were not in the orange growing section of the state. True, we saw a few orange trees with oranges, but we paid 5 cents for two oranges and not very large at that, not near as large or fine as those we bought in Cincinnati for one cent each.

When not attending the chautauqua we tramped through the "everglades," near by. The public roads were free from rocks and hills, but, my what sand beds they were. A buggy ride was not enjoyable on account of it.

The several hotels and boarding houses were all crowded with boarders from the land of snow and bitter winds. To see and enjoy the real Florida and its rich fruits one must go farther east, or to the peninsula part of the state, to Jacksonville, Miama, St. Augustine and other coast towns.

For good road, pure atmosphere, cool, sparkling water and scenic beauty, Garrett county is far ahead of any resort town we have seen in "Dixie Land."

We enjoyed the days spent in Florida and the trip there and back home and often think of the days at DeFuniak.

Real Riding Comfort

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long, in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

THURSDAY MARCH 25, 1915.

THE total railway mileage of the world is about 584,840 miles. Of this Europe has 199,346 miles and the United State 248,898 mile.

THE millinery opening suggests that progress has been accomplished toward a safe and sane Easter, but some casualties are expected when the bills are presented.

AS an evidence of the awakening of Republicanism in the land of the free and the home of the brave the town of Laurel, Deleware, has elected her first Republican mayor.

EX-SENATOR Root's declaration not to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for President removes from the possibilities one of the brainest men in the Republican party.

PRESIDENT WILSON says he has not read Chairman Fitzgerald's statement regarding the expenditures provided for by the late Congress. We are anxiously waiting to hear what he says after he has read it.

WE have the biggest dreadnaught in the world, and we are going to have the greatest submarine, and when we get a few more of them we can confidently call to the rest of the nations, now bring on your bears.

GOVERNOR P. L. Goldsborough has appointed John S. McCauley as a member of the Allegany county school board to fill the vacancy occasioned by the recent death of L. J. Ort, the Democratic member of the board.

NO one can blame Mr. Bryan for hanging on as long as he can. The office gives him prestige on the lecture platform and with the Chautauqua circuit, but the prideful citizens will and do blame President Wilson for his continuance in office.

ONE of the most striking tributes to the United States is the monument planned by the Belgians, to be erected in Brussels, as a memorial of the gratitude of the people of that country for succor extended to them in the hour of their direct extremity.

THAT bungled income tax law, passed by the more or less incompetent Sixty-third Congress of prodigal capacity, is to be hauled up before the courts, on the ruling of Secretary McAdoo, which requires a taxpayer to pay on all profits he makes from stock transactions but refuses to permit the deduction of any losses. The inequity of the ruling is obvious.

THE Department of Agriculture in its report issued January 18, 1916, estimates the increase in horses in the United States during the past year, on farms and ranges, as 233,000. This report does not take into account the horses owned in cities. The gain during 1914, 233,000, compares with a gain of only 67,000 in 1912. The present estimated number of horses on farms and ranges is 21,195,000. This number is daily reduced by the shipment of thousands of these noble animals to Europe for purposes of war.

THE REPUBLICAN is pleased to note the effort being made in several localities of Garrett county to increase the attendance at the Sunday schools of the county and to create a greater interest in the Sunday school work. This is a praise-worthy undertaking. There is no question but that Garrett county is what it is doday because its early settlers were men who recognized the religion of Christ, and followed out the teachings of His word. On the youth of today rests the future development and happiness of this county. Keep up the interest in the Sunday school and brotherhood work.

A SPENDTHRIFT ADMINISTRATION.

Mr. Fitzgerald, the chairman of the appropriations committee of the House of Representatives, and Mr. Simmons, the chairman of the appropriation, committee of the Senate, both concede that there will be a good-sized treasury deficit for the year ending June 30 next. They do not agree exactly as to the total. Mr. Fitzgerald in his speech in the House on March 4 said that there would probably be a deficit of $103,000,000, "less the bulk of the income tax," which comes due on June 1. Mr. Simmons, estimating the accruing income tax at $76,000,000, says that the shortage will be about $26,000,000.

It will probably exceed $30,000,000. On March 19 the excess or ordinary revenues was $86,269,000. Compared with last year, the treasury has been running behind at the rate of about $7,000,000 a month. The deficit at that rate would be increased by June 30 to about $110,000,000, less the expected income tax of $76,000,000—making $34,000,000.

Last year there was a final surplus of $33,784,000, so that in spite of a two months' extra return from the income tax and the imposition of emergency revenue taxation to the amount of $54,000,000 up to June 30th next, the Wilson administration will have set the treasury back in one year more than $67,000,000. The outlook for the year 1915-'16 is still worse, since Congress has appropriated as much for next year as it did for this year, absolutely ignoring the effect of the war on customs receipts. The emergency revenue tax expires by limitation next December. It will therefore yield about $10,000,000 less in 1915-'16 than it did in 1914-'15 and in May, 1916, sugar goes on the free list and sugar revenues will be decreased by several millions. At the next session, therefore, Congress must either clap on new taxation or we shall face a deficit in 1915-'16 of more than $50,000,000.

Any government with a thought of prudent management would have shortened sail in a great economic crisis like that which the European war has precipitated. It would have held down expenditure till the situation had cleared. But the Democratic majority in the legislative branch, so subservient to Mr. Wilson in most things, never even received a hint from him that retrenchment ought to be practised. He made no protest when this Congress appropriated $113,000,000 more than the preceding Congress did and $177,000,000 more than did the Congress of 1909-'11, which was controlled by the Republicans. More than that, as Mr. Fitzgerald has pointed out, he submitted estimates which, if honored, would have increased the appropriations of the last session by $47,341,000.

In one field of executive activity Mr. Wilson has broken all records, He is the most cheerful dispenser of the proceeds of taxation we have ever had in the White House.

DEMOCRATIC IMCAPACITY PERILOUS TO NATION.

Some one recently aptly described the situation this country faces as a result of Democratic control, by saying that a Democratic tariff for revenue, a war tax has been levied without war within our borders, and business is told that prosperity abounds without business, says the Bel Air Times. The National Treasury faces a big deficit and the situation in Mexico could hardly be worse. With international complications growing out of the European War calling for Statesmanship of the highest order, those in control seem incapable of dealing with the big problems. Where is it all to end? American citizens are slain and their property destroyed in Mexico and our government simply says it is investigating the matter. American merchant ships are sent to the bottom by belligerent European nations and the American government merely sets on foot an "inquiry." We are a patriotic, peace-loving people but there are limits to what a great nation shall permit to be done by other nations who have thrown to the winds international law. The supporters of the Democratic National administration point to the war as an excuse for the failure of their tariff law and the resulting destruction of home industries. But the prostration of business began long before the war started last August and there are many keen business men who point out that the mills that have orders are those that have secured foreign business created by the war.

Moreover, at a period of financial and business disturbance at home and with extraordidary conditions the world over growing out of the great European conflict, the Democratic Congress just ended, appropriated more money for public expenses than any Congress before it in the history of the nation. If there ever was a time when prudence demanded husbanding the National resources by practicing the most rigid economy, that time is now. We might as well face the facts. We are in the midst of times calling for steady hands at the helm at Washington. Democratic policies have proved disastrous and we may be drawn into the great war at any moment and without being ready for it.

Two years ago prosperity abounded and the people kicked. No one dreamed at that time that the greatest war of history would soon break out, and that new and untried hands would be in control of the destinies of the nation. But they are, and strong men are deeply concerned.

March!

BY SARA ROBERTA GETTY.

O March, you fickle goddess, we have loved you to our sorrow,
Today you seem so fair and still—unclouded are your skies;
Let them beware who trust in you, for ere another morrow
Fierce storms and tempests, snow and sleet, will at your bidding rise.
And then, aghast, do we your subjects stand:
To see the havoc wrought at your command.

Proving too well oh mad cap, you are on destruction bent.
Shaken, and awed you leave us, yet before the sun is waking
Serene and calm you greet us, all your wrath and fury spent!
And yet—though all these pranks we tell about you
We love you, March, nor could we do without you.

THE GAME OF LIFE.

It is required of each individual that he play the game of life. There is no other choice. It is expected of him, too, that he play it well. It must be played to a finish by those who win. There are no periods in which he may stand aside and watch others struggle for supremacy on the field. He must "hit the line hard" and constantly if he would carry off the honors.

Each one has an appointed place in the line-up. No one else can take his place. There are no substitutes. One cannot rest in the shade while another in his place fights the way for him down the field. The hard-rushing ability of each player, his energy, his enthusiasm, his head work, his constancy makes the record for him as an individual.

When things go dead wrong in this game of life; when the individual is overwhelmed, outplayed, he is often forced to lose heart and exclaim: "Oh, what after all, is the use!" He believes he has done his best, but does not forge ahead as he expected. He believes fate is against him; that a force of circumstances rather than lack of ability is denying him victory, or the prospect of victory.

But neither luck nor fate will decide the issue in the game of life any more than it decides the issue in the struggles for supremacy on the American baseball field or the American football field. The best man wins—the man who has the most grit and endurance and can do the best head work; has the best training.

The player in the game of life who does not acquire his chance to make good; the player who does not get the tryout of which he dreams; the one who fails at the bat on the field of life; the one who "goes back" is the one makes a bluff of playing the game rather than a fight. He is the one who is not willing to make the sacrifices required to become well trained, to get in form. He is the one who makes a run and thinks it enough for the game; the one who is not willing to fight on and on until he compels attention and achieves success.

What would seem more disagreeable than for a crown of young people to call upon a young lady when a gallant suitor was chatting with his hostess around a cheery open fire. But when the intruders prove to be the Glee Club, all thoughts of ill feeling are turned into mirth and a jolly visit terminated in a pleasant departure, leaving our hostess and friend in the best of spirits and humor.

In this, we are informed of the latest war news: "The Allies' left is trying to move around the German's right, but the German's right is also moving around the Allies' left. Now, if the left of the German's right moves around the right of the Allies' left, then what is left of the German's right must be right where the Allies left. But if the German right's left is left right where the Allie's left's right was right before the Allies' left, then the left is left right where the right was right before the left's right left the right's left.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Upon the aged brow of Harmon W. Hesen, today, March 25, is laid a crown of 95 most eventful years. He was born in Isnabruck, Hanover, Germany. He was the son of Louis Von Hazen, a Colonel in Napoleon's army, who had his share with the other soldiers of the awful misfortunes attending the downfall of that unfortunate monarch at Moscow. Harmon W. was born on March 25, 1820, came to America with his parents in 1828. They landed at Locust Point, Baltimore, and later removed to Lonaconing.

When Louis Von Hazen died his sons decided to drop their title, and Americanized their name into Hesen. Harmon is the only surviving member of Louis Von Hazen's family of fifteen children. He is perhaps nearly the oldest pioneer today of Garrett and adjoining counties. He first entered Oakland in 1845, when our lovely little city was a large farm, owned by a certain Mr. Isaac McCarty. The first house in Oakland was built by Mr. McCarty who was a very hospitable gentleman. He had for his guests many pleasure and health seekers, whom was a Rev. Father Wm. D. Parsons, who, in the first house built in the town, has the distinction of offering up the first Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, in what is now the county seat of Garrett county.

Mr. Hesen is the father of a large family, the garndfather and great-grandfather of a small army of descendents. He enjoys life's rarest blessing in the loving companionship of a devoted, patient wife, who ministers to his every want, as to that of a tender infant, as they together hand in hand sweetly, peacefully, praverfully go down into the valley of the shadow.

It was taken to the Stag resturant, and in a few minutes was sliced up and sold, to the disappointment of many who wanted salmon stake for supper. The next order should be for one of the largest fish in the market.

Every home in Garrett county should have in it weekly a county newspaper for the family. This would mean the expenditure of about one dollar and a half a year, in money, but it would add in pleasure, comfort and happiness beyond price. It would keep the children in doors and be a wonderful up lift to all of the family and make the home attractive.

The period of adolescence should be used for development, not for the waste of powers, the atrophy of ability, and a loss of time. The physical transition from boy to man, from girl to woman, must be accompanied by corresponding and harmonious mental and moral changes if a normal maturity is to be reached; and to insure this moral development our chief social instrument is education—more education and better education; education for economic efficiency, for profitable enjoyment of leisure, for the responsibilities of marriage. Indispensable to it are more opportunities and better opportunities for wholesome recreation. Youth demands a positive program of guidance and normal development to meet its own needs, and incidently to prepare for later life.

It was to emphasize the importance of continuing the period devoted to education past childhood, into and through adolescence, that I refrained last week from my reference to compulsory school attendance and child labor laws. That American children should go to school needs no argument. There are some children in the United States who get no systematic schooling, either in public or private schools or at the hands of tutors or governesses, because they live in remote country districts or in neglected centers of the city, because they are sick, or because their parents or guardians are indifferent or unsympathetic to the notion. Such children are few, however, and their numbers are decreasing. Public opinion everywhere in America recognizes that it is an elementary duty to provide a seat in a schoolroom for every child and see that he occupies it with a reasonable degree of regularity for a certain number of weeks each year until he reaches a certain age.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE IN MARYLAND.

How long the child is to go to school is a question on which we are less unanimous. I presume most of us would say, if we were discussing this question with a visitor from Mars or Peru, that in America children go to school until they are fourteen years old and that by that time they have ordinarily completed what we call our elementary grades. If, however, we should go to the latest census to verify our statement, we should find that among every hundred fourteen-year-old children in the United States during the school year 1900-10 nineteen had had no connection whatever with any kind of school, day or evening, public or private, academic or industrial; and that among the children of Maryland there were twenty-nine schoolless ones in every hundred instead of nineteen. We should find that the proportion of children in school increases rapidly up to the age of eleven, at which time more than nine out of ten had attended school at some time during the year; that it remains almost as high at twelve and thirteen; drops down, as we have seen, to 81 per cent. at fourteen; and then falls rapidly to 50 per cent. at sixteen, 23 per cent. at eighteen, and 8 per cent. at twenty.

One aid to keeping children in school is to keep them out of the factories and shops and mines and mills, by the uncompromising hand of law, State and Federal. Another is to make school so attractive that nothing else can compete with it in interest. Child-labor laws cannot be enforced successfully unless the compulsory education laws harmonize with them and unless there are schools for all children involved, and unless the children want to attend them, or at least their parents want them to do so.

Gradually—much too gradually—we have been extending the minimum length of childhood to twelve years, to fourteen years, and now are trying to push it up to sixteen. We have learned more definitely why it would be extended. The bony structure of the body is still plastic and yielding. Important physiological functions are in process of establishment. A large amount of evidence has been accumulated to show the high cost of the pitiful wages that can be earned in three years; the cost in disease, in accidents, in crimes, in inefficient maturity, in demoralized, topsy-turvy relations of parents and children. Boys and girls who work in cotton mills have about twice as high a death rate as other boys and girls. Machinery bites off children's fingers when they are inattentive, as children sometimes are, leaving them "no good for work any more." Children who work are apt to be undersized and anemic. They are found in the juvenile courts out of all proportion to their numbers, are more inclined to the serious offenses, and very much more apt to become habitual delinquents.

THE CHILDREN'S PROCESSION.

And yet, even now, the census investigators of 1910 found nearly two million children engaged in "gainful occupations," more than one in six of the children between ten and sixteen years of age; so many that "the procession * * * would take five years to pass a given point if the children appeared at the rate of one a minute day and night." Three out of four of the children in the procession would come from the farms and dairies and lumber camps, the ranches and oyster beds and beehives and chicken-coops. (That is less idyllic than it may sound.) Most of the rest would come from kitchens and nurseries, factories, mills, machine shops and stores, quarries and mines, foundries and glassworks and printing presses and sweatshops, and from the streets, where they have been selling newspapers, blacking boots, driving grocery wagons, and running to and fro with telegrams and hat boxes and proof and other things that must be carried quickly from one place to another.

We hoped when the National Child-Labor Committee was organized in 1904 that it would be able to accomplish its purpose and go out of existence after ten years if it worked hard. I am greatly disappointed that it has not. A great deal has been accomplished, but, as Dr. Adler, who has been chairman of the committee since the beginning, said at the tenth annual meeting last year:

"Though there is more or less adequate legislation in the great majority of the States, there are still enormous obstacles to be surmounted; indifference is to be turned into ardor, and laws that now lie cold in the statute-book as in a tomb are to be resurrected into the life of enforcement."

With all the children shut out of industry to the age of sixteen, as all girls are in Ohio, we have discharged our first duty to normal adolescence. The next step is to keep them in school.

WHERE THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR SOLVING EDUCATIONAL PROBLEMS MUST REST

It is on the teaching profession that the main responsibility must rest for solving these educational problems, for "rationalising" and "democratizing" the public schools and making them as useful to the boys and girls who leave them at sixteen to go into a factory as they have been to those who go on into normal school or college. We may safely leave this responsibility with the educators of the country if the students of industrial problems do their part in supplying information about the conditions in the various industries and in helping to analyze the various industries and in helping to analyze the various processes with a view to discovering what is the precise training for each.

Education for efficiency is not to be identified with a narrowly specialized "vocational" education. Too narrowly specialized training may have precisely the opposite result. Processes in any vocation may be completely revolutionized within a few years, or the vocation itself may disappear. Adaptability to changing conditions becomes, therefore, quite as desirable for the normal man and woman as specialized skill in a particular process. Points of similarity in several different occupations are more numerous and important than appear upon the surface. Quickness, dexterity, skill in making particular combinations, co-ordination of eye and hand, may be transferred from one kind of factory to another if trades-union regulations or traditional notions of administration do not interfere.

Specialized training for a particular vocation is exceedingly important to suppliment this education in adaptability, but it should not begin before sixteen. The child who has had an undifferentiated general education, as diversified and well-rounded as possible, including training of muscles and senses, as well as of reasoning powers and other faculties which we have been in the habit of referring to as "the brain" but without special instruction in the technique of any one trade or calling, may even turn out to be better equipped to earn a living after sixteen than the one who has been specializing for the two years in a vocation which he selected at fourteen.

THE SELECTION OF A VOCATION

Most children could do a number of different things equally well. Most children, also, are ready to choose an occupation at a moment's notice. The younger they are the easier it is for them to choose. But this is no excuse for narrowing their outlook, restricting their future opportunities, by asking them to choose before they have the basis for doing so wisely.

There are many students even in professional schools who have not yet "found themselves," in spite of more than average opportunity to do so.

Boys and girls who leave school to go to work as soon as the law allows are not likely to be more fortunate in their choice of an occupation than young men and women in professional schools. Usually there is not much "choice" involved. They "get a job" in any way they can—through a friend or a brother or sister, by answering advertisements, or by applying in response to a sign "Boy Wanted" or "Girl Wanted," no matter for what.

Vocational guidance is, properly speaking, a feature of work rather than of education, although it is an educator's and not a foreman's function. Dr. Schneider insists that it should accompany work and cannot safely precede it. The Cincinnati plan aims to keep young people until eighteen in touch with those who are interested in getting them properly placed by requiring them to come back to the school authorities for a new authorization every time they change positions. By the twofold policy of bringing the graduates of the grammar school into contact with a wide range of activities when they are actually ready to feel their way into industry, and requiring them to justify their plans each time they take a new job until they are eighteen, they avoid the pitfalls which lie in any scheme for fitting boys and girls to particular jobs merely by physical examinations or by the tests and methods of experimental psychology.

In adolescence, as in infancy and childhood, normal, healthy living requires some conscious attention to physical defects and diseases. The teeth require frequent cleaning and prompt treatment of cavities. Adenoids may still be there to remove in the adolescent years, may have come back after earlier treatment. Spinal curvatures and broken arches and organs which do not function properly may still require appropriate remedy. Such conditions may be evidence of earlier neglect or they may have developed after an apparently normal infancy and childhood. Eternal vigilance to detect them promptly, efficient discipline to correct them definitely, and a not too penurious provision by parents, or if necessary by the community, for medical and surgical treatment, are the price of normality in adolescence as in childhood.

THE SOCIAL VALUE OF RECREATION.

Recreation in these years of character forming is not, I think, primarily for health, but rather for recreation. Athletic sports, causing the young men and maidens to put forth their strength, to measure their utmost physical powers with one another, or with an ideal bogey, giving them experience with team play in its most devoloped and suitable forms, guarding them by the varied attractions of the recreation fields from baser pleasur, have a social value far surpassing their more health-giving function, though that of itself is not to be despised.

Adolescence is the time of life when it is most important that feebleminded-ness, if it exists, shall be definitely ascertained and appropriately treated.

I have reserved to the end the most important subject in connection with adolescence, and that is delinquency.

A certain amount of it, given a proper setting, safeguards, and antecedents, is altogether normal. What middle-aged citizen does not look back to adolescent escapades which would have come within the law if the law had happened to be busy at that particular spot and moment? If there is a good citizen who has no such memory, I fear that in his youth he was not looked upon as normal by his contemporaries.

A large number of offenses are of course purely conventional, subject environmentally to a necessary condemnation, but in themselves harmless or even wholly commendable when age and need of physical expression are considered. Playing ball is a normal function of youth in a proper place. Driving a bicycle or a motorcycle or an automobile beyond the speed recognized as desirable on the city streets is quite compatible with a law-abiding spirit if done in an appropriate enviroment. We need not multiply illustrations. The surprising thing is that young people on the whole so naturally cease to be "natural," so normally fit themselves into "abnormal" conventions we impose upon them, so readily demonstrated that they are fitted for a social life, better fitted by the complex nature which is their social heritage than for a savage life.

And so when it comes to the delinquent boy in a narrower sense, it is as well to recognize that his early offenses may differ mainly in degree and by accident from the offenses of other boys who are not called delinquent.

On the whole, it is better for the petty theif, the juvenile lawbreaker to be caught. It is better for the boy and girl who go wrong to be caught, but it is well that society, having made the capture, does not itself go wrong.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY, AND HOW IT IS DEALT WITH.

The modern social paraphernalia for dealing with juvenile delinquency includes parental schools for truants; kindly but vigilant truant officers who are not policemen, but teachers on scout duty; juvenile courts and courts of domestic relations, disciplining mainly parents and translating the corrigibility of the child into the corrigible ability of the parent and teacher, of which the boy unwittingly give evidence; probation officers men and women, who are sometimes to the judge what the trained nurse is to the physician, and sometimes more like the consulting specialist to whose professional skill and insight the regular practitoner gladly defers; reformatories and industrial schools and colonies for feebleminded—a series of educational and remedial agencies which among them make prisons and jails for young offenders obsolete and discredited, useless and impossible.

Public intoxication and disorderly show on the police court calendars as offenses of middle life and even of old age, but the problem of inebriety is mainly one of youth and early maturity. Larceny, burglary, fraud, assaults, rape, arson and homicide are committed at all ages, but the determination of character which will show itself from time to time according to its nature takes place in youth.

Whether a man is to be temperate or intemperate, shiftless or energetic, a deserter or a steady family man, a drone or a worker, a criminal or a law-abiding member of society, a parasite or a self-dependent, surplus-producing creditor of society, an exploiter or a socialized captain of industry—if his abilities give him this alternative—all this depends on the educational influences, conscious and unconscious, brought to bear upon him in the character-forming period of life. As the twig is bent the tree's inclined. It is an irritatingly trite and a profoundly true saying.

GO TO CHURCH. Be a worker in the GO TO CHURCH campaign.

This GO TO CHURCH movement is a campaign more important than all the presidential campaigns. In a presidential campaign you get worked up to a high pitch of enthusiasm, exhorting and advancing arguments for your favorite candidate. Here is a chance for you to display your enthusiasm and argumentative powers. If you GO TO CHURCH your work is not finished. You can do a great deal more.

GET YOUR NEIGHBOR TO GO. TALK UP THE GO TO CHURCH MOVEMENT. THERE ARE MANY EFFECTIVE WAYS IN WHICH YOU CAN DO THIS. SANDWICH YOUR TALK ABOUT THE BASEBALL SCORES WITH A FEW REMARKS ABOUT THE GO TO CHURCH MOVEMENT. MAKE AN OCCASIONAL ENGAGEMENT FOR "AFTER CHURCH SUNDAY." NOW THAT THE GO TO CHURCH MOVEMENT HAS HAD A HEALTHY START KEEP IT MOVING. DON'T LET IT DIE OUT. WHENEVER AN ITEM IN THE NEWSPAPERS ON INCREASED CHURCH ATTENDANCE OR THE GO TO CHURCH MOVEMENT STRIKES YOUR EYE CALL YOUR NEIGHBOR'S ATTENTION TO IT.

Always be quick to RUSH TO THE DEFENSE of the church and churchgoing. There are always to be found in every community persons ever ready to make a joke of the church, churchgoers and the churchgoing movement. Go after these persons. Don't let them get away with it. If you can't convince them that the church and churchgoers are all right make them cease their insults. There is too much fun poked at the church these days. Even the churchgoing man is tempted to join in the laugh which greets some cheap joker who attacks sacred things. Honor to the man who rebuffs the cheap wit. Secretly his fellows will admire him for it.

Little Problems of Married Life

By William George Jordan

[Copyright, 1910, by Fleming H. Revell company.]

VI.—When Pride Comes Between the Two.

SO many of the little chafing problems of married life could be mastered, so many of the mists of misunderstanding could be dissipated by the sunshine of love, so many of the discords in the music of home could be translated into harmonies if false pride did not so often come between! Pride is a virtue if it be the right kind of pride, but, like every virtue, it has an understudy, a vice that cleverly imitates it, assumes its form, wears its livery and often deceives.

True pride is the guardian and protector of what is best in us; false pride is the sullen defender and apologist of our weakness. True pride makes us scorn to do a mean or a petty act, as treason to our truest self; it holds our standard ever high and our living in harmony with it; it fills us with the realization that only royal deeds harmonize with the kingship of our individuality. False pride ever fears what people may say or think, seeks to justify us when we know we are wrong and cares more for the semblance than for the reality, more for the shadow than for the substance.

True pride thinks more of character than of reputation; false pride more of reputation than of character. It is this false pride that too often, in the home, stands between love and understanding, between love and forgiving, between love and forgetting and often threatens to dethrone the life happiness of two.

False pride, an excessive consciousness of the dignity of self, thinks too much of the importance of the solo, too little of the harmony of the duet. It is the swaggering, pompous air of a drum major who thinks he is really the whole regiment.

Between husband and wife there often arise little differences of opinion on some topic of no real importance involving no principle of right or wrong, but in a few moments the frank, genial interchange of views has warmed into a discussion and this into a heated argument, and each may hold out regardless of the growing suitriness of the atmosphere in the desire to make the other surrender.

This deadlock of false pride may be broken in an instant by the cooler and larger nature of the two saying with a smile, "Well, perhaps there is something to be said on both sides, and really, dear, it is not worth an argument, after all." Then peace and harmony may be restored without a hypocritic surrender of the individuality of either.

It is a false pride that leads either husband or wife to fear to acknowledge being in the wrong in any misunderstanding, to seek merely to pass it over without a word. Those infallible people who never make a mistake nor do a wrong do not really belong to this world, and they are probably too good to find congenial companions even in the next.

There is danger in this method that unkind words, unexplained and unatoned, may leave a rankling wound that, if it heal at all, leaves a scar and a pang in remembrance. A few moments of loving explanation, of clear, definite understanding, with no false pride coming between, is an antiseptic process of treating the hurt before it paralyzes emotion. It removes the poison from a memory.

Through this pride, too, we often prevent wounds of unkindness and lack of thought from healing at all. Through our intense consciousness of them, reviving and re-reviving the memories in all their original vividness, we exaggerate and intensify the hurt. We carry a wounded emotion in a sling, as though it were a broken arm, and thus make forgiving difficult and forgetting impossible.

This pride that comes so often from our supersensitiveness is the slow petrifying of the better side of our natures. She may justify herself by saying "If I did not love him so much I would not feel the hurt." If she loved more, if she loved enough, she would realize how small a matter is this pain that absorbs her compared with the greatness of her possession, the good qualities she is overlooking. Then would she forgive and—forget.

Her pride is really injured more than her love. This pride kills real sympathy, for sympathy seeks to see a subject from the other's viewpoint, lovingly to interpret it as it may seem to the other as well as to oneself. Then through this clear, double knowledge the wisdom of the wisest course may come, but false pride stolidly and stubbornly sees everything only from its own point of vision.

All misunderstandings between husband and wife should be met in the very beginning and never allowed merely to work themselves out. It is a cowardly recklessness, the "don't care" spirit of false pride, that urges or permits this easy going philosophy.

Were a fire to be discovered in the home, if it were only the tiniest flame, beginning its devastation of curtains and furniture, we would not say, "Let it burn itself out." Our instant, instinctive action would be to stifle it, to kill it at any cost. But too often do we let the fire of discord and of misunderstanding feed on our finest emotions, burn away love, confidence, sweetness, truth, trust, sympathy—all that is dearest to us—while we stand by, blindly nursing our pride, our petty sense of dignity.

We stand in the center of the stage of our self esteem. We will not be the first to speak, we will not be the first to sue for peace, the first to make up. We dare to permit this pride to wreck our happiness as though any honest pride could be too much to pay to secure it or to preserve it. It is always the larger nature that is first to surrender. Pride that beggars the happiness of two is dearly bought by the petty satisfaction of not being the first to bring the joy of reconciliation to the hearts of both, who need each other.

Pride, too, has a subtle way of putting confidence into a cold storage that often kills it. Mutual interchange of confidences between husband and wife should be fresh, spontaneous and ever living. Some people bind confidence with bandages of egotism and conceit and adulterated vanity till it can no more move nor breathe than a mummy of the time of Rameses could escape from its spiced wrappers. This means death, not life.

Sometimes the husband, putting on his full armor of pride, says to himself, "There is a subject that if she had the proper regard for me she would speak of it to me," and she, drawing closer to her the perfumed mantle of her dignity, says, "If he were interested in me at all he would surely ask." When in this foolish conflict of prides there is danger that Cupid if he do his duty will drag confidence away off into the silence and wait till they come to their senses again. Two negatives may make an affirmative, but two silences do not make speech. When pride gets into this delicate condition, where it is constantly fearing a draft, it should be taken seriously in hand and gently but firmly chloroformed into oblivion.

Why, even in the garden of Eden, where the first married couple resided in a beautiful place where they lived absolutely rent free and they had no neighbors to criticise them and they were making a name for themselves and winning immortality in literature as the first tenants, the pride of both led to disaster. And pride has been coming between love and happiness in this world of ours ever since that day.

There are little rifts in the lute of happiness in married life that, unnoted or uncorrected, widen with the months and years until the music of love, sweetness, tenderness and comradeship becomes mute. So little might have saved the situation in the beginning! There are trifling differences and discords that a few moments of listening, a few moments of kindly wisdom, conference and explanation, might set right. But foolish pride may deter and a heart is wounded: unrest, vague misunderstanding, chafing protest and blighting suspicion dethrone confidence, and a said growing apart may darken the years.

When a business firm is passing deep financial waters, when there are trouble and discord in pulling through a crisis and dissolution of the firm seems tremblingly near, it seeks to keep the inharmony secret even from employees who may perhaps inadvertently reveal it and precipitate a crash. Husband and wife are often not so careful nor so prudent in safeguarding the sanctity of home conditions as they should be and often betray the impending insolvency of the home firm in weak confidences.

The darker the situation the more it demands the strongest light of wisdom to illumine it. The more nearly snapping is the tie between husband and wife the more insistent is the necessity that they should stand together. Reputation needs most protection at its weakest point.

There are times in business, as all men know, when enforced expansion, the better fortifying of prosperity already attained or heroic effort to keep from being forced back by conditions requires the investment of new capital. In married life there are many trying hours, when the glooming clouds of doubt and fear hang low on the horizon, when one or both are passing through the dark valley of a temptation, a trial, a test; when the pressure of conditions threatens to silence forever their trust in each other.

In marriage true love, trust and real comradeship often unconsciously utilize all the wisest business wisdom in making the union that is so near and dear and all to them a success. By their own sterling common sense and fine soul instinct they solve many problems so naturally that it hardly seems they have recognized the problems existed.

ENTIRE STOCK of KLINE'S UNDERSELLING STORE, CUMBERLAND MARYLA N

Transferred and turned over without reserve to United States Special Sale and Salvage Co., of New York City. Entire Stock is doomed, must go; no matter what the loss will be or how great the sacrifice, everything must go, and mighty quick at that. Come one, come all. No sale has ever been known in the merchandising history of Cumberland and vicinity or ever undertaken by this or any other store in this section, possessed the extraordinary value giving power or money saving opportunities that this timely and unprecedented clearance event presents to the buying public, with practically the entire winter and spring season ahead. This drastic price amputation means a sacrifice of the entire stock, all to be sold within the next ten days and will prove the most phenomenal bargain festival ever witnessed, and the largest, broadest and most sensational clearance sale ever happened before, bargains that will create and excite interest and pack and jam this underselling institution. The entire building filled with the highest grade of wanted seasonable merchandise, to be sold off at unheard of prices—sacrifices that guarantee a saving of one-half more on every purchase. Glance through this entire page and you will see that this is no ordinary sale. It is our determination to produce values that will startle and astound this entire section and bring up the best business of any sale we ever held. The best advice we can give our many friends and patrons is to buy and buy early for all present and future needs. Extreme underselling in every department.

GORTNER.

A very interesting debate and entertainment was rendered by the teacher and pupils at Gortner school house Friday night. The debate by six of the school boys was handled remarkably well. There were a number of good recitations, dialogues and songs. A large crowd was present. We wish to extend our thanks to Edgar Kelly, of Mason, who so ably assisted in helping to make the program a success.

A number of people from Gortner attended the sale of Rev. Lewis Beachy at Aurora. Rev. Beachy expects to move on the farm purchased from N. J. Lichty recently.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dodge spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Elmer Shaffer, who has been confined to her home with tonsilitis.

D. S. Lichty has returned home after spending several months in the "wild and wooly west."

Deputy Sheriff George DeWitt was a business caller at Gortner Thursday.

A number of young people from Gortner attended the debate at Mason school house Wednesday night, and report a very interesting debate, even if they did try to prove a "woman had not the right to vote."

Mrs. J. M. Conneway, Mrs. Will Everett and children from on the mountain, spent Sunday at Wm. F. Sanders.

Owen Martin and wife of Red House, spent Saturday night and Sunday with the latter's mother, Mrs. Schlossnagle.

Instead of spring we are having full fledged winter, ice, snow and severe wind.

KITZMILLER

The revival meeting at Kitzmiller is progressing nicely and continues full of interest.

A. M. Craver arrested a man Tuesday who represented himself as agent for several firms, collecting money under false pretense.

The mines at Dodson are working but a few days a week, which adds to the general depression of the times in this vicinity.

Dr. Miller is kept quite busy looking after his patients, as much grip and pneumonia prevails in this vicinity.

V. G. Pew has opened a garage in this town. He has sold several Ford machines and is hustling for business.

Pay day next Saturday. We all expect to be in extra fine humor that evening.

Rev. Bedford assisted in the revival meeting the past week. He has many friends here.

Mr. A. L. Lee, who has been ill the past week, is much better.

We have had a week of snow and winter weather.

BOND, KENTUCKY.

The large band mill will be ready to run in about three weeks.

Mr. Bond has his logging railroad built out into the timber two miles.

F. O. Glotfelty arrived ten days ago with a fine outfit of horses and men from Garrett county and has already begun skidding logs.

Geo. Simpson and Tom Railey, both of New Germany, like the country fine and say the Kentucky girls are just as good looking as the New Germany girls are but they don't keep company late.

Jud Glotfelty has contracted with some local sportsmen to furnish them half a dozen bird and rabbit dogs.

Mr. N. U. Bond was visiting our camp one day last week.

Since the Garrett county boys have built their camp out in the mountains they have caused some moonshiners to move their stills.

OUT OF TOWN HAPPENINGS

Ross Fike and wife of Friendsville, visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Fike Saturday night and Sunday, in West Virginia.

The suggestion in The Republican that the fair officials interest two or more persons in each District, in the fair management, is a most excellent one, says a farmer of District No. 1, and should be carried out.

To day is a special day with the teachers and pupils of the public school at Kitzmiller. It is Patrons' Day. The faculty has prepared a special program. Rev. J. E. Scott, of Grafton, W. Va., is to be one of the speakers. The meeting promises to be one of unusual interest.

The best place to obtain seed corn is from your own fields or in your own neighborhood, selecting a variety that has proven generally successful, says the federal department. If you have an established and reliable corn breeder in your neighborhood, it will be safe and often will pay you to get your seed from him.

C. J. Otto, of New Germany, was in town Thursday and said that, "notwithstanding so much sickness among elderly people, I have never felt better than I did that time I was elected to the Legislature. By the way," he continued, "put me down as from New Germany, where we have peace, not from the old country across the water—all torn up by a big war."—Mining Journal, Frostburg.

Rev. F. Sigmund of the Ohiopyle, Pa., Baptist church, who was holding services at Friendsville, Sunday, will go to a new charge. Rev. Sigmund was also pastor of the Confluence and Jersey Baptist churches. He received and accepted a call to preach at Nanty-Glo, Cambria county, Pa., and be installed in his new charge about May 1. He will leave many friends behind him all over this section.

James Campbell, of Frostburg, well known in this county says this about his resignation of the position he held in the U. S. Custom House, Baltimore: "I want my friends to know that I was forced to resign to make room for a Democrat, and yet, as a Union soldier, I was protected in my position by Act of Congress. Not only so, I was additionaly protected by the Civil Service Board under an executive order of President Roosevelt. But, with a record of faithful attendance to duty—a record unassailable, for the fault of being a Republican I am forced to resign."

For House of Delegates.

Mr. Arthur Lawton of Oakland, announces his candidacy in these columns today for the nomination for House of Delegates on the Republican ticket. Mr. Lawton is the eldest son of the late Samuel Lawton, who represented this county in the Legislature several years ago. He is engaged in business here as part owner of the Lawton Garage. He is a courteous, amiable and wide-awake business man. Republicans throughout the county will do well to give Mr. Lawton's candidacy thoughtful consideration.

CHAS. T. SWEET BURNED TO DEATH LAST NIGHT

In His Residence, Located Along The B. & O. R. R., Near Swanton.

News was received in Oakland this morning to the effect that Mr. Charles T. Sweet, a resident of District No. 1, whose home was located along the tracks of the B. & O. Railroad, east of Swanton, had been burned to death during the night, the cause of the fire being of an unknown origin.

Mr. Sweet had lived alone for several years upon a small farm where he grew fruits and vegetables and also raised poultry for market. He was a man of rather eccentric characteristics.

Indications of a fire were noticed by the people of Swanton during last evening, but before they could get to the burning house it was in ashes and only the charred remains of the occupant of the place were found.

Newspaper Advertising.

The Buffalo Times got it right when it said: "When business men shall have fully awakened to the realization that right newspaper advertising is the great first cause in business and trade activity its off spring, they will no longer seek futilely here and there to account for commercial stagnation; they will stop assigning power to make or mar legitimate business prosperity to this or that vague, indefiniable 'condition,' and will lay stronger hold upon this always-available first principle of business—newspaper advertising.

Plans For Arbor Day.

Governor Goldsborough having designated, Friday, April 9, as Arbor and Highway Day in Maryland, the State Board of Education requests that the day be appropriately observed in every school. Information is given that teachers will find material in the year book for a suitable program for the day.

ARBOR AND HIGHWAY DAY

The Governor's Letter To The Boys and Girls of Maryland.

My Dear Children:

It is the duty of the Governor once a year to proclaim and set apart a day to be observed as Arbor and Highway Day.

This year I have felt a desire greater than ever before to get more closely in touch with each boy and girl in Maryland, and to urge you to study and learn to love the beautiful things in nature which surround us. I cannot hope to meet you face to face, but we can get together in another way, so I am going to have a little talk with you through the medium of this letter.

I want you all to realize that each one of you, even though still young, "is a partner in the well-being of our State, and that each partner should do his or her share to add to the fair fame of Maryland," by building up character at school, and creating in yourselves and in others a love and appreciation of kindliness, usefulness and beauty.

An old proverb says, "What you would have appear in the nation's life you must put into the public schools." So you will all see how important it is that you should now, while in school, learn to do your part in making the world in which you live more attractive and pleasant, so that everyone around you will be glad to know you. Be faithful in your studies, show cheerfulness and kindliness in your intercourse with your playmates, and when you pray for the blessings from nature remember that you can often put some part of your prayer into work which in time will grow so as to become the answer to your own prayers.

Arbor Day is essentially the day when we should study nature, and do some act to help her, while at the same time laying plans to beautify our homes, our school and improve our streets and highways. Nothing creates or holds our love for home as much as beauty and attractiveness of surrounding. It is for you children to begin now to plant flowers and trees, and to protect and be kind to birds and animals. Study all about them and learn to care for them. Plant trees at your school, at your home and along the roadside. It takes many years for a tree to become great, but plant one now so that you and it may grow up together, and in years to come you can say with pride, "That is my tree." If you have a home in the country make friends of the birds, learn to know them and their ways. Study the many things they do that are helpful to man. Give them nest boxes and protect their little ones from cats and other enemies.

For the material well-being of our State, your fathers have nearly completed the foundation or backbone of a splendid system of Good Roads, connecting each county with all the others. It will be for you to take up this work and extend and carry it on until Maryland shall be the peer of any State; until the easy access of one friend or neighbor with another shall create pleasure and sociability and happiness, thus making Maryland a most enviable place to live in. All these new roads should have trees to make them more beautiful and more pleasant to travel over. It is for you and your generation to study this question and do what you can to accomplish the best results.

Now my wish is that you should love your home, sing in it, make it happy and cheerful and hospitable; create around it and your neighborhood beautiful surroundings, so that you and all that know you cannot help loving it and thanking you for what you have done. If it were not left to the few to carry out this program, but the partners would all take hold and help, just think what results would be accomplished

I leave with you my best wishes for happiness to come.

Sincerely yours,
PHILLIPS LEE GOLDSBOROUGH,
Governor of Maryland.

Annapolis, March 17, 1915.

In Memory of Mrs. Nancy Whetsell.

Today, Palm Sunday, marking the anniversary of Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem, we lay to rest our mother—the sweetest and most loved name known to men. Mother Whetsell loved the good and the good loved her. She realized that there was "no room in the Garden of Love for the flowers of truth and falsehood to grow side by side." Everyone who knew her knows that she could not be even persuaded to speak evil of anyone. Her last hours on earth were spent in sweet communion with her children, and saying in audible tones "my sins are all forgiven; I am washed in the blood of the Lamb." Almost as if by magic her spirit was emancipated and her sweet life took its flight to the home of the soul.

By HER CHILDREN.

GET READY FOR THE FAIR.

Make Plans Now To Help Garrett County's Annual Exhibit.

This year of 1915 the county fair should be made the greatest advertisement of Garrett county's resources and productions ever undertaken.

By beginning early, by painstaking efforts, and by united effort this can be accomplished. We do not know the real Garrett county. It has not been brought to the notice of the public.

Much has been accomplished, splendid results have been realized. We have astonished the public and ourselves in what we have developed, but the greatness of the county has not been seen.

The two fairs held in Oakland have done much in bringing Garrett county to the notice of the public. The general public has been compelled "to sit up and take notice" of this largest county of the State, not only in square miles, but in its products of the orchard, of the field and of the stock farm.

Greater possibilities are before us; greater results are to be accomplished. Are we equal to the occasion? Will we undertake the task of placing this wonderful county in the very fore front of the several counties of the State?

What say you, Mr. Farmer? What say you, Mr. Business man? Let us get together, as men, and adopt as our slogan, "Garrett county, first in the list, as a county of prize winning results."

We have the material, the ground, the men and women, and the boys and girls to bring about this result. Will you help to do it?

Now is the time to plan for the greatest event in the history of Garrett county. For the greatest fair in the State—an Industrial Fair—not a fair of races, but an exhibition of what brains and brawn can produce.

The Republican stands for the best results throughout the whole county; believes thoroughly in the possibilities of Garrett county and in the capability of its citizens to produce wonderful results, hence our effort to awaken enthusiasm in the development of interest of the county.

While you are making your maple sugar and maple molasses, do not forget to take special pains to have some extra nice sugar and molasses for the fair. Make some real extra small cakes. Every pound of sugar and every quart of molasses exhibited last fall was sold quickly to anxious buyers. Let us have twenty-five or more maple production exhibits this fall at the fair.

For County Treasurer.

Under the heading of political announcements in this paper today will be found the advertisement of Mr. Walter G. Meyers, of Crellin, where is employed as one of the clerical force in the Kendall Supply Company's store, who comes before the Republican voters of the county seeking the nomination for the office of County Treasurer. Mr. Meyers is a native born Garrett countian, the son of one of the pioneer settlers of District No. 2 where he resided until recently. His Republicanism is above question. He is a capable man for the position sought and in his announcement states that should he be successful at the polls he intends to give the duties of the office his close personal attention.

In Memoriam.

Elva Fern, wife of Mr. O. S. Lewis, was born near Terra Alta, March 6, 1884; died at her home near Oakland, Feb. 20, 1915, aged 30 years 11 months and 14 days, after but a few days illness of blood poison, which came from a small gathering on her hand. Despite everything that medical skill and loving care could do, death came at the sad hour of midnight and claimed its own. We have often heard the beautiful hymn "Some, some sweet day in after years, we'll know the reason of our tears." We feel that it is indeed true in this case as this loved one was needed in her home and community so badly. Death has made a vacant place in the home which never can be filled.

Mrs. Lewis leaves to mourn her sad departure a husbaud and three small daughters: Opel, Evelyn and Audrey; and one brother, Geo. Mason of Blaine, W. Va., and a host of sympathizing friends both here and at Terra Alta.

The funeral service was conducted at White Oak near Terra Alta by her pastor Rev. D. W. Cunningham, of the U. B. church of Clarksburg, and interment in the White Oak cemetery adjoining the church.

The floral tributes were most beautiful and were highly appreciated by the family who are left to mourn the sad loss of a loving wife and mother.

KITZMILLER MAN MISSING SINCE MARCH 8

John H. Connor, aged forty-two years, residing at Kitzmiller, where he was employed as a miner, has been missingsince March 8th, upon which morning he started for Oakland, leaving his home about five o'clock that morning with the intention of walking over the mountain to Wilson's Store, on the B. & O. where he expected to board the morning accommodation for this place.

Mr. Connor was seen on the road leading to Wilsons Store at the Harvey farm located at the top of the mountain, but from that time he has neither been seen or heard from by his friends, although the authorities have been quietly investigating his disappearance.

His father, Mr. George W. Conner, also of Kitzmiller, is apprehensive concerning his whereabouts and will be glad to hear from anyone that will give any clue whereby he may be located.

Bootleggers Are Busy.

By sending the word ahead that the wagon was loaded with nitroglycerin, a boot-legger succeeded in hauling a load of booze from Oakland to Grafton, W. Va. Passing teams of horses and farmers stood with bated breath as the outfit passed with its "dare-devil" driver bouncing about on the seat, whipping up the horses and thundering over rocks.

He didn't stop until he arrived at the Wendel coal mines, a few miles beyond Grafton. The 200 gallons of booze on board was quickly sold, after which the bootlegger auctioned off his wagon and team. The outfit was sold for $200. It is said the receipts from the entire sale were sufficient to maintain the bootlegger in comfort the remainder of his life.

PURCHASED LOT AND WILL BUILD

New Residence to Be Erected By Mr. Andrew Gonder on Centre Street.

Mr. W. A Gonder, of Oakland, has purchased from Miss Alice Hessen a lot fronting on Centre street, and adjoining the grammar school lot, and will erect a dwelling thereon in a short time.

The lot has a frontage of 150 feet with a depth of 82½ feet and is most desirably located for residential purposes.

Team Plunges Over Bank.

The team owned and driven by Geo. Warnick, of Bloomington, Md., became frightened Saturday afternoon on the Elk Garden road near Beryl, W. Va., and plunged headlong over the bank, a distance of 100 yards. The wagon was demolished. Mr. Warnick was slightly injured, while the horses were bruised. Mr. Warnick was on his way from Piedmont to Bloomington, his home.

Reddish Taken to Virginia.

Sheriff Speicher, of Shenandoah County, Va., arrived in Oakland yesterday morning with requisition paper from the Governor for the removal of Fred. Reddish, who was arrested in Kitzmiller some time ago on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, and took the prisoner from here this morning. Reddish is wanted in Virginia on the charge of forgery.

It is all right to give the boys a piece of land to work for themselves, but don't think that is all their is to it. Help the little chaps get their crops started right, and then help them to keep them right. Father's hand on the hoe by the side of that of his boys lightens the work wonderfully.

Miss Compton, teacher of the Springdale public school, near Deer Park, is drilling the scholars for a closing exercise, on the evening of the 14th. It will be a great occasion for that school district and will draw a full house. Miss Compton has been a most efficient and successful teacher.

A LOCAL REMINISCENCE OF THE CIVIL WAR

Reads Like Fiction But Is A Recital Of Facts—The Heroine Still Lives.

The following Civil War reminiscence refers to the wife of J. H. Riley, ticket agent, Western Maryland Railway Company headquarters Elkins, W. Va. Both Mr. and Mrs. Riley are well known throughout West Virginia and Western Maryland, and especially along the West Virginia branch of the Western Maryland Railway. S. B. Riley, general foreman of the Western Maryland at Hagerstown shops, is a son. Mrs. Riley enjoyes the respect of a large circle of friends at Elkins, their present home. She is now past 70 years of age.

An interesting story of the Civil War was recently published in West Virginia newspaper with a request that it be given more general circulation.

The article was written by Mrs. M. A. Yost, widow of Dr. Yost, formerly a well known physician of Marion county, West Virginia. Mrs. Yost is now a resident of St. Louis, Mo. The article was originally entitled, "A Little Rough Rider of 1863," and was as follows:

In this semi-centennial year of the close of the Civil War, doubtless many incidents of the desperate struggle will be related by those then old enough to remember them now.

One of the bravest of them all, considering the age and sex of the actor in it, was a feat performed by a little golden haired girl of ten, who is now a little gray haired grandmother, living in Elkins, W. Va.

She was brought up on her father's 1500 acre farm in the northern end of Garrett county, Md., and horses were her playthings almost from the cradle.

Two or three years prior to the war a fine bred mare belonging to her father, died, leaving a colt but a few days old.

He said to her, "Daughter, this little orphan shall be your own property if you can raise it."

So Maria immediately got busy, rigged up a primitive nuasing bottle and drew generously upon a new herd of cows for supplies.

Badly responded in fine style to Maria's good care, and by 1862 was a beautiful animal and the idol of her heart.

She could ride like a young Centaur and the horse responded to her will and way as if a part of herself. No fence was too high for a leap, if his young mistress was urging him over.

In 1863 Imboden's Confederate cavalry swept through the southern end of Garrett county, burning the bridges and exchanging their worn out steeds for fresh mounts along their line of march, then raided on westward, carrying panic and dismay into the ranks of the "Bloody Sixth," who were guarding the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in West Virginia.

Rough looking, grey-clad men armed to the teeth with carbines, bayonets and six-shooters, rode through the lower end of Garrett county, which had escaped the Imboden raiders, and began to gather in all the most valuable horses, saying: "It is ordered as a military necessity." These proved to be not Confederate soldiers, but a band of marauding horse thieves.

Poor Maria's "Baldy" at once attracted their favorable notice and was soon added to their booty in spite of all the little girl's prayers and tears and offers of "two of papa's best horses," if they'd only release her pet.

With oaths and jeers they rode on, as she watched the form of her pet fade into the distance, with streaming eyes and a breaking heart, for she thought she had looked her last on Baldy.

Late the same evening the raiders returned, leading several strings of horses and ordered Maria's father to furnish them with hay and oats and the men food.

After supper an armed guard was placed over the animals and the others camped down on a large porch overlooking their plunder.

They were astir at the peep of early dawn and demanded more food for the horses and breakfast for themselves. They were evidently nervous and anxious to get to some safe rendezvous.

The horses were tethered to a long chain in the side yard by ropes on the neck of each.

As soon as breakfast was announced the leader called out, "All come and eat at once, the horses will be safe."

When they were busy with their food, Maria whispered to a brother, "I am going to save Baldy, or die in the attempt." He replied, "Don't dare to think of such a thing. They would shoot you like a rabbit."

She snatched up a sharp knife, and running to the rack, slashed the rope that held her horse and leaped on his back, without saddle or bridle, breakfast or bonnet, and was off like an arrow, her golden hair streaming in the wind like a flag of defiance.

With hand and voice she guided the horse and urged him to top speed. Over the yard fence he went at a bound, down the meadow he raced, and, leaping a barred gate, was out on the highway straining every nerve for freedom. Soon the fearless child left the road and began to climb the steep sides of the mountain. On they went up and up, climbing on until no sound broke the solitude, and they stood in the dim twilight of the pathless woods; then only did the child slide from her panting steed and feel that they were safe. During the long lonely day she set out on foot to forage, and was lucky enough to find a patch of turnips. Pulling up as many as she could, she returned to her hiding place where she fed "Baldy" with the tops and tried to quench her own thirst and hunger with a few of the tubers.

About ten o'clock that night a very tired, hungry little girl crept into the old farm house, asking in a whisper, "Have those devils gone yet?" as her anxious mother gathered her within her arms.

Ancestry certainly played some part in the achievement of this child, for the great grandfather, Captain Abel Thayer, of Massachusetts, raised a body of Minute Men in 1775 and marched at the first alarm to Lexington and Concord, fighting the English forces until the end of the Revolutionary War, seven years later.

Her grandfather, on the paternal side was a son of one of Gen. Braddock's soldiers who remained at Cumberland after that General's ill-fated campaign in 1752.

As Meshack Browning, he was known as a famous nimrod in Western Maryland pioneer days, and was the author of that delightful mountain classic entitled "Forty-four Years of the Life of a Hunter."

As little Maria in 1864, and Mrs. John H. Riley of 1915, she has shown that the blood of a brave race runs in her veins by her firm resolution, undaunted courage and cheerful philosophy under all surroundings and many varied circumstances. M. A. Y.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Little Foxes.

THIRD PAPER.

Every portion or zone of the earth is characterized by its own peculiar vegetation and animal life. It is said there is but one bird, but no plant that inhabits every country. Plants grow in certain soils, at certain heights, and under certain lines of latitude.

Unlike this, however, Pride is a little animal that will grow and thrive any place, in any kind of soil, oftentimes springing up where we least expect it. It is a little fox that thrives anywhere, feels quite at home under any and all conditions and finds plenty to keep it alive in the soil of every heart.

It is the worst sin of the soul. It is the poison that is secretly contaminating the whole life, a plague that is permeating the heart and as some writer has quaintly said, it is the "mother of hypocrisy and the parent of miseries."

It will change its form at pleasure, sometimes aping charity by bestowing its gifts on the poor or casting its dollars into the coffers of the church because true charity humbly drops in her mite. It will even build hospitals and find its glory in the plaudits of men, while charity gives all the glory to God.

It glories in an elevated position where from its supposed heights it looks down with disdain on all below, but it forgets that a man's pride will bring him low, for "Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall."

It will insinuate itself into every heart. It is the rapidly growing weed in the garden of our lives that chokes the good seed sown there and suffers no flower of beauty or fragrance to bloom near it.

It will crouch under the garment of virtue and assuming the form of religion it will profane the very sanctuary and boldly intrude its chameleon like form in the holy of holies and even drink from the sacred bowls of the altar, but "when pride cometh then cometh shame" for it is the fruitful source of all contention. Rather than be despised it will array its ugly form in the comely garments of humility and go forth in the world to attract attention not daring to present itself in its true light or show itself without a mask. Lodged in the heart as the robber who at night conceals himself in some dark alley and waits to sieze his prey, this sin is more likely to escape our notice, for it can be indulged in with impurity. With Herod it wore the mask of conscience. In the Pharisees it was purity of life. So the old hypocrite sailed past the woman who was a sinner fearing lest his clothes should touch hers and he be contaminated. Within his heart he was as a whited sepulcher.

With many now it shows itself in a love of dress, a beautiful face or a renowned ancestry, a noble independence of spirit and self respect. Someone has said "the devil makes us proud that we are not proud." Its effects are deadly. It sent Nebuchadnezzar out to the fields to eat grass like an ox. It let Peter sink when he was walking on Galilee's waters.

One thing we can say of this fox it never feels the cold. That's why so many ladies in the coldest weather go out to parties and theatres only about half dressed. A bit of modesty would gladly assist common prudence and make them dress decently; but pride has such influence that they will die to be in fashion. Martyrs burn for Christ but ladies freeze for fashion. "Pride went out on horseback, but came back on foot. It had a come down and nobody was sorry:" Strange isn't it that a proud person can't abide it in others. "I tread on the pride of Plato," said Diogenes as he walked over Plato's carpet. "Yes, and with more pride," said Plato.

There is a blue eyed little fox, that thrives well and grows fat. He is a pet with many and is called Prejudice. You will always find some who for reasons as numerous as the spots on a leopard do not believe in certain things or doctrines or practices as existing in and maintained by the church so they stay out. Either they are too aristocratic or too far behind the day or too unsocial. The minister is too pompous or too common place; too poetical or deals too much in dry platitudes and statistics or too much given to argument. So it goes. Everyone looking through the blue spectacles of his prejudice and giving vent to this uncharitable feeling until the formation of brotherly charity is so effectually sealed that he comes to think he is the only one who is right and all the rest are wrong. How foolish and sinful too is such conduct in any one and especially in a christian. You need not expect to find everything exactly right in any one church or perfection in the clergy. If they were you would never find one slipping around into his neighbor's flock and trying to swipe some of his sheep or lambs to add to his fold. That is mighty poor business. Its too much like stealing chickens from his neighbor's roost on the plea that he can give the fowls more and better food.

Well, you surely can find one, if you try, that has enough good in it for your soul's prosperity, choose it, love it, adhere to it, but trample beneath your feet your prejudice for all others.

Let not this sin encompass you that you can see no good in the opinions and plans of others.

It displays a pitiably narrow mindedness, contracts your influence and blinds your eyes to the good quality of others. It can't give a reason for its own existence but it is there all the same. It recalls the old lines:

"I do not like you, Dr. Fell;
The reason why I cannot tell;
But this I know, and know full well,
I do not like you, Dr. Fell."

He will not see the other side of the question. His wilfulness blinds his judgment and this is the worst kind of blindness.

Yours truly,
JOHANNES.

James Walker, 45 years old, was instantly killed in the American coal mine, near Kitzmiller, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Walker was born in Scotland, but came to this country when a young man, and for many years lived in Lonaconing. Several years ago he moved to Kitzmiller. He is survived by his wife and five children, also two sisters, Mrs. William Burt, of Pleasant City, Ohio, and Mrs. Charles Cutter, of Lonaconing, Md. The children are James, Jr., Robert, Edward, Agnes, and Elsie, all at home. The remains were taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. Chas. Cutter. Interment was made Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. in Laurel Hill Cemetery, at Barton. Mr. Walker was a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Jr. O. U. A. M. of Lonaconing.

Lesson I.—Second Quarter, For April 4, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxviii, 1-10. Memory Verses, 5, 6—Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The regular lesson would be I Sam. xv, in which we have the record of Saul rejected because he rejected the word of the Lord (I Sam. xv, 23, 26). Samuel reminded him of the time when he was little in his own sight and how the Lord promoted him, but because he preferred his own thoughts and ways to those of the Lord he could not continue. It grieved Samuel; he cried unto the Lord all night; he mourned for Saul, but came no more to see him until the day of his death (I Sam. xv, 11, 35).

It is refreshing to turn from such a story to that of another rejected king, but in this case He was rejected by man, not God. God raised Him from the dead and gave Him glory. He is now alive forevermore, the Prince of the kings of the earth, King of kings and Lord of lords, the true Son of David, yet to occupy the throne of David and reign forever, but waiting for His kingdom as David had to wait.

The Scripture is full of the sufferings of Christ, from Gen. iii, 15, 21, on to the end of the book, but it is also full of the resurrection, the kingdom and the glory. Willingly and of His own accord He humiliated Himself unto Bethlehem and Nazareth and Golgotha that the Scripture might be fulfilled, but God raised Him from the dead and gave Him glory and all power in heaven and in earth that He might rid the earth of the devil and the curse and make it His own fair world, as in Gen. i. He is our "alive forevermore" king (Rev. i, 5, 18) waiting for an "alive forevermore" people to reign with Him. If we have seen ourselves as guilty, condemned sinners and have seen Him bearing our sins in His own body and raised from the dead and ascended to the right hand of the Father and have honestly received Him, putting all our trust in His finished work, then we may safely rest on Eph. i, 6, 7; John vi, 37, 47; Rom. iii, 24, and joyfully anticipate I Thess. iv, 16, 17; I John iii, 1, 2; Col. iii, 4. His enemies made His tomb as sure as they could by a seal and a guard of soldiers (Matt. xxvii, 64-66), just about as secure as seals or soldiers can make things today, but all was unavailing. He makes us safe forever by His precious blood, sealing us by His Holy Spirit, and no power can break the bundle of life in which we are bound nor pluck us out of His hand (I Sam. xxv, 29; John x, 28).

I like much the great words of Acts i, 3, "He showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." It is all so grand and suggestive—Himself, infallible proofs, forty days, the things of the kingdom. He had just as infallibly foretold by the prophets and more plainly by His own words that He would suffer and die and rise from the dead the third day, and if His disciples had only believed His words how much sorrow they might have been spared and how much more joy they might have had! It is helpful to keep in mind the five appearances of the resurrection day, which were probably in this order—to Mary Magdalene, the other women, Simon Peter, the Emmaus walk, the ten in the evening. Recently in Judges we saw how God honored Deborah and other women. Now it is Mary and the other women, and, although Mary Magdalene saw Him first, the other women are the first to touch Him (verse 9). The reason is plainly given in John xx, 17, implying that between the two appearings He had ascended and returned.

What He did at His several appearings during those forty days gives us a sample of what we can do in our glorified bodies. What an inspiration it should be to us to consider it! These women who so loved Him and were devoted to Him, not expecting His resurrection, had bought spices with which to anoint His dead body when the Sabbath was past, but they never did. Believing His word will prevent us from spending money unwisely. Love is in some respects the greatest, but in the matter of service it must be faith working by love (I Cor. xiii, 13; Gal. v, 6). Note the ministry of angels at His birth, in the wilderness and in Gethsemane, as well as in our lesson, and take comfort from Heb. i, 14. Note the "Fear not" of the angel (verse 5; Luke ii, 10) and compare the Lord's "Peace be unto you" of Luke xxiv, 36, and hear His own voice to you in many similar sayings, for all His thoughts to His people, however unworthy we may be, are thoughts of peace (Jer. xxix, 11; Ps. xxix, 11). Since Christ is risen our great commission is, "Go tell!" "Go teach all nations!" "Go into all the world!" (Verses 7, 10, 19; Mark xvi, 15.) And if we are not obedient great will be our loss. It is ours to be obedient, to go quickly and tell. He will see to the results. There is no use talking about the power of His resurrection unless His love constrains us to make it known. A commentator reminds us that the devil paid large money to have a lie proclaimed (verses 11-15), but our Lord sends us forth with the truth and stays by us to provide all things (verses 16-20).

Real Riding Comfort

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

Orders are now being taken for immediate delivery.

PARCEL POST OFFICIALLY SHOWN UP

J. Lyden White Comments on The Report of the Investigating Committee.

The National Retail Hardware Association has been the most persistent and consistent of all organized parcel post critics; Secretary Corey has been the foremost of all retailers' officials in exposing the favoritism and general unfairness of the system, and I have been roundly abused for my continued hammering at this grand humbug. All this being so, our members will surely find satisfaction in the knowledge that the entire stand of the Association, Secretary Corey, and your correspondent, has now been officially, Congressionally endorsed.

THE JOINT COMMITTEE.

In 1912 a joint committee was created to investigate parcel post in general. The committee did little until 1914, practically commencing its work in March of that year, and it has now issued its report. The Senate members of the committee are Senator Bristow of Kansas, Chairman; Senator Bryan of Florida and Senator Townshend of Michigan. The House members are Congressman David J. Lewis of Maryland and Congressman David E. Finley of South Carolina.

SPECIAL INTERESTS.

Your officials and correspondent, the Association itself, have claimed that parcel post as thus far conducted has been run for the especial benefit of the mail order house, and that the laws creating it have been over ridden, the regulations controlling it, and its general management made of it a class, a monopoly-helping, a generally unfair and undemocratic function of government. Every criticism made upon parcel post in this bulletin has been confirmed, and other evils exposed by the report of the committee of Congress. In substitution of this, I submit, without further argument, a few quotations from the report, and as indicative of the fairness of this report it may be well to note that the three senators of the committee are, respectively, Progressive Republican, Democrat and Regular Republican.

THE NUMBER OF OFFICES

Reports were received from 37,745 offices. The total number of offices in operation at the beginning of the period covered by the count was 56,974; this number varied somewhat from week to week by reason of the establishment of some new offices and the discontinuance of other offices.

Of the offices failing to report only 8 are in cities having a population of 100,000 or more. The largest and most important office that refused to give the committee the information requested was that at Washington, D. C., where the postmaster, instead of giving the desired information, wrote to the committee declining to do so.

THE SYSTEM IN CONFUSION

It is impossible to determine the cost of the parcel post service or the revenue that is derived from it. Any estimate is merely a guess. The law originally made provision for a special stamp by which the receipts could with some accuracy be obtained, but the refusal of the department to use the special stamp as the law provided that it should and the further merging of third and fourth class postage has thrown the whole accounting system into complete confusion. Hundreds of thousands of books and pamphlets that formerly went through the mails as third class matter at eight cents a pound are now shipped by freight from commercial centers like Chicago and New York City to distributing points throughout the country and are then distributed under the low zone rates provided in the orders the Postmaster General, so that the revenue derived from these sources has been greatly reduced.

SIGNIFICANT FACTS

The reports demonstrate to a striking degree the fact that the great bulk of the parcel post business originates with shippers in a few large cities, and that the extent to which the system is being utilized by farmers, residents of small towns, and the average citizen not engaged in a mail order business is very slight. It is a significant fact that of the 37,745 post offices reporting only 697 reported outgoing parcel post business in excess of their incoming business. In other words, of the offices reporting, 98.15 per cent received more parcel post matter than they sent out, and only 1.85 per cent. dispatched a greater number of parcels than they received from other offices. Even more illuminating in the fact that 46,514,698 of the 77,539,521 parcels dispatched were sent out from the two offices—New York City with 26,695,489 (not including Brooklyn, which dispatched more than 3,000,000) and Chicago with 19,812,210. These two offices sent out, then, sixty per cent. of all the fourth-class matter dispatched from the 37,745 reporting offices during the six weeks period uder consideration.

While New York City dispatched 26,696,489 pieces of parcel post, it received but 1,895,458 by parcel post, or seven per cent as much as was sent out; and the percentage of incoming as compared with outgoing parcel mail at Chicago is little better.

The tremendous amount of merchandise sent out by mail order houses of these cities is, of course, the explanation of this condition.

A table shows that the total number of offices where the postmaster gave farm products as in whole or in part responsible for the excess of outgoing mail was forty-eight, and it will be observed that in the forty-eight offices where farm products are mentioned as in whole or in part responsible for the excess parcel post business the total number of parcels mailed was but 7,225, while there were 126 offices that mentioned mail order merchandise as responsible for the excess, and the total outgoing business 182 from these 16 offices aggregated 55,786,182 packages, an excess of 48,224,290. In addition to this must be considered the excess for books and catalogues, the greater part of which, according to the reports, was the catalogues of the mail order concerns. Combining the two shows an excess mail order business aggregating 74,783,645 parcels, while excess farm products business was, 7,225.

A further examination of this table shows that the total excess of 83,369,905 parcels of outgoing business from the 505 offices, 74,783,645 parcels originated in the offices where the mail order business prevailed, showing that over seven-eighths of the excess business was due to merchant mail order business, or that the mail order houses, so far as this excess business is concerned, are doing over seven times as much of the business as all other industries combined.

The failure of the parcel post thus far to justify the predictions made for it as a means of direct transportation from the farm to the consumer of farm products is, in fact, clearly indicated by the reports from New York City and Chicago showing the great disparity between incoming and outgoing fourth-class mail, and also by the amount of business done by the offices located in the farming communities throughout the Nation. Of the 37,745 reporting, but 419 of them were first class, while 37,326 were of the second, third and fourth classes. The 419 first-class offices dispatched in round numbers 70,000,000 packages, while the entire 37,326 of the other grades dispatched only 7,000,000.

But this is further forcibly illustrated by a comparison of the outgoing parcel post mail of the first, second and third class post offices with that of the fourth-class offices. Of the 37,745 offices reporting, 6,992 were of the presidential grade, comprising the first, second and third classes, and 30,753 were of the fourth class, the smaller offices. From the 6,992 presidential offices there were dispatched during the period of the count 75,697,892 packages of fourth-class mail, while from the 30,753 fourth-class offices there were dispatched but 1,841,629, showing that the outgoing parcel post from the small offices is insignificant as compared to that out of the large cities.

From the foregoing it will be seen that, as I have repeatedly claimed, "marketing by mail," the purchase of goods from the farm by city consumers, is a rank failure, or worse, a case of false-pretense intended to cloak the fact that parcel post such as we have is the rankest sort of class legislation, the prostitution of what should be the Government's cleanest function, for the advantage of a favored class.

DRINK ENGLAND'S GREATEST ENEMY

Worse Foe Than Germanic Allies, Says Lloyd-George

PROHIBITION IS HINTED AT

Shipbuilding Employers' Federation Urges That Sale of Intoxicants Be Stopped Since It Interferes With War Work—Curtailing of Saloon Hours Adds Only to Drinking, It Is Claimed.

London, March 30.—"We are fighting Germany, Austria and drink, and so far as I can see the greatest of these three deadly foes is drink," said David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, replying to a deputation of the Shipbuilding Employers' federation, the members of which were unanimous in urging that in order to meet the national requirements at the present time there should be a total prohibition during the period of the war of the sale of intoxicating liquors. This should apply not only to public houses but also to private clubs, so as to operate equally will all classes, they declared.

The success of the war, the chancellor said, is now purely a question of munitions and equipment. This, he said, was not only his own conviction but that of Sir John French and, he believed, of Lord Kitchener. He added that King George received him in audience and that the king was very deeply concerned with the drink question. The king's concern, Mr. Lloyd-George said, certainly was shared by his subjects.

The federation's representatives declared that partial prohibition is useless and that the consensus of opinion among the workers themselves favored total prohibition. Notwithstanding the fact that work is carried on Sundays and there is other overtime, they said the output actually is less than it was before the war and in many cases the workmen work fewer hours.

Eighty per cent of this, the deputation said, can be attributed to drink. It is admitted there are many and strenuous exceptions, but the efforts of these are overbalanced by the idleness of others. The receipts of the saloons near the yards, they continued, showed convincingly the increase of drinking. The drinkers not only drink more during the curtailed saloon hours but buy bottled spirits and drink elsewhere.

RUSSIANS PUSH AHEAD

Drive Into Carpathians Goes Successfully Forward—Bosphorus Bombarded

London, March 30.—The Russian drive through the Carpathians into Hungary is progressing satisfactorily, according to all dispatches.

Despite the opposition of the Austrians and the German forces the wedge which was driven south through Dukla pass to Bartfeld and beyond is being shoved forward, while the battle lines running east through Lupkow and Uzokow are recording steady gains.

Military observers declare that the Teuton allies see now the menace of the Carpathian campaign and the Germans are starting out to make demonstrations along the entire eastern front in order to prevent the sending of any more reinforcements by the Russians.

Berlin reports that its forces are driving the Russians back or holding them in check north of the Niemen, which is no more than a series of relatively small engagements. Petrograd declares that all the men they had in the raid upon Memel were 4,000 territorials. They went there to obtain certain data and they obtained it along with letters written by German soldiers, who bemoaned their heavy losses and hoped for the end of the war.

Attack Begun on Bosphorus Forts.

London, March 30.—The long promised attacks on the Bosphorus forts by the Russian Black sea fleet was begun.

This Russian attack is intended to supplement the attack which is being made on the Dardanelles from the Aegean by the Anglo-French fleet, thus placing a hostile fleet at each of the two sea doors of Constantinople. The Black sea, mouth of the Bosphorus, now under fire, is only eighteen miles from the city.

In a statement issued by the Russian general staff it said a large hostile ship, which was trying to get into the Bosphorus from seaward, was bombarded. She finally heeled over and blew up.

While no mention is made in the Petrograd dispatches of the make up of the Russian fleet, it is probable that the three new dreadnoughts which have been building at Nickolaev have been completed and are now with the older vessels of the Black sea fleet.

THURSDAY APRIL 1, 1915.

STATE Department motto: "If at first you don't succeed, protest, protest again.

No school house ever set a neighborhood back, but many a neighborhood has been ruined by its tavern.

WHY not institute a "tag day" for the benefit of the United States Treasury. It is sadly in need of the coin.

FORMER State Senator Johnzie E. Beasman, of Carroll county, is contemplating an announcement of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor. Several other counties are yet to be heard from.

Now the Turks want Uncle Sam to protect Constantinople from destruction. The first rule of safety adopted by all the nations is. "When in doubt that anything else will do any good, yell for help to the United States."

THE newest battleship building for the United States will be 1,400 tons larger than Japan's largest, 3,400 tons larger than Germany's, 3,900 tons larger than Great Britain's and 6,550 tons larger than anything France plans.

YES Hiram, we have a "tariff for revenue only" but it lacks a hundred million dollars of suppiying the "only" and it has thrown three million men out of their jobs besids. That's what we would call the grandest fizzle of a tariff law that this country ever saw.

THE biggest kind of a Democratic political fight is on in Montgomery county, the home of United States Senator Blair Lee, and who is in the state campaign for nomination for governor. The fight is over local county offices but will determine more or less the strength of Lee in the state campaign as well. The clerkship of the court will form the basis of the fight.

THIS week, throughout Christendom, is observed as Holy week, by appropriate services, being held in the churches of all denomination. The story of the Christ is told, of his death, resurrection and ascension into the heavens above. Next Sabbath is the day of days in the religious world. Beautiful flowers, sacred music, thrilling sermons will have a place in the observance of the day, and many will sing, "The Lord is risen indeed," from hearts full of thanksgiving and praise.

THE Democrat published at Chester, Pa., whose editor is a dyed in the wool Democrat, says in its issue last week: William Jennings Bryan not only neglected his duties as Secretary of State at Washington to travel about the country delivering lectures to accumulate extra money above his salary, but now he is trailing after a temporary Prohibition tidal wave in the hope that it will carry him back to some sort of public popularity. Poor Bryan! It seems a pity that a mind so bright should be erratic in straying after false political gods.

A GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE

An opportunity to attend a Good Friday service will be given to the people of this city in St. Matthew's Episcopal church. The service will begin promptly at 12 o'clock noon and lasts until 3 p. m. This is a day that christian people of all denominations should recognize and observe. It is the aim of the rector to make it a popular service for all people. Addresses will be made on the seven words from the cross. Popular hymns will be used. Easter cannot be appreciated unless we recognize in some way the meaning of the Cross of Good Friday. It puts pain and love together, death and resurrection. It brings to us the Fatherhood of God as exemplified in the death and the rising again of His Own Son. It is victory out of defeat, light out of darkness. It brings to all of us who have burdens grievous to be borne the thought that a cross is carried in every life, but that an Easter dawning appears over the horizon.

Those who attend this service are at liberty to leave the church at their own pleasure. Come, if it is only for a few minutes, and in so doing make Easter a more glorious festival of Christianity.

The Triumphal Entry.

SARA ROBERTA GETTY.

Up from Jerusalem and o'er the plain,
Thus comes the cry and echoes back again:
"Hosanna to our Lord the annointed one,
Hosanna unto David's Royal Son!
Great multitudes are out in bright array
To shout aloud the triumphs of this day;
Children take up the cry and gladly sing;
And with the breeze comes the triumphant strain—
Behold! our King and Prophet come to reign!

What means this tumult? As we look we see
Coming o'er the hills in silent majesty
Our Lord, surrounded by an eager throng,
Seated upon a colt, He rides along
In lowly pomp, by thousands yet unknown
The Man of Sorrows comes into His own.
Flowers and palms are strewn along the street;
People their garments spread beneath His feet.
Through centuries we still behold that scene—
The coming of the lowly Nazarene!

King of the Jews! 'Twas surely He who came!
And yet no earthly kingdom does he claim.
A higher throne is where his province lies.
The barren fig tree mutely testifies
Unto His power, yet will they not believe,
And as the Son of God their Lord receive.
How short his triumph! aye, within a week
Their praises cease and His dear life they seek.
To Golgotha's heights they bear this Holy One—
Prophet and King, and God's Beloved Son!

Palm Sunday, March 28th.

LAME POSTAL SERVICE.

Philadephia, New York, in fact most of the large cities are complaining about their poor mail service, which is all charged up to the new fangled system Postmaster General Burleson has has introduced. In Philadelphia the mail service has been so rank that the Board of Trade protested to the department at Washington. An inspector came along, and after prying into conditions agreed that the complaints were more than justified. Did he straighten out matters or suggest measures of relief? He did. He suggested that the business men in the big down-town office blocks who had suffered most should rent boxes in the postoffice and have boys to go there for their mail. In other words, if they were not satisfied with the manner in which their mail was being delivered, they could deliver it themselves.

Incompetence in this department of the government is most pronounced. It has piled up a deficit of nearly $20,000,000, which the head of the department is attempting to blame on the railroads, who, he claims, are overpaid for the transportation of the mails. Boston and Chicago have lodged complaints similiar to those of Philadelphia and New York. What is the reason for this dislocation of a once perfect service? It is not congestion owing to the booming business of the country, for the Postmaster Generol points out that most of the deficiency in his department is charged to the falling off in receipts for first class postal matter.

THE ODIOUS COMPARISON.

Former Senator Elihu Root, in an address before the Union League of Philadelphia, where he was hailed as the "first citizen of the Republic," drew a comparison between the conditions of the country under the McKinley administration and the disordered state of affairs under the present Democratic President. The distinction was sharply drawn, showing that the influences that prevailed during the administration of President McKinley and started the country on an unexampled period of prosperity were not only shunned by President Wilson, but rebuffed when they had the temerity to suggest any legislation that was calculated to encourage and help business and industry. It was the business men of the country who were mainly instrumental in electing President McKinley, and his administration was conducted along lines that were helpful to business and industry. From that time until the accidental election of Wilson the succeeding Republican administrations encouraged and fostered the prosrerity that had received its impetus from the McKinley business administration. The reversal of this order under Wilson has been the destruction of that prosperity.

In comparison with the prosperous days, Senator Root pointed out what every intelligent observer knows that the distinctive characteristic of recent years has been the conduct of government by men who have little concern in business, and who distrust and suspect men of business. The history of Democratic legislation shows that measures relating to the conduct of great and small business have been framed and enacted by men who rejected the advice of business men. The testimony of railroad men on legislation affecting railroads has been rejected because they were parties of interest. The same is true of manufacturers, bankers, ship owners, merchants, men of all lines of trade. And these same men of business and trade who are prospering under Republican rule were told by the autocrat of the White House that the reason they did not get along now was that they didn't know how to run their business. And so it has come about that experience and knowledge of the business affairs of the country have disqualified men from taking part in the conduct of the government, all under the elusive name of the New Freedom!

THE INFLUENCE OF CHURCHES.

There is much discussion nowadays of practical religion and the influence exerted by the churches of today in comparison with the past. In the cities today, many of the churches are advertising and it is not uncommon on Sunday evenings to hear discussions on social topics, an unheard of proceeding in former times. In the country districts the churches are unquestionably the centre of all that is best and uplifting in the community. Some are scarcely alive but all wield a more or less powerful influence over the lives of the people. Under whatever name or demonination, a man counts for what he is and not by his church affiliation. Today the church is making a serious effort to vitalize religion by emphasing the practical side. We all in one way or another give intellectual assent to a belief in God, but the practice of the teachings of His word, is something different. The church today is holding up the ideal obedience to known duty and the application of the principles of Christianity in our relations with our fellow-men. It is a good sign to see the public at church services but the influence exerted by them the other six days is what counts today as never before. All mankind is seeking happiness but awakes sooner or later to the realization that it rarely, if ever, comes from seeking. The life that is busy doing deeds of helpfulness, bringing good cheer and sunshine, living simply and honestly, may not be rich in dollars but is rich in character and in all that is worth while. Sorrows may come, disappointment, sickness and distress may abound, but the soul that is in harmony with God and lives in the spirt, finds joy and felicity that is unknown to those who have not found the true way of life. The church needs the people, but the people need the church much more. In these times when so many do not go to church at all, and when the invitation to come is so cordialy extended, when the church is so confident that it has a message so important and helpful to men and women, non-church goers should put them to the test. Billy Sunday's methods may not be to the liking of some but his message thrilled thousands of Philadelphians and more than 40,000 agreed to try the new life he told them of.

TURNING TO ECONOMY.

[Knoxville Journal and Tribune.]

The statement is made that President Wilson will turn his attention to the question of economy in public expenditures. It comes a little late, but better late than never. Had he given that question some consideration during the sitting of the last Congress it might have saved Uncle Sam a good many dollars.

But he has said once himself that he had "a one-track mind," and the track upon which his mind was running has not been an economy track. For some reason or other, best known to himself, he has shown a more strikingly sympathy for what has been called progressiveness since his election than he showed before. He was looked upon while president at Princeton as a conservative, as president of the United States he has shown himself to be about as progressive as his Secretary of State.

If in his pursuit of the trusts and of big business with his tomahawk, he overlooked the fact that his party in Congress was taking dollars out of Uncle Sam's pocket instead of putting dollars in, why with a one track mind, it can be understood that things were happening of which he knew not. It probably gives the President pain now when he sees that appropriations were made larger than ever before; but it is too late to afford a remedy; the milk has been spilt, and it wouldn't pay to cry over it.

Symbolizing the Day of Light and Joy

This is that morn—the resurrection hour
Of all the good that has within us died,
The hour to throw aside with passionate force,
The cruel bonds of wrong, and blindness—pride—
And rise into a level high of power,
Of strength—of purity—while those we love rejoice
With "clouds of angel witnesses" above
And all the dear ones who before have gone.

HAIL MIRACLE OF DEATHLESS LIFE

Throughout the Ages the Spirit of Easter Has Voiced the Highest Aspirations of the Human Soul.

THE spirit of Easter had its birth in that dim past when man's wondering eyes first vaguely sensed the promise of the swelling seed, the mystery of bursting bud, the miracle of resurrected life in leaf and flower. Down through the countless ages have thundered the hosannas of vernal joy, peans of welcome to the reborn earth pregnant with its gift of immortality. In every land, savage and civilized, in every step of man's uplift from barbarism to culture, from prehistoric to modern times, each passing year has witnessed the passionate rhythm of wailing, lamentation and agonized despairing prayer for the dead god, until at a mystic moment, penitential sacrifice and fasting, weeping and mourning give way to transports of joy which hail the resurrected deity who has broken again the grim gates of death.

We Christians have no monopoly of the undying Easter idea of death, resurrection and immortality, of a deity who dies to save the world and who rises triumphant from the dead. That has been the radiant principle of humanity's instinctive religion from the early dawn of man's spiritual life. The ancient temples of a hundred different religions have re-echoed to the lamentations for dead deities and their old altars have vibrated and thrilled with the joyous hymns in honor of resurrected gods. The germinal idea is found in almost all the myths of savage peoples. It was the pervading idea in the faith of the old Hindus; it inspired the ancient Egyptian belief in immortality; in the pre-Christian religions of Babylon, Assyria and Asia Minor it was fundamental; while around this idea in Greece, Carthage and Rome centered the most sacred of rites and mysteries. Strange and sometimes horrible in sacrifice were the ceremonies which ushered in the reborn world, rituals of worship which drenched altars with human blood in imitation of the god who died that the world might live. In other places the great spring festival took the form of joy transformed into the abandon of license. But in all these perversions the central idea remained as an expression of man's attempt to fathom the secret of the universe and to adjust his little life to its awful mysteries.

We moderns of today can have no adequate conception of what the advent of spring meant in the childhood of mankind. In a way we have conquered the seasons and adapted ourselves to their changing moods. But even a few centuries ago, man was almost hopeless in the grip of a relentless, pitiless rhythm of superfluous plenty in summer and starvation and death in winter. It was only the strong and vigorous who survived the winter's fight with hunger. The ancient Lent was in very fact a period of wailing and lamentation, for at this time the gods seemed to have deserted mankind, and the earth itself, the great mother goddess of fertility and fecundity, appeared to have died beneath their feet. The coming of spring, the resurrection of fertility, meant that man's despairing prayers had been answered, that his sacrifices had been accepted, and that his battle with hunger was over. In the sharp prod of biting hunger which ancient man viewed as a punishment inflicted by the gods presiding over the various aspects of nature and the seasons, can be found the reason for much that seems strange and monstrous to us in the old religions.

Adonis was the god who represented the yearly decay and revival of life, an annual death and resurrection. His worship spread from western Asia throughout the Mediterranean littoral. He was pictured as bleeding to death with the red leaves of autumn and coming to life again with the fresh green of spring. Often Adonis was impersonated by a living man who was sacrificed upon the harvest field. In the great Phoenician sanctuary of Astarte at Byblus the death of Adonis was mourned to the shrill wailing notes of the flute, with weeping, lamentations and beating of breasts, but the next day the dead god was believed to rise from the dead and to ascend to heaven in the presence of his worshipers, amid hymns of joy and glad shouts of "Adonis is risen from the dead!" It is in the worship of Attis, however, that occurs the most striking resemblance to many of the observances of the Christian Easter. Attis was believed to have been miraculously born of a virgin mother and like Adonis to have died a violent death, rising from the dead at the time of the spring festival. Hideous orgiastic rites marked the ritual of Attis worship in Rome. Days of blood and atonement preceded the hilarious joy of the great day of resurrection. While devout multitudes flocked to the sanctuary, the unsexed priests of Attis and Cybele, to the music of flutes, drums and cymbals, slashed themselves with knives, and in wild, frenzied dances splattered the altars with dripping blood. The effigy of Attis bound to a pine tree played an important part in the ceremony. "The Day of Blood" witnessed the period of mourning over the effigy of the god which was afterward buried in a sepulcher. The worshipers prayed and fasted in wailing and lamentation in preparation for the sacramental meal. But when night had fallen the grief of the worshipers turned to ecstatic gladness in the Festival of Joy. Suddenly a light shone in the darkness. The tomb was opened and the temple thrilled to shouts that told that Attis had risen from the dead. And as the priest touched the lips of the mourners with balm he softly whispered in their ears the glad tidings of salvation. The resurrection of Attis was hailed by his votaries as a divine promise that they, too, would issue triumphant from the corruption of the grave. A blessed sacramental meal and a baptism of blood were among other ceremonies for the initiates, a ritual which included a sacrifice of virility. It meant to them a new spiritual birth and remission of sins.

BOWLBY'S RETURN

An Easter Lily Story

By LESLIE G. SHANNON

HE stood on the outskirts of a crowd surrounding a group of Salvation Army people. No one paid the slightest heed to this man with the livid face and ashamed eyes. Everyone was craning his neck to gape at the girl in the blue poke bonnet, who had just begun to sing in a wonderful contralto voice:

I've found a friend in Jesus;
He's everything to me,
He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul.
The Lily of the Valley,
In Him alone I see
All I need to cleanse and make me fully whole.

The martial swing of the music rolled up like a battle-cry. Many beat the measured rhythm upon the stones of the street with their feet. The hymn was plainly a favorite.

The man with the haggard, blanched face and the eyes that avoided other eyes felt something roll down his cheek. He put up his hand and to his great surprise brushed away a tear. He immediately walked away, wondering at himself. He had not wept in years.

He walked aimlessly on, coming at last to a public square where benches were placed. Here he sat down.

Next day he went up and down the sordid streets looking for work. There was none for him. By some mysterious power, everyone to whom he applied was aware that he had just come from prison. He had often heard his fellow convicts talk of the "hounding of the police." He realized that he was now experiencing that ordeal. He grew more and more bitter as he met each fresh rebuff. "It's just as they told me," he said savagely to himself; "no place in the world for a jailbird."

As day by day went by without any prospect of better fortunes, his seared heart grew like granite. He came to hate everything and everybody; to realize in the depths of his soul that he was not only an outcast, but an Ishmaelite, his hand against every man. He began to wonder how soon it would be before he would go back. At least, there he could have shelter and food. He consoled himself with the thought that if society refused him his living the state would not.

He often thought of the other man; the one who so glibly swore him into prison; who had worked next his desk in the bank; who knew where the money went. There had been hours in his cell when he had said coldly to himself, "When I get out—"

The sinister thought began now to haunt him again. If he was to go back, he said, it might as well be for murder as for anything else; better,

Here He Sat and Thought.

So he began now to look in crowds for a face. He had watched the bank and discovered that the other man was no longer there. He said to himself that when he found the face he would follow it. It should not hide from him. He laughed grimly at the idea. There were no walls thick enough, no doors strong enough, to keep him from his enemy when once he had found him.

It was the end of Holy week, and the florists' windows were a glory. Roses, Annunciation lilies, violets, jonquils—a mass of beauty and perfume tempted the eyes of all passers-by. Even the man—the Ishmaelite, the jailbird—paused and looked in at the banks of bloom in the window of a shop. His somber eyes roamed over the flaunting tulips, the stately roses, and rested on a cluster of tiny white flowers, modestly hiding under their waxen leaves. Yes, there they were—his mother's flowers—the flowers his young wife had loved.

Bowlby, the jailbird, looked down. A little slip of a girl stood there looking in the window at the elaborate floral display. She was a tidy little girl, although her clothing was worn and thin. She had solemn eyes and a quaintly demure air. One poor, scrawny little finger was pointing at the flowers. "That's mine," she was murmuring, "an' that's mine," the finger shifted, "an' that—oh! an' that!" She drew a long breath as if the cup of her joy was overflowing and pressed her solemn little face closer to the window.

The man looked sharply at her. He found himself smiling at her enthusiasm. Then he thought differently about it and scowled. But still he lingered watching the child. Something about her went to his lonely, seared heart. At last he spoke. "So you own them all, do you, little girl?" he asked, and was amazed at the sound of his own voice.

The child looked up. "I was just making believe," she said shyly.

"Would you like to own them all?" he asked, still wondering why he should speak to anyone.

"I love flowers," she hesitated.

"Tell me," said the man, "if you had to choose, which would you take?"

She looked earnestly in the window again, and once more the little claw-like finger came into play. It wandered meditatively from flower to flow-

"I Didn't Treat You Square."

The man gave a little start. "Why?" he questioned, not unkindly.

"Oh," said the child, "because they are such weeny little things—fairy flowers, I think; but," she added, primly and with a strangely old air, "flowers do not become me."

"Why not?"

"Because," replied the child, turning her eyes resolutely away from the window, "we are too poor."

The man slowly drew his hand out of the pocket of his rough frieze coat and glanced at the silver in his palm. "You stay here a minute, little girl," he said.

He went into the florist's. "How much for a bunch of lilies of the valley?" he asked the pert, buxom young woman behind the counter.

"Dollar a dozen during Easter," she responded.

Oh, Easter, that was it! He had forgotten there was such an institution. "Well, do the best you can for 50 cents," he answered, laying the money on the counter.

When he came out with the lilies in his hand, his quaint little friend was still flattening her face against the window. "Here, child," he said, "take these."

She did not speak at first; but her thin hands trembled with excitement as he bent to give the flowers to her. She took them, and for a moment held them close against her face. "How good you are!" she said.

"Now, I'd better walk along with you," he said gently, "or some other thief may molest you."

They came to a tenement, before which the child paused. "This is where I live," she said. "Please, sir," she murmured timidly, "will you go up to our door with me? There is a dreadful boy on the floor below us, and I am afraid he might take my flowers."

Together they mounted the dark stairway. On the third floor there was a sudden rush and a whoop; but the man soon settled the "dreadful boy," who returned to his lair, nursing a sore head and bursting with wrath.

As the two were mounting the last flight of stairs, the sound of a glorious voice was heard singing:

He'll never, never leave me,
Nor yet forsake me here;
He's the Lily of the Valley.

"It's Captain Grace!" the child cried joyously, "from the Salvation Army. She comes every week and tidies us up," she explained, "and she sings, oh, so beautifully!" She rushed through a half-open door, calling excitedly: "Papa, Captain Grace, look!"

The man caught a glimpse of a young woman in a blue gown, on her knees scrubbing the floor. Then he heard a man's voice say: "Back again, dear?" And at that voice the heart of the jailbird trembled in its rock-hewn tomb.

Never the walls so thick, never the doors so strong as to keep him from his enemy when once he had found him! Well, he had unwittingly trailed him. There he was, in there, alone, with a helpless woman and child. Why did he hesitate?

"A man bought them for me," the child answered—"a kind man, who fetched me home. Come in!" she called, running back to the door, and seizing the jailbird's hand—"come in and see my papa." She pulled him across the threshold. The two men looked at each other.

The jailbird's first thought was, "You can't kill a dying man," for the man in the room, who sat bolstered up in bed, and who looked at him with startled eyes, was manifestly ill.

"Why, Tom," he stammered. "So you're out? Well, I'm mighty glad. And you found my little girl? She's all I've got, Tom. My money, home, wife, health—all gone. I've only her left."

The Salvation Army girl had stopped scrubbing. She was still on her knees watching the two men. She had witnessed too many tragedies of the slums not to realize that she was face to face with a crisis. The visitor's silence was ominous. His heavy eyes were fixed intently on his enemy as a vision of all his suffering passed before him.

The sick man put out an imploring hand. "Tom," he pleaded, "I didn't treat you square. And I've had my pay. It was I who ruined you, who sent you up, and I perjured—"

The intensity of her father's speech, the pallor of his face, alarmed the child, who ran to him and throwing her arms about him, cried: "Papa, papa! Don't you look like that!"

The jailbird looked at the trembling little creature clinging to her battered wreck of a father. And as she looked, suddenly the stone was rolled away from the sepulcher of his soul and an angel sat there.

"Glory to God!" cried the Salvation Army girl in an ecstasy. "He's got the victory."

An hour later as he reached the street door Captain Grace was waiting for him. She touched him gently on the arm. "Come down to the barracks with me, brother," she said. "The commander will be glad to see you."

Joy Without End

Now let the heavens be joyful.
Let earth her song begin.
Let the round world keep triumph,
And all that is therein.
Invisible and visible,
Their notes let all things blend,
For Christ the Lord hath risen,
Our joy that hath no end.

Gus Groves, son of W. W. Groves, was seriously injured in a runaway accident Saturday evening. With his father he was returning from work at their saw mill, about two miles from here, and while descending the DeWitt hill the horse became uncontrollable and after running a considerable distance broke a front wheel from the buggy, which threw the occupants to the ditch with great forcer Mr. Groves' injuries were only flesh wounds and stiff joints, and though bleeding freely, were not serious. The son had the ill luck to be thrown on a stone heap, and was assisted by Nathan Knox as far as the home of J. W. Kimmell, from where he was brought to his home in the Weitzell ambulance. Dr. Broadwater was hastily called and diagnosed the case as ruptured pericardium, probably caused by a broken rib penetrating that organ. The patient has been under influence of morphine almost continuously, but appears to be doing well. Drs. Broadwater and McComas are in attendance.

GORTNER.

It is with sadness we note the death of Carrie Josephine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gill Slabach at Akron, Ohio, formerly of Garrett county. She had been afflicted with rheumatism over a year. Her sufferings at times were almost unbearable, but Carrie, with her sweet and sunny disposition, would bear them patiently. Her parents moved from Piedmont to Akron, Ohio, during the past year, hoping that the change of climate would prove a benefit to her health. For a time her condition improved, but finally, after the devoted care of a loving mother and father, and with all medical aid, God came ro relieve her of her sufferings. She was a bright and lovable child. She always had a smile for everyone with whom she came in contact. During the past year while she resided with her parents in Piedmont, it was the pleasure of the writer to hear the pleasant remarks of her schoolmates, and her friends in general, concerning her sweet and pure life. In the Sunday school which she attended regularly, she was always a favorite.

We are sometimes made to wonder why such a pure and rare gem from the home is withdrawn, yet to the bereaved ones, may they realize that it was God who had given this life to them, and it was He who came again to claim His own. May they put their trust in him who doeth all things well.

Carry was nearly thirteen years old, and is survived by father, mother, brother and sister. She was a granddaughter of Mrs. Catharine Slabach, residing at Gortner, and of Mr. and Mrs. Ami Forman of Underwood. Interment was made at Akron, Ohio.

The Gortner Union Sunday school will be reorganized Sunday, April 4th, at 10 a. m. The school has been closed during the winter months, and it is hoped that everyone, and especially the older folks, will take an interest in the Sunday school and help make it a success.

Miss Davis has returned to her home at Piedmont, after a two week's visit with her sister, Mrs. J. W. Baker.

LITTLE TIME IS GIVEN PEOPLE

Both Falaba and Aguila Attempt to Run Away From the Germans, But Speed is Not Great Enough—118 Perish on Falaba While 26 of Those Aboard the Aguila Die—England Is Shocked by Disasters.

London, March 30.—The loss of life in the sinking of the steamer Falaba by a German submarine off the south coast of Wales on Sunday is placed at about 118, according to figures given out by the admiralty.

The admiralty's announcement says that the crew of the vessel numbered about 90 and that she carried about 160 passengers. There were 140 survivors, of whom 8, including the captain of the vessel, died after they were picked up.

Twenty-three of the crew and three passengers of the steamship Aguila, torpedoed by a German submarine in the English channel on Saturday, are missing. The master of the vessel and nineteen members of the crew have been landed at Fishguard.

The Falaba, which was engaged in the African trade, left Liverpool Saturday night. Wireless signals of distress were received from her at Lands End Sunday noon when the Falaba was off Milford Haven.

The news of the Falaba disaster came as a sharp shock to the British public, which has been making light of the German blockade, taking its tone from the newspapers. The huge loss of life on the Falaba, coupled with the fact that most of the victims were passengers, brought home vividly the dangers that lurk in the seas surrounding Great Britain.

Three of the Falaba's lifeboats were swamped. Many persons aboard the vessel were thrown into the sea where they struggled while the submarine circled about, offering, according to stories told by those rescued, no assistance.

The survivors relate that the liner was seventy miles to the southwest of Milford Haven when the submarine appeared. She called to the captain of the Falaba to heave to, but he ignored the order and promptly started at full speed ahead.

The passengers and crew were given five minutes to leave, and although this time was very brief most of the boats were launched before the submarine fired her torpedo. The projectile struck the Falaba in the engine room and a terrific explosion followed. The ship settled down and sank very quickly. Some of the lifeboats were smashed, and scores of people were struggling in the water when a trawler reached the scene and rescued 105 of them, transferring them later to a destroyer. Another 35 were picked up by another fishing boat.

Four Minutes to Leave Ship.

Fishguard, Wales, March 30.—Nineteen members of the crew of the British steamship Aguila, which was sunk by the German submarine U-28 Saturday night, arrived here.

The crew was given four minutes in which to leave the ship, but survivors say, the steamer was fired upon while the men were getting into the boats. The chief engineer and two others were killed by shell fire.

The captain of the submarine hailed another steamer, the Ottilie, and told her captain of the sinking of the Aguila. The Ottilie went to the rescue.

JACK THE RIPPER WRITES

Mother of Leonore Cohn Receives Threatening Letter.

New York, March 30.—A new clew in the shape of a threatening scurrilous letter to Mrs. Anna Cohn, mother of Leonore Cohn, the five-year-old child who was murdered a week ago Friday, came to the detectives on the case to investigate. This was signed Jack the Ripper and written in a rambling hand, threatening Mrs. Cohn with the death of other members of the family if she did not call off the police from the case.

Meanwhile any case against the suspected man who is an inmate of the house where the murder was committed awaits the analysis of blood stains on certain garments found in the house.

RECEIVER FOR JOURNAL PUBLISHING COMPANY

An adjourned session of the Circuit Court for Garrett County was held Monday of this week for the purpose of hearing a replevin suit between Cora Kalbfleisch, plaintiff, and Effie M. Bittinger, administratrix, defendant, concerning the disposal by the defendant of some live stock, Judge Robert R. Henderson sitting. Before the case was called for trial, however, the parties got together, and settled the matter by a division of the property in controversy.

The matter of the application of a receiver for the Garrett Publishing Company, which was asked for by some of the creditors of the concern, was taken up and heard by the Court, who decided that to protect the interests of all concerned a receiver should be appointed, the Court taking the position that when stockholders in a company or corporation were at loggerheads, the matter required such action, and by agreement among the attorneys representing the several interests, Mr. Wm. L. Thomas, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Oakland, was appointed by the Court, provided he would accept. Mr. Thomas, since the adjournment of Court, has signified his willingness to undertake the receivership and will qualify as soon as the papers can be prepared.

Orman Shriver, who was indicted at the December Term, 1914, for taking roots of ginseng from the farm of a man named Wilt near Bond, and also for receiving stolen goods, entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced by the Court to undergo a confiement in the Maryland House of Correction for the period of six months.

Court adjourned at noon and Judge Henderson returned to Cumberland that evening.

THE SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS ACT

Oakland To Have Additional Month of School.

The Oakland Grammar School, through meeting certain requirements of the Board of County School Commissioners, which are open to all the schools of the county, will be permitted to extend its session until late in May. Among the requirements of the School Commissioners is one that two-thirds of the cost of such extension of term shall be paid by local subscriptions or voluntary contributions, the remaining one-third to be paid by the County Board.

The Republican congratulates the of School Commissioners on this advanced step taken in the extension of the school term as the county. It is to be hoped that the school trustees next year will avail themselves of this generous offer and plan to extend the school term to nine months. No greater blessing could be extended to the boys and girls of Garrett county than a nine months' school term.

Any pupil of any public school of Garrett county is privileged to attend the Oakland Grammar school during its extended session.

GARRETT COUNTY BOARD OF TRADE

Plans to Develop a Greater and More Prosperous County.

"In union there is strength."

"A strong pull and a pull altogether" brings results.

The organization of the Garrett County Board of Trade has for its object the very largest and most successful development of the entire county, from Bloomington to Friendsville, from Sang Run to Kitzmiller; from Crellin to Grantsville.

The movement means a greater Garrett county. It stands for more tanneries and more extensive manufacturies and the opening of our coal seams. It also means the development of the sand, clay and other mineral possibilities of the county.

It seeks to attract pleasure seekers and summer vacationists to this mountain summit and the re-establishment of a great prosperous resort region.

"See Switzerland, the beauties of the old world," was the ambition of the vacationists of the days gone by.

The Board of Trade will try to tell the general public about the magnificent drives, amidst the most charming and delightful picturesque scenery of this wonderful mountain region.

The half of the beauty and grandeur to be enjoyed in the mountains of Garrett county has not been told or described.

There are unknown and enchanting beauties of nature to be discovered. The roads of the Eighth election district abound in magnificent outlooks.

The coal industry of the county has not been developed. Untold wealth lies hidden in the hills. Wealth of coal, of sand for glass, of clay for brick and tile, of lime stone for fertilizer. The mining industry of Garrett county is yet in its infancy.

There are openings all over the county for wide awake, progressive farmers, for stockmen and for gardeners and through them for a canning factory.

Our forests are full of opportunities and possibilities, just waiting for the men who do things, and these men who do things are waiting to hear about this great big, wonderful Garrett county, and its inducements to capital, brain and brawn.

They have been waiting, but, alas! there has been no effort made to tell the story. Is it not time to do something to put Garrett county on the map? To let our light shine? To awaken our slumbers and be up and doing.

The Board of Trade is a medium through which the outside world may be reached, the information sent forth, and we, ourselves aroused to action.

We appeal to Garrett countains to rally to the standard of the Board of Trade and strengthen and sustain it in its efforts to develop a greater Garrett county.

We need you in our deliberations, in making plans for the work before us, in carrying on the work, in spreading the word which shall open up the road to success and bring forth splendid results.

The organization of the Board has been effected as follows: President, H. C. Sincell, vice president J. B. Cheuvront; secretary L. A. Rudisill; treasurer, ; board of directors, Senator H. J. Speicher, Henry Smouse, D. E. Offutt, Jr., C. F. Hammond, Thomas Gonder, D. M. Dixon Henry Lauer and the officers.

A membership of 75 has been enrolled. A constitution is being prepared and plans for a complete organization of the county are being considered.

In the meantime this appeal for your hearty co-operation in the movement is sent out, so that you may think the subject over and be prepared to take part in carrying on the work in view.

Be a booster. Talk with your neighbors and interest them in this movement to better their condition, to advance their interersts financially and socially, and to develop the resources of the county.

Cooperation means advance in every direction. It includes the public school system, the good road question, a market for the products of the farm.

It means an enthusiastic citizenship, progressive and successful farmers; wide awake, pushing business men.

To accomplish this object requires your support and co-operation. What are you going to do about it? The door of opportunity is open. Will we enter and win?

Booze Joint Successfully Raided.

One day last week State's Attorney J. C. Renninger received a letter from a citizen of West Virginia, stating that there was a whiskey-joint between Henry and Kempton and that especially on Sunday it did a large business selling booze, that on Sunday, March 28, seventy five men patronized the joint and that many drunken men traveled over the public roads.

Plans were made to raid the joint last Sunday. Sheriff Scott and Deputy Sheriff DeWitt went to Piedmont, W. Va., Saturday night in order to take the first train Sunday morning for Henry, W. Va. At Gorman they were joined by Deputy Sheriff Ernest Hilleary and Mr. Kaylor. From Henry they had a three mile walk to the joint. They hid for a time in the woods waiting for business to open up. After a time customers began to arrive and soon thirty-one thirsty boosters were in the joint. The Sheriff and Mr. Hilleary entered the room, purchased some wine, tobacco and cigars. At a signal, Messrs. DeWitt and Kaylor entered the room and the proprietor Nick Kekeio was placed under arrest. The Sheriff, his deputies and the prisoner were surrounded by the patrons of the joint, who informed the Sheriff that they could not take the prisoner with him. He was prepared for business. They had a young arsenal strapped to their waists. They went "loaded for bear" and they brought their prisoner to jail Sunday night.

Saturday Kekeio received by freight 8 barrels of beer and 25 gallons of alcohol and was getting ready for a big business. He also sold groceries, etc., but had no State or county license to carry on business.

Monday afternoon Kekeio was arraigned before Squire Rudisill under four charges and bound over for the grand jury at the June term of court. The officials are determined to break up this speakeasy business in Garrett county. State's Attorney Renninger is determined to strictly enforce the law and bring to punishment all violators.

Sheriff Scott and his posse deserve credit for the way they carried out their work and in suppressing this den of infamy, which had become a public menace. Special mention should be made of the work of Deputy Ernest Hilleary who had been looking after this joint, and had decided on making the arrest Sunday, had not the sheriff notified him of the raid to take place. He heartily entered into the plan.

POTATO GROWERS' RALLY BIG SUCCESS

Frostburg Mining Journal.

The public-spirited effort of the Citizens National Bank to enlist the farmers of this section in potato culture resulted Friday of last week in the attendance of a number which filled well the spacious auditorium of the Lyric Theatre.

It was this effort which attracted the attention and emphasized a fact known to many of the farmers—that this is a section particularly well adapted to the cultivation and development of a high-quality standard in potatoes—a food probably second only to bread in the economy and welfare of human digestion and nourishment.

The forenoon session, beginning about 10 o'clock, was opened by Thomas H. White, of the Maryland Agricultural College Experimental Station, who spoke instructively of "The Best Seed Potatoes for Maryland," and Prof. C. E. Temple, of the College, closed the session with an address upon "How to Avoid Potato Diseases."

Notes of the latter and two following addresses by Prof. William Stuart, also of the Agricultural College, and Dr. R. S. Hill, Director of State Farmers' Institute, were made by Rev. G. E. Metger, of this place, and very kindly furnished the Journal.

Prof. Temple named common potato diseases as "rhizoctonia," "powdery scab," "black-leg" and "blight," and the preventions—for "rhizoctonia," "powdery scab" and "black-leg"—

1. "Dip 1½ hours in corrosive sublimate—4 ounces to 30 gallons of water. Potatoes so dipped cannot be used for food.

For blight:

2 Dip seed 2 hours in formalin; solution 1 pint to 30 gallons of water. Potatoes so treated can be eaten.

The seed the Bank is getting will be treated according to "2" in Maine, and according to "1" when here.

For "blight"—told by the foliage turning black and its peculiar odor, spray the plants with bordeau mixture.

Best mixture is 5 pounds of bluestone, 5 pounds of lime and 50 gallons of water. The bluestone and lime must be dissolved separately and poured together. For insects—add 2 pounds of arsenate of lead and 4 ounces of Paris green. Never use Paris green on plants unaccompanied by lime.

At the afternoon session Prof. Stuart said, concerning "Good Seed Potatoes and How to Produce Them," you must produce what your customers want if you would sell. Good seed is true to type, selected from strong, vigorous, productive plants, and free from disease.

Take tubers from 3 to 6 ounces in weight.

Plant in average soil 4 inches deep.

Expose seed to light—but not sunshine, 2 weeks before planting—to develop strong sprouts.

Cultivate early, and keep ahead of the weeds. Use the tooth-harrow until the plants are several inches above ground.

Immature seed gives heavier yield than mature, but needs greater care in handling.

It is too soon to determine the merit of the whole small potato over the cut.

If cut—cut lengthwise a 4 to 6 ounce tuber, and plant 12 inches apart in the row.

The whole potato should weigh 3 or 4 ounces, and planted 14 inches apart in the row.

Go through the patch and take out all diseased and weak plants.

When digging—take those hills that are true to type and have the largest yield. This is called "hill selection."

There is also the "tuber unit" method, in which good tubers are selected, planted separately, and those which yield best are taken.

Send for Farmers' Bulletin, No. 593, which can be obtained free for the asking from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Dr. R. S. Hill, State Director of Institutes, gave instructive suggestions upon "The Importance of Soil Fertilization for Potato-Growing," are condensed into the following paragraphs:

The best time to put manure on the farm is as soon after it is voided by the animal as you can put it on a growing crop.

Spread it broad cast.

The crop will at once take up the nitre, phosphoric acid and potash, and holds all the humus.

Don't put manure on land and plow it under.

Should lime be used? Not the year you plant your soil in potatoes.

Get a few cents worth of extra-sensitive blue litmus paper; test the soil with it, and if it changes the color of the paper to red, use lime. Put it in freshly-plowed land and harrow it in.

Crimson clover contains 150 pounds nitrogen, 62 pounds phosphoric acid, and 88 pounds potash per ton. It is a good sub-soiler, and red clover having very nearly the same proportions, is very nearly as good.

Alfalfa is still better, having 175 pounds of nitrogen, 65 pounds phosphoric acid, and 125 pounds potash per ton. Its roots go deeper.

These plants get nitrogen from the air, the phosphoric acid and potash from the roots, which go deep down and put it in available shape and condition for plant food.

To return—the Institute, as indicated, was directed by Dr. Richard S. Hill, of the Maryland Agricultural College, working in co-operation with the Citizens National Bank of Frostburg, the object being promotion of the cultivation of seed potatoes, for which this section, on account of upland soil and favorable climate conditions, is especially adapted.

In consonance with the purpose stated, the Citizens National Bank has ordered a car-load—700 bushels, of seed potatoes from a successful grower in Maine, to be shipped May 1st.

This seed is pronounced by Government experts to be the best available in the State of Maine, where the grower averaged over 400 bushels per acre on a 100-acre field during last year.

Early in the season a plant pathologist from Washington was engaged, who looked after the field from planting-time until the crop was harvested and stored. This crop has since been inspected by Government and State officials.

To eliminate any possible infection by disease, provision will be made to dip the entire car-load on arrival in corrosive sublimate—this to be done under the supervision of Prof. C. E. Temple and County Agent John McGill.

It can be very confidently stated, therefore, that farmers entering the growing contest this year will get seed from a highly prolific strain, true to name and free from disease.

In this connection it may be said that nearly the entire car-load has been engaged. Nevertheless, any farmer, not yet enrolled, who desires to enter the contest, may obtain seed by writing at once to the Citizens National Bank of Frostburg, stating the number of bushels desired.

"The Green Mountain" and "Irish Cobbler" are grown almost exclusively by Southern planters; therefore, if producers here hope to dispose of their seed to Southern growers, who cannot grow their own seed, they must cultivate these two varieties. Moreover, they must expect Southern growers to exercise the same care, and demand that producers here follow the same scientific methods pursued by the Maine growers.

Prof. Stuart, the foremost authority on the potato, stated in the course of his address that if farmers here produce the right kind of seed, there will be no difficulty in disposing of the product.

Dr. Hill suggested the policy, if not necessity of the farmers co-operating with Mr. McGill, the County Agent, and Mr. Watts, the cashier, who, he assured the audience, were ready and willing to assist the farmer in every possible way. He also urged them to form a "Potato-Growers' Association," grade their crops and dispose of them through the Association.

And it is pleasant to conclude this portion of this report with the assurance that plans to this end are in course of formulation, which, it is hoped, will be accepted to all and lead to a permanent organization.

All concerned have an excellent worker in Mr. McGill, the County Agent. He is an active, tireless, interested and intelligent promoter and director. Those who have come in contact with him in the line of his official duties voluntarily commend him as "the right man in the right place."

THAT DINNER.

The Ladies' Civic Club made known its conspicuous value to the town in its service of a magnificent dinner to 161 guests, including a few prominent citizens of State and county, namely—E. C. Harrington, State Comptroller, and Democratic candidate for Governor; H. A. Joyce, of Cambridge, this State; ex-U. S. Senator George L. Wellington, Post-Master Frank B. Beall, ex-Mayor Clarance M. King, Attorney J. W. S. Cochrane and James C. Shriver, of Cumberland, and two West Virginia officials—R. W. Thrush, school superintendent, and J. Arnold Vandiver, of the Farmers' Bureau, both of Mineral county.

In the Gladstone Annex 10 tables, 14 seats each, averaged 140 diners at one sitting, and the menu comprised soup, sliced meats, baked beans, slaw, lettuce, escalloped and mashed potatoes, sauer kraut, potato salads, jellies, bananas, apples, cakes, ice-cream and coffee.

The ladies who actively and most gracefully represented the Club were Mesdames L. C. Branch, James M. Porter, Jacob Hafer, Raymond Garrett, P. O'Rourke, Aden Dillon, Charles C. Wright, Adolph C. Frey, Thomas G. Dillon, Clayton Purnell, Frank Watts, and Misses Grace Shaffer, Nannie Thomas, Marian DeWitt, Kate Hanson, Martha Stern, Edith Price, Elizabeth Trescher and Katharine Tucker.

So pronounced was the appreciation of both the Citizens National Bank's enterprise and the courtesy of the ladies, that upon motion of Mr. Thomas B. Davis the afternoon session tendered a rising vote of thanks to each. Other expressions, though informal, were no less warm in praise of the town's hospitality.

The farming element of Garrett county, probably preponderated in representation, but many tillers of the soil came from roundabout Mt. Savage, and the Dan's Mountain and Potomac Valley regions also.

It will be no surprise a year or two hence, therefore, to hear that the corner-stone of the greatest potato-growing community in the country was laid in Frostbnrg Friday, March 26, 1915.

GRANTSVILLE.

Bert Ashby, of Oakland, spent a day or two of last week in this town and vicinity.

H. C. Bonig and Harry Miller were in Oakland last Saturday, as witnesses in the case of the Butler heirs.

Mrs. Nicholas Murphy has been quite ill during the past week.

Mrs. C. H. Bill was confined to her bed several days with a bad case of grippe.

Mrs. Sophia Bonig has been a sufferer from a boil on her face for the past few days.

Miss Edna Durst was afflicted with a bad sore throat and grippe the past week.

The Somerset Conference of the Allegheny Synod will meet on May 17, 18, and 19. The Conference is composed of 28 pastors and 25 lay delegates.

The Avilton Mutual Telephone Co., with headquarters at Avilton, Md., has established a central office in this town with Mrs. Lewis Gingerich as central operation. The new line will reach all the adjacent towns, connecting with the Beall line in Frostburg.

Mrs. John D. Yoder, Jr., was taken to the State Sanatorium, Maryland, for treatment on Thursday. She was accompanied by her husband and J. J. Bender, the trip being made in the latter's car. Russel J. Broadwater of Frostburg, a former Grantsville boy, is also taking treatment at the same institution.

Rev. Kirkpatrick has purchased a Regal automobile, he and A. F. Hetrick having gone to Salisbury for that purpose one day last week.

The people of Grantsville were privileged in hearing one of their own sons deliver a sermon in the Lutheran pulpit on Sunday afternoon, the young man being Victor Miller, a son of Samuel P. Miller, now of Fredonia, Pa., but formerly living a few miles west of Grantsville. Mr. Miller is in his second year at the Selinsgrove Theological Seminary, and is the first in years to go out from here in obedience to the divine command to preach the gospel. Mr. Miller has a very pleasing appearance, is earnest and sincere in his manner and his address was much enjoyed by a house filled with old neighbors and friends who were proud to hear him. The call to this pastorate extended to Rev. Oney of Gettysburg, Pa., has been accepted, to take place upon his graduation this summer.

The star system put in effect the first of the year in the Lutheran Sunday School worked most successfully the first quarter. The plan is to induce regular attendance and consists of giving a silver-plated star at the end of the month to those not missing a Sunday. This is to be forfeited when absent. Those not missing during the quarter are given a gold plated star in exchange, which they will wear and exchange at close of the next quarter for solid silver, which will be exchanged at the end of the year for a solid gold star, the latter to be presented by the Sabbath School for "keeps." The plan helped arouse an interest which is steadily growing, several dozen silver-plated stars being awarded in February and March. Even little Luther Miller and Raymond Loechel, cradle roll members, were present each Sunday during the month of March and received a star. Those perfect in attendance during the whole quarter were: Bible class, J. A. Carney teacher, nine; "The Hustlers," Mrs. Irene Hayes teacher, one and teacher; Class in Corner, Mrs. John Zehner teacher, three and teacher; "Sunshine" class, S. R. Getty teacher, five and teacher; "Merry Maids," M. S. Bonig teacher, three, teacher being absent on account of sickness. Banner classes during the quarter were "Hustlers," "Sunshine Girls" and "Merry Maids" for good work in February and March. The Cradle Roll has an excellent enrollment of nineteen babies, two having been lost by reason of removal. Bible class has an enrollment of about thirty-five, with average attendance of about twenty. An attendance card is given members being obliged to be away and attending Sabbate School in their absence.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson II.—Second Quarter, For April 11, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xvi, 4-13. Memory Verses, 12, 13—Golden Text, I Sam. xvi, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It is certainly restful to be in the hands of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will (Eph. i, 11) and who says, "I will work, and who shall let it" (hinder, or turn back) (Isa. xliii, 13), provided we have no will of our own in the matter. Even Samuel seems not to have been fully one with the Lord concerning Saul, for he continued to mourn for him after the Lord had rejected him, so that the Lord had to say to him, "How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing I have rejected him from reigning over Israel?" When we can say, "Even so, Father," "Just and true are thy ways," because we are certain that "As for God, His way is perfect" (Matt. xi, 26; Rev. xv, 3; Ps. viii, 30), we have entered upon a restful life. Then its continuance depends upon our living in the perfect will of God moment by moment. Note the messages to Samuel in verses 1-3: "I will send thee to Jesse. I have provided me a king. I will show thee what thou shalt do. Anoint unto Me him whom I name unto thee." This left nothing for Samuel but simple obedience to Him who was managing.

But Samuel had an objection, "If Saul hear it he will kill me." The Lord quieted him, and matters proceeded, and Samuel did that which the Lord spake and came to Bethlehem to meet Jesse and his sons (verses 4, 5). The elders of the town seemed to regard Samuel almost as God Himself or they must have had very guilty consciences, for they trembled at his coming until assured that he came peaceably. Those who are walking with God need have no fear of a visit from a man of God nor of the coming of the Lord Himself, for it is possible so to abide that we shall not be ashamed before Him at His coming (I John ii, 28). Having called Jesse and his sons, Samuel thought that he saw in Eliab a fit successor to Saul, but the Lord told him not to look on his outward appearance (verses 6, 7). When we consider Eliab's contemptuous and uncalled for treatment of David a little later (xvii, 28) we do not wonder that the Lord refused him, for He knew what was in man (John ii, 25). Seven of Jesse's sons passed before Samuel, all who had come to meet him, but the Lord's choice was not among them, so that Samuel had to ask, "Are here all thy children?" Then he learned that the youngest had been left at home to keep the sheep, and Samuel said, "Send and fetch him, for we will not sit down till he come hither" (verses 8-11).

I am interested to know how David felt that day when left at home and all the other brothers went to meet Samuel, for knowing what we do of David, we can easily imagine that he would be more desirous to meet Samuel than any of his brothers would, even though there might be nothing especially for him in it. Some day in the kingdom we may talk with him about that particular day. I never read or write this story or think about it that I do not rejoice to see the Lord's way in it. The young man left at home because he was seemingly of no account on this great occasion, and then all the older brothers set aside and compelled to wait till he came, and then to see Samuel take the horn of oil and anoint him in the midst of his brethren.

I think I can hear Eliab say to some of his brothers as they went homeward, "The old prophet must be in his dotage." There is nothing to it, for they did not hear the Lord say to Samuel, "Arise, anoint him, for this is he" (verses 12, 13). The comfort I get from it is that the Lord looketh on the heart, not on the outward appearance and when he wants you for any work He will find you and get you there in spite of all obstacles. It is ours to keep quietly on minding our sheep, like David or Moses; thrashing our wheat like Gideon; plowing, like Elisha; doing housework, like Mary of Nazareth; mending nets, like Peter and John, or whatever else is our regular occupation. The Spirit of the Lord came upon David, but departed from Saul because of Saul's failure to obey (13, 14). God allows us to choose, and if we choose the evil and not the good we have no one to blame but ourselves.

By the advice of Saul's servants he sought some one to quiet him when the evil spirit was upon him, and they recommended David, the son of Jesse, as a cunning player on the harp, a valiant man of war, a prudent man, a comely man, and they also said that the Lord was with him (verses 15-23). Being sent for, Saul loved him greatly and made him his armor bearer. How strange it all seems! God moves in a mysterious way. What a wonderful chapter! How can we refrain from saying, "Lord, take control of me and all my affairs and work out in and through me all thy good pleasure." It would seem that Jesse was an old man at this time, and his family consisted of eight sons and two daughters (xvii, 12; I Chron. ii, 16), but David's mother's name is not given.

The whole story is an illustration of the truth of Eph. ii, 10, that God has the life and service of His redeemed all planned beforehand and will work it out if we will let Him. See Jer. i, 4-9.

Real Riding Comfort

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

The Overland swivel seat gives absolutely free movement of the springs, prevents binding and reduces possibility of breakage.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Little Foxes.

FOURTH LETTER

He is a curious little pest that glides out of the kitchen or parlor to get something to satisfy his voracious appetite and he begins to bite in earnest when the friendly gossips gather about the fire for a social chat. His ears are standing straight and his eyes sparkle with delight as the latest is confidently rehearsed. Cool and uncharitable insinuations are dropped and cruel reflections are passed that are only calculated to lacerate the feelings and destroy the happiness of the innocent person who is arraigned at the bar of scandal. How carefully the bite is guarded. The tongue, with real satisfaction is rolled over the sweet morsel and the friendly gossip desiring to share her pleasure with others glides out and whispers it to the next door neighbor and often through the day Miss Glib is seen talking to Miss Chatterbox, who in turn conveys the secret to Mrs. Gadabout, who informs her husband Mr. Tell-Tale and in a remarkably short time the scandal is known and talked about in every house. Human nature makes humiliating exhibitions of its depravity in its greedy credulity concerning the reports of errors and shortcomings of good men. It delights the worldling to see the Christian fall or to hear of it, and he derives comfort in the thought that after all there isn't any difference between men however much they may profess. But people will talk, it is said and of course the topics relate to the subjects they are most familiar with for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The world is full of gossip and the reason is that those who indulge in it don't know enough about other subjects to talk intelligently on them.

The moral aspects of gossip are exceedingly evil for it is void of charity and constantly breaks the golden rule, while those who engage in hawking and talking about the personal affairs of their neighbors are meddlers and busy bodies, who are not only inflicting injury on others, but hurting themselves. What vines are spoiled by this fox! What fires are kindled by this sin, and what sweet fountains are embittered by it! It is a detestable practice that sows the seeds of social discord.

It is a shameful practice that bespeaks either maliciousness or ignorance or stupidity on the part of the gossip. But in all gossip there is not malignity for good natured people sometimes talk about others merely for talks sake or in commendation of them. To talk for mere talks sake is a serious mistake that can be cured and the antidote for it is culture.

Let them seek to store the mind with knowledge, to cultivate the habit of reading and of close observation and they will have abundant topics for conversation.

Let Christians be so full of charity and the spirit of the Master that instead of parading the faults of others they may magnify their virtues and talk of the wonderful love of the Saviour and of the manifold mercies with which the Lord has crowned their lives.

Their is an old adage which says: "A gossip in a village is like a viper in a bed." and another says, "A gossip is the Lucifer match of the village." Miss or Mr. Gossip, for it is of both genders, is forever setting the village on a blaze with the tongue, which like the one mentioned by the Apostle James is "set on fire of hell." The one who receives is about as bad as the gossip, for if there were none to hear tales there would soon be none to carry them.

What's the use of spending good money in advertising a paper. Tell the gossips and it will fly abroad. "The Tattler" has a wide circulation.

The long tongue can cause more misery than a big fin. It thrives on falsehood for it could not long ply its trade if it were restricted to truth. Its inventive faculty is therefore well developed. A modern easayist defines gossip as "putting two and two together and making five of them." If he had said twenty-five he would have been nearer the mark.

Quaint old John Plowman says, "Gossips and frogs drink and croak. Is it tea the gossips drinks, their gossip is tedious. Do they take spirits? There is an evil spirit in them."

He also gives this bit of good advice, "Trust not a horses heel, a dogs tooth, or a gossips tongue. Trust the last the least. Mad dogs and kicking horses are better than slanderous tongues." When three know it, all will very soon. One man can hold his tongue but he can't hold the tongues of the other two.

If any of my readers feel themselves affronted at my plain speech, or are disposed to resent what I say, look well to your ways lest you be found guilty of your own confession and so pass sentence upon yourself. "The tongue is a little member, but it boasteth great things." "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

If this fox slips around to your back door give him one dose that he will not forget. JOHANNUS.

THURSDAY APRIL 8, 1915.

IF you are cold, put the Free Trade Tariff on the fire.

MOST people put more money in their experience than they ever get out of it.

SOME of our politicians may have hitched their wagons to a star, but it seems a fixed star.

FREE-TRADE took the tariff off of foreign goods and put a tax on wages and then knocked out the wages.

GOLD produced in the United States to the first of this year is estimated by the Geological Survey at $3,549,799,400 in value and the silver at $1,709,517,600.

PRESIDENT Wilson again predicts an era of unparalled prosperity. If Mr. Wilson will keep on predicting long enough, say until March 4, 1917, he will finally be vindicated as a prophet.

SINCE the United States took charge of the Philippines more than 3,000,000 natives have had some instruction in the English language and more of them speak and write some English than any other tongue.

EVERY man engaged in business or is in any way interested in the material prosperity of his town and vicinity, or in the educational affairs of his community, or in the moral purity of society in his neighborhood, is under great obligation to his local paper, and should give it a liberal support, not as charity, but as duty to himself, to his family and to his neighbers, and as a wise investment of his money. Take this issue of The Republican as an illustration, of what the local press is doing for Garrett county. This is not an issue of the paper specially prepared for the occasion, but is only an average issue put out each week of the year. It covers the entire county, the interests of the farmer and the merchant.

RUNNING TO COVER.

The most interesting political spectacle at present in this country is that of the Democrats scurrying about, looking for some place of concealment in which to hide from the wrath of the voters. They are throwing up verbal dust in every direction, seeking to cover their flight, leaving a trail that a blind man might follow. From the president down the leaders of the party are apologizing for the mistakes made, and are trying to shift the blame for their blunders onto the victims of their short-sighted on destructive policies.

Lambasting Wall Street or booing at the war god will not in any way alter the fact that the depression of business in this country began with the incoming of the present administration. President Wilson and his party set about at once, on coming to power, to change the foundations of American commerce and industry, and they have succeeded so well that the superstructure has been almost completely wrecked as was the underpining, which was removed entirely. If any semblance of prosperity remains, it is in spite, and not because of the activity of the Democrats in Congress.

THE ONE GREAT ISSUE.

The recent conference in New York between Chairman Hilles, of the Republican National Committee, with a number of prominent manufacturers and business men, while of an informal character, reached conclusions that are generally accepted throughout the country, that "not until a Republican is returned to the White House can there be a return to prosperity." Further than this, it is not believed that the national Democratic leaders have any well defined hopes of escaping defeat in 1916. How can they, with the record made by the departing Congress?

It is a matter of experience, and history has preserved the record, that the prosperous times of the country have always been under Republican administrations. The people know this. The destruction of the prosperity the Democratic party succeeded to was brought about by the abolition of the great Republican principle of protection. The people want this restored. This will be the issue in the next campaign. It was so set forth in a speech made by Senator Sherman, of Illinois, during the sitting of the last Congress. He covers the ground completely when he says:

One great issue towers above and divides the voters of the United States. Other questions may come and go, but the protection of the American people's industrial life overshadows them all. It reaches into the depths of the permanent sources of prosperity. There is a deep seated feeling among the people that business is more prosperous, work more abundant at fair wages, and that they are better off under a Republican than a Democratic administration. This belief, traced to its source, is founded on historical fact. The abandonment of the protective system has always been followed by disaster. A revision of the tariff by the Democratic party has always produced adversity and business depression, as uniformly redeemed by the return of the protective schedules of the Republican party. When revision becomes necessary the Republicans preserve the protective features and the Democrats destroy them.

The Republican party bases the duty on conditions and builds it high enough to keep the pay rolls in our country at American wages and standards of living. It secures the home market for our own producers. It sees no advantage in creating either idleness or an excessive surplus by flooding the country with free listed or revenue duty imports. It exalts the home market above any to be reached at the expense of freight commissions, inspection charges and foreign tariffs. The American people instinctively know that we ought to be able to supply by our own industry all of every article we have facilities to produce equal to our wants.

The people understand that supplying our home market with the work of their own hands makes the difference between activity and idleness, between a Republican and Democratic administration. We therefore limit the imports of a competitive article the like of which we can produce in quantity adequate for our needs by a protective duty on the article. This further gives revenue, collected as toll, from the importer and tends to equalize differences in conditions of production. When we have so supplied our own wants we seek a foreign market for our surplus, so there may be no idle period. We know, however, the American market is the greatest field for the employment of our people and the sale of our products. Secretary Redfield will lecture us in vain on foreign markets. This generation has learned once more that distance lends enchantment to his view.

It has learned, too, that Democratic tariff reform is always conceived in theory, but enacted in sectional discrimination—protective in a few places and destructive in all. And it is true, as Senator Sherman says, that "from the horizontal reduction of Morrison to the perpendicular ruin of President Wilson, it is the signal for everybody to hunt his storm cellar till the Democratic administration is over. It is always a good time to rest if one can keep from worrying too much."

Help---Grow by Resolving

That you will keep so busy boosting that you won't have time to knock.

That you will vote, talk and work for a bigger, better, brighter town.

That you will help to make this a good town so the town can make good.

That you will increase the value of your property by improving its appearance.

That you will say something good about this town every time you write a letter.

That you will invest your money here where you made it and where you can watch it.

That you will not point out the town's defects to a stranger nor fail to point them out to a neighbor.

That you will keep your premises cleaned up and your buildings repaired as a matter of both pride and profit.

That you will brag about this town so much that you will have to work for this town in order to keep from being a liar.

That you will take half a day right now to pick up the odds and ends around the place and turn them into either use, money or ashes.

That you will contribute as much money as you can afford and as much enthusiasm as anybody, to any movement to develop the town's resources.

That you will make friends with the farmers, if a town man, or with the town folks, if a farmer, and help work together for the good of the community of which this town is the center.

CLEANING TIME IS HERE AGAIN

The Civic Club Is Planing for a General Clean Up.

The Civic Club is now agitating a clean up campaign for Oakland. Will it be a success? Of course; but it depends entirely upon the co-operation given by each and every citizen. Individually and collectively we must "put our shoulders to the wheel" and help. You ask, "What can I do?"

You must act. To talk and complain is not enough. Clean up your entire premises first, they look for trouble elsewhere. Begin today. Your own cellar needs attention. Remove all the dirty rubbish and articles you will never use again. If you have a furnace burn the combustible materials, otherwise place the papers, ashes and rubbish in receptacles and let the collector take it away. Articles useless to you but valuable to others will be gladly taken by the charitable organizations. When your cellar is clean and orderly look over the attic and storage rooms. Repeat the same process there.

Back yard comes next. Rake the grass, pick up the tin cans and papers, and remove the unsightly objects, repair the outbuildings and fences, whitewash the chicken house, inside and out, repair the chicken roost and clean up the filth, wash the brick or cement pavement, and do the other hundred and one little things to make it clean and tidy.

Provide a water tight and fly proof covered matallic garbage can. Look over the one you have; if it is in bad shape buy a new one. It is a duty you owe to the community to keep all garbage in the required container. Covered cans or other receptacles are required for paper and ashes. Now is the time to provide your home with the sanitary receptacles.

Have you a stable? Is so, it probably needs cleaning. Do it now. Provide a tight, fly-proof box or pit in which to keep all manure. Use disinfectants about the stalls, and in the box after emptying. Disinfectants will drive away the adult flies and prevent the eggs from hatching. The majority of flies breed in manure.

When all this is done, Mr. Owner or Mr. Tenant, you can and should see that the unsanitary conditions of the neighborhood are eliminated. If a lot needs cleaning, why not get your neighbors to "chip in" and clean it up Don't consider you have done your duty by simply reporting the conditions to the Department of Health. Anyone can complain. We ask your complaints only after you personally have tried and failed to have the condition remedied.

The Civic Club have designated May 3-8 inclusive as the general cleaning up time. Begin today. Now is the time to act. Work gradually and do your part at once. Madam, it is your duty to see that your husband and sons "get busy."

BE LAW-ABIDING AND SPORTSMANLIKE

Don't Fish Until On and After April 1st, 1916.

The State Fish Commissioner has given out a list of streams in Garrett county which have been stocked by the State and which, under the law protecting the State's work in promoting both fishing profit and sport, cannot be "fished" until April 1st, next year, as follows:

Salt Block	North Prong Lost Land Run
Salt Creek	South Prong Lost Land Run
McLean's Run	South Branch Sang Run
Muddy Creek	Little Savage River
Crab Tree Run	Big Savage River
Murley's Run	Mill Run
Cherry Creek	Hessian Run
Short Run	Three Fork Run
Wolf Den Run	Bear Creek
Herrington Creek	Big Run
Wilson Lake	Wilson Run
Hoye's Run	Totten Run
Speicher's Run	Lake Beulah
Casselman River	McHenry Run
Delawder Run	Helbig Lake
White Rock	Roaring Creek
Glade Run	Miller Run
Little Yough	Bradley Run
Sang Run	Bull Run
Buffalo Run	Fork Run
North Fork Bear Creek	Deep Creek
South Fork Bear Creek	Monroe Run
Folly Run	Laurel Run

The several hundred fishermen interested in this matter are advised that the law will be vigorously enforced against all violators, and an appeal is made by the law-abiding lovers of the sport that all refrain from fishing in the interest of justice to all and true sportsmanlike respect for all the conditions of the situation.

Don't "go fishing" until April 1st, 1916.

OUT OF TOWN HAPPENINGS

A Variety of Interesting Paragraphs for Republican Readers.

The Swanton Grange meets every Saturday night.

Mrs. Venia Friend, of near Hoyes, has a very severe attack of grippe.

Herman Wilhelm and William Baum, of Jennings, Md., spent last Sunday at Elk Lick, Pa.

Joseph Myers, of near Bloomington, is quite ill and may have to go to the hospital for an operation.

Miss Goldie Frazee, of Springs, Pa., is at Friendsville where she will attend high school for a few months.

W. C. Martin sold his farm of 88 acres, near the Red House, to Raymond E. Martin. Consideration, $2,000.

W. B. Decker and family, the latter part of last week moved from the Park to Swanton, where he has rented a black smith shop.

An old adage says: "It is a hard matter to teach the old dog new tricks." Not so hard though as to collect the dog tax in Garrett county.

Charles W. Frost who resides in Garrett county, eight miles from Frostburg, was an Easter visitor at the homes of Henry Hoffman, North Mechanic street, and A. A. Wilson, Columbia street. He left yesterday for home via Mount Savage where he visited his cousin Charles C. Neff.—Cumberland Press.

State Forester Besley, of the Johns Hopkins University, has issued a strong appeal for individual help throughout the whole state in keeping down forest fires. He notes where spring fires are especially numerous, and directs attention to care and observation in the premises.

Miss Mary Garrett, the only daughter of the late John W. Garrett died last night at the Deanery, Bryn Mawr College, Pennsylvania, where she had been living for several years. Her death was sudden and unexpected, although several months ago she had been a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. Miss Garrett in former days was a visitor at Deer Park.

Long may the farmer live, and more bounteous his crops! More power to the agencies that are helping him! Others may sing of mills and factories and industries, but they cannot deny it is the farmer who is at the base of things. It is the farmer whose condition of being eventually affects the whole country. If all goes well with the farmer, it is much more likely to go well with those of us who have street numbers on our doors.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gnagey, of West Milton, O., who came east on account of severe illness of their little grandson, John, son of J. Milton Gnagey, and who were staying for a week in Cumberland near the Western Maryland Hospital where the little sufferer is being cared for, returned from Cumberland to Meyersdale Tuesday evening, the little boy having improved during the last week and now being considered out of danger. Mr. and Mrs. Gnagey will visit their former home at Accident, and Grantsville, before returning to Ohio.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. PAUL SAVAGE.

Mrs. Paul Savage died last Saturday at her home near Sang Run, aged about 25 years. She is survived by her husband and one child. The interment took place Tuesday at the Thayerville cemetery.

EDMUND T. JAMISON.

Edmund T. Jamison was born at Blooming Rose, Maryland, on the 4th day of April, 1836, and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Dent, at Crellin, Maryland, on the 2d day of April, 1915. He had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Dent for some years past, the latter being his only surviving child. Mr. Jamison had been twice married. His first wife was Miss Katherine Coddington by whom he had seven children, six of whom, as well as the mother, preceded him to the grave by many years. He afterwards married Miss Frances Jarboe, on May 1st, 1876, who died in 1892, but of this union there was no offspring.

Beside Mrs. Dent, Mr. Jamison is survived by one sister, Mrs. Florence L. Browning, wife of John T. Browning, and two brothers, R. S. Jamison and Edwin Jamison, the latter of whom resides in California.

His funeral occurred on Monday from St. Peter's Catholic church, of which he has been a life-long member, and was attended by a large number of sorrowing relatives, neighbors and friends. The Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. Father Walsh, of Washington, D. C., who preached an impressive and instructive sermon appropriate to the occasion. Interment was in St. Peter's cemetery. The pallbearers were Hon. R. T. Browning, J. W. Hart, J. M. Stanton, Michael Boyle, Patrick Garrett and George D. Browning.

Edmund T. Jamison spent his entire life in this county and had impressed his personality in a marked degree upon the citizenship of the community. He was three times elected sheriff of the county and was the first person elected by the people to that office, and his administration of the trust reposed in him was so fair and just and so eminently satisfactory to his constituents that they twice subsequently honored him with the same position. He filled the office during the years 1874 and 1875, 1882 and 1883, and 1892 and 1893. It was during his second term as Sheriff that John Smith, the only person ever executed in this county, was hung. Smith was convicted of a brutal murder and the performance of his duty on this occasion, though performed unflinchingly and in strict obedience to law, was most distasteful to Mr. Jamison and a source of sincere regret and constant worry ever afterward. He also served as President of the Board of Supervisors for a time.

He was naturally and constitutionally kind, generous, charitable and at the same time modest, unostentatious and of an unusually quiet and retiring disposition. His sympathies were always with the poor and unfortunate and none in distress ever called to him in vain for such relief as was in his power to give. Many persons still living who have been the object of his kindness and liberality now mourn his loss and revere his memory and the widow and orphan have called him blessed.

His ideals of right and wrong were well defined and he drew the line between the two with unerring precision. He was clean, upright, honorable, a thorough gentleman—a gentle man. He was never known to speak ill of another and those who were fortunate enough to be admitted into the circle of his closer friendship were drawn to him in a very tender way by his sincerity and high sense of honor and held firmly by a strong and genuine affection.

He was a good neighbor, a devoted husband, a kind and indulgent father, a model citizen, a real man, without guile and above reproach. In his death the entire community suffers an irreparable loss. We shall not look upon his like again. May he rest in peace!

"Green be the turf above thee,
Friend of my better days;
None knew thee but to love thee,
None namad thee but to praise."

Large Number Received Into Church.

At the morning service held in St. Mark's Lutheran church last Sunday eighteen persons were added to the church membership as follows: Mr. Silas O. Wiley, Mrs. Silas O. Wiley, Mrs. Oscar Turney, Mr. Gilbert Yutzy, Frances Gower, Carl Clark, Ruth Clark, Harry Glotfelty, Singleton Townshend, Joseph Hinebaugh, Morgan Hinebaugh, Willie Giessman, Arthur Cogley, Fred. Cogley, Lillian Sincell, Ruth Welling, Helen Little and Margaret Sincell. The church was packed with worshippers at this service, the crowd being so great that extra seats had to be provided. The work being done by the church membership under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. Bremer, is remarkable. At nearly every service held large congregations are present and strong gospel sermons are preached. In the Brotherhood Bible Class much interest is manifested by the members of that body. Last Sunday more than 50 men were in the class, which is steadily increasing in number.

Panama-Pacific International Exposition

Marvelously Fulfills Every Pledge and Promise Made by San Francisco

GLORIOUS INAUGURATION OF WORLD'S GREATEST INTERNATIONAL CELEBRATION ASSURES CONTINUED SUCCESS

WITH an attendance for the first week greater than the combined attendance for the same period of the world's expositions at Chicago and St. Louis, the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco has started on a career that the most conservative judgments predict will break all records for exposition success.

The exposition opened on February 20, 100 per cent complete structurally, and opened to an attendance of one quarter of a million people. From every state of the United States and from the nations of the world came critical visitors to pass on the merits of the celebration that had been so widely heralded. They found nothing to criticize. Every claim made by San Francisco and the exposition was fulfilled. It is safe to say that not a single visitor went away disappointed. The result has been that the advertisement by word of mouth, and by letters home and to friends—the most powerful form of advertisement—has been given the exposition. In consequence the transportation companies report a constantly increasing booking for travel to San Francisco both by land and water.

Exceptionally low rates have been given by the transportation companies from all points within the United States to San Francisco, offering many people an opportunity that could not otherwise be taken, of combining a pleasure journey to the exposition with a sightseeing tour through California and the West.

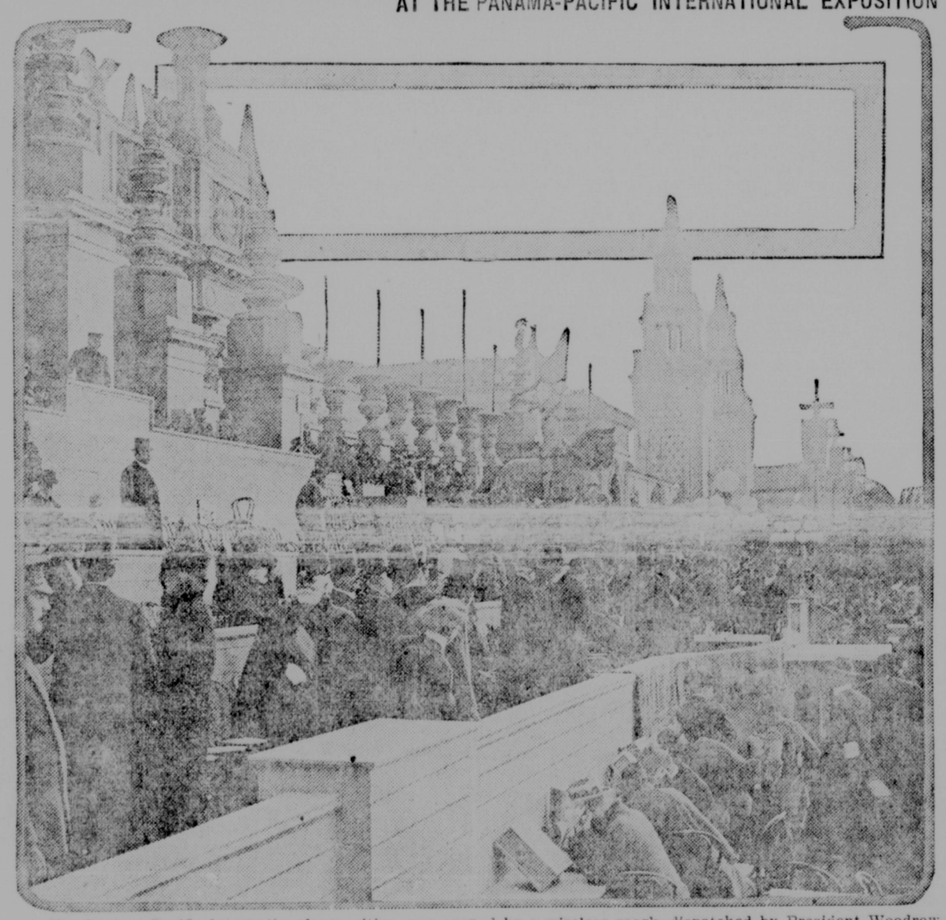
A feature of the exposition that has called for universal comment is the "action" that marks exhibits, every exhibit capable of operation by steam or electricity being shown in motion.

A flood of inquiries concerning rates and hotel accommodations has been received by the information bureau of the exposition since the news of its successful opening was flashed around the world, all such inquiries being given prompt attention. San Francisco and California are fulfilling their host duties and living up to the reputation the West has always had for hospitable treatment for the stranger.

HANDSOME SIXTY-PAGE BOOK ON THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION SENT FREE OF CHARGE TO ANY ADDRESS.

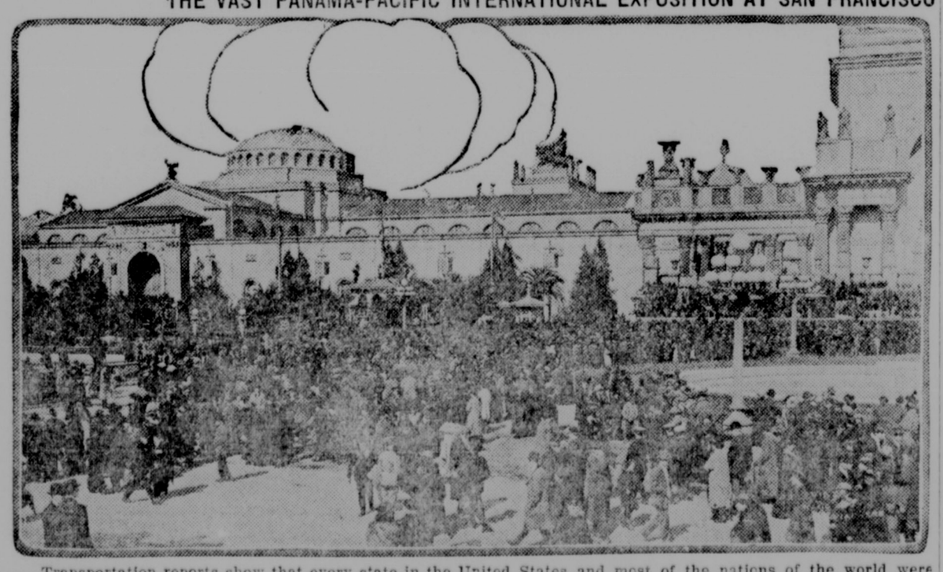
Those who are interested in this great exposition may obtain free of charge a handsomely illustrated book of sixty pages, reproducing the exhibit palaces in their natural colors and giving essential data about the exposition, San Francisco, California and the Panama canal. To obtain this book send a letter to the Manager, Bureau of Publication, Panama-Pacific International Exposition Grounds, San Francisco, Calif.

DURING A LULL IN THE OPENING DAY CEREMONIES AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION



The Panama-Pacific International exposition was opened by a wireless spark, dispatched by President Woodrow Wilson at Washington, and caught on the tendrils of a wireless aerial on the lofty Tower of Jewels at the exposition. Instantly the power was released in the mighty Palace of Machinery and the portals of the exhibit palaces opened. The scene is on the grand stand after the ceremonies had ended, Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, Gov. Hiram Johnson of California, Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of San Francisco, President C. C. Moore of the exposition and a notable group of visiting dignitaries being seen in animated discussion of the epochal event. In the press box the correspondents are seen flashing to the world the news that the exposition had opened.

WHEN A QUARTER OF A MILLION OF PEOPLE INAUGURATED THE VAST PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION AT SAN FRANCISCO

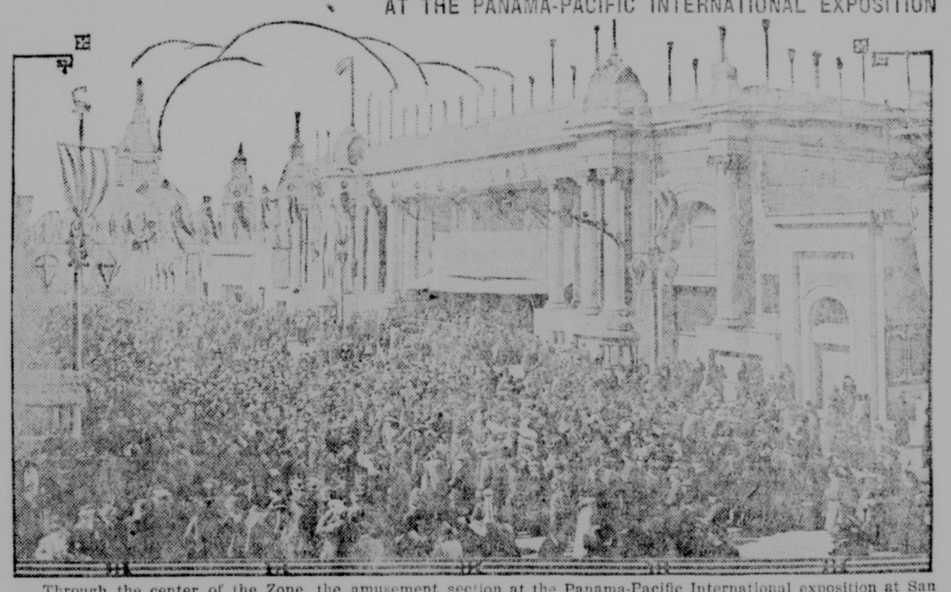


Transportation reports show that every state in the United States and most of the nations of the world were represented in the great throng of 250,000 people who inaugurated the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco on February 20. This picture, showing the mighty South gardens, gives a glimpse of a small fraction of the opening day throng. In the first five days of its progress the exposition had an attendance larger than the combined totals of the Chicago and St. Louis expositions and the ratio continues in a degree to justify predictions of the most spectacular success for the exposition.

THE FOUNTAIN AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION THAT SYMBOLIZES THE BUILDING OF THE PANAMA CANAL

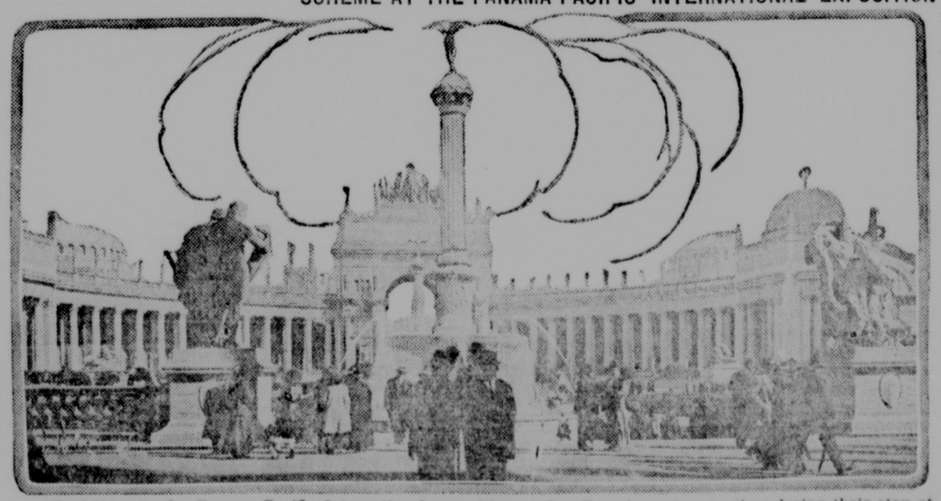
The labor that went into the building of the Panama canal is symbolized in the Fountain of Energy, by A. Stirling Calder. This heroic sculpture stands in the center lagoon of the three lagoons of the South Gardens and faces the main entrance gates. The waters were first released on opening day, February 20, coincidently with the opening of the portals of the exhibit palaces and by the same means: the electric spark transmitted across the continent when President Woodrow Wilson opened the great exposition at San Francisco by wireless.

THE "ZONE," THE PLAYGROUND OF THE PEOPLE OF THE WORLD AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION



Through the center of the Zone, the amusement section at the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco, runs a broad avenue three thousand feet in length. It is not unusual for this entire avenue to be jammed with entertainment seekers who are busy patronizing the one hundred concessions on the Zone. An exact reproduction of the Panama canal is one of the popular and instructive features, there being a constant line both day and night of people eager to see the workings of the miniature canal. The premier showmen of America have assembled here their finest offerings of amusement, edification and instruction.

THE MIGHTY COURT OF THE UNIVERSE, THE HUB OF THE ARCHITECTURAL SCHEME AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION



All visitors to the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco at some time during their stay at the exposition make their pilgrimage through the Court of the Universe. This is the largest court on the grounds and is the central radiating unit of the architectural and ground plans. Noble sculptured groups embellish it, the two Homeric groups—the Nations of the East and the Nations of the West—surmounting the giant arches at the east and west portals. By night the beauty of the court is enhanced by the flood lighting effects.

The Mail Order Subsidy

It is interesting to note that the principal finding of the Bristow joint committee in its parcel post investigation is just what the retailer has always claimed—that the parcel post is a great boon to the big mail order houses in promoting their business and increasing their profit, but a failure in promoting the direct supply of farm produce to consumers.

While the claimed purpose of the parcel post system is to benefit the farmer, it is well known that the farmer did not exhibit the interest in securing the passage of the bill that the mail order houses did. The fact that one-half of the parcel post matter carried originates in Chicago and New York is sufficient proof that the farmer is not particularly interested in the system and is not making use of it.

Unquestionably the farmer has secured the delivery of much merchandise at lower costs than formerly, but it has been at the expense of other taxpayers unless the parcel post system is self-supporting. The Bristow committee does not state positively that the system is costing more money than it produces, but some of the findings and recommendations show the opinion of the commendations of the committee. The report states that it is "impossible to determine the cost of parcel post service or the revenue that is derived from it." Again, the committee recommends "a revision of the rates and weights of third and fourth class matter," so as to protect the revenues of the department. Thus it appears that the committee is convinced that the parcel post system, as now operated, is a drain upon the resources of the post office department.

No well-informed man will question for a moment the statement that the mail order houses have effected enormous savings by using the parcel post; but the price of mail order merchandise has not been reduced on this account, so that this saving amounts practically to a subsidy that is unwarranted by the benefits derived by the country at large. Thus the subsidy is a discrimination, and there is no reason why the Government should discriminate against the distributors of 90 per cent. of the merchandise sold in this country in favor of corporations that distribute 10 per cent.

Hope that the Bristow committee favors a revision of the parcel post system to a more favorable basis for the retailer may be taken from the following recommendations—"The readjustment of rates to the different zones so that the sum of the local rates will not be less than the through rate, in order that the reshipment of parcels at an intermediate point between the post office of origin and that of final destination shall no longer be profitable."

However, the retailer would obtain more benefit, and relief, if catalogs were not carried by parcel post, or if it was required that parcel post shipments should originate at the post office in the city from which the sender distributes his merchandise. For instance: If mail order houses wish to distribute a large number of catalogs in the state of Georgia, shipment may be made by freight to Atlanta, and individual copies may be sent by parcel post from that point, effecting a large saving as compared with the cost of mailing the same catalogs by parcel post from the Chicago office.

It is carefully estimated that one mail order firm has saved more than $1,000,000 a year by shipping its catalogs by parcel post. This being the case, as the fact that the service is not self-supporting, the taxpayers are really paying their money into the coffers of the big firms rather than supporting government institutions with it.

The report of the Bristow committee offers to the retailer the best opportunity to protest against the discrimination being made against him that he has had since the parcel post law became effective. It is to be regretted that the attention of the retailer is being diverted at this important time by the fight for one cent letter postage. Careful consideration of the two measures will show that it is more important just now to give attention to securing relief from the unfair advantage given mail order houses by the parcel post system.

Many recommendation are tabled for no other reason than evidence is not given Congress that the voters are interested in having the recommendations acted upon favorably. The retailers may rest assured that the mail order houses will bring to bear all influence possible to prevent a reduction of the subsidy that is being given them. The retailer may rest assured that the arguments made will prevail unless there is a protest from those who are being discriminated against.

Every retailer who is interested in the future of his business should express his opinion of the injustice that is being done to him and to his representatives in Congress. If this is done with proper forcibleness, sufficient pressure may be brought to bear to cause recognition of the rights of the majority.

The retailer does not ask discrimination in his favor. Given equal opportunity, he will hold his own and he can obtain equal opportunity if he will make a vigorous demand for it.

Organizing the Farmer

Much activity is being displayed, under the pretense of community uplift, in forming farmers' clubs and similar organizations.

The average retailer entertains no objections to such work when conducted along the proper lines; on the other hand, he welcomes and encourages it. However, he does wish to know that the doctrines which are being taught are constructive and not destructive.

Community uplift as an ideal condition will not be attained by any plan born of selfish motives of the men who are devoting so much time to organizing the farmer. Are they really interested in making him a larger producer and a more loyal supporter of the small town, or are they preaching an incendiary gospel which fires the existing feeling of the farmer against the city man? Have they entered the work of community development for the real good of the community and the country at large, or are they merely endeavoring to create and hold professorship, or political positions, or are they earning salaries paid by mail order houses?

If the fruit of the organizer's work is a farmers' co-operative store, or a co-operative buying plan, it seems that the attitude of the organizer is well defined. It is worthy of note that in most cases the farmers' club begins one of the two buying methods mentioned.

It is to be regretted that the farmers' clubs devote more time to the subjects of buying goods than to better farming methods. Generally it is found that the organizer sows the seed which brings up such discussions. He seeks first the attention and sympathy of his audience and seems to get a better response by directing attention to the sins of the other men than by telling of the wrong practices of the members of his audience. The listeners seem more interested in learning of the possibilities of a co-operative store, or buying plan, than of the benefits of deep plowing or silo building.

Approximately 90 per cent. of the co-operative stores fail, so the trained merchant has nothing to fear from them except that the farmer is taught to consider the local merchant as a competitor, and the spirit of unrest which is created tends to encourage mail order buying.

The men who work for the interest of the farmer invariably advise him to support the home town. They devote most of their time, however, to teaching better farming methods instead of trying to make storekeepers of farmers. The men who are doing work of the former kind should be supported to the exclusion of those whose efforts result in creating dissension.

It has been said that the farmer is going to organize and that to discourage his attempts will merely intensify the feeling of the man in the country toward the man in town. In that case it seems best for the merchant to do the organizing; not hire an outsider to do it for him, and not wait for an outsider who is hired by some other interest to do the work regardless of the merchant's feelings in the matter.

The only farmer's organization plan that seems to stand the test so far as the interests of both town and country are concerned is that which has been operated successfully in Trenton, Mo., and is now being adopted in many communities. This plan enlarges the activities of the commercial club so that they include the interests of the farmer as well as the merchant. The city school curriculum provides a course in agriculture. The club employs its own farm expert who, a citizen of the community and a teacher in the school, is able to form the close acquaintanceship that is very necessary before the "Book Farmer" is ever able to be of assistance to the man whose knowledge has been gained solely by tilling the soil.

Since farmers' organizations are increasing rapidly and many of them are detrimental to the interest of the retailer, this subject is worthy of the careful attention of merchants in small towns and cities. It seems necessary for such merchants to apply the remedy before outside organizers are better entrenched. The remedy is active work in community building along the lines embodied in the Trenton idea.

The Necessity of Good Roads

With the incoming of motor vehicles our public highways assume a larger importance. Ten miles with a horse was a fair journey a few years ago; 100 miles in five hours is a respectable average even with a moderately powered car today. With cheap machines both for pleasure and business good roads are a social and economic necessity. The farmer can reduce the cost of living to the city by direct delivery if the roadway is properly built and repaired. Suburban life, however wide the circumference, no longer means isolation if rapid and easy transportation is possible. To look upon highway construction and maintenance as a fad is to have an entire misconception of modern requirements.

The 2000-mile straight and high-gear road from Winnipeg, Canada, to Galveston, Tex., is well on toward completion and the Lincoln highway across the continent is being pushed with vigor.

We are having March weather at present.

PARADISE

"Dutch" boasts that he is the only Fike in Paradise.

Gus Groves continues in a critical condition, but is slowly improving.

Chauncy Glass, veterinarian, was hastily called to the home of W. W. Groves to administer unto the needs of a cow belonging to Earl Simpson, which apparently is suffering from the high cost of living. Dr. Glass pronounced the case beyond his power of resurrection, but turpentine and a horse blanket applied in the form of a poultice has done wonders toward retarding the the fleeting spark of life.

Last week was a busy week in the real estate business. Several prospective buyers are casting wistful eyes toward the fair lands of Paradise. Bear in mind that this region is part of that described by Meshack Browning as the land of milk and honey.

T. E. Meese has sold a valuable team to Bert Leighton, formerly of the firm of Leighton and Harvey.

E. C. Cuppett spent Saturday night and Sunday with W. W. Groves.

Albert Groves and family recently returned from Bretz, W. Va., and will henceforth and for evermore cease from wandering and reside with the dear ones at home.

Mrs. R. L. Hamill and son Harry, of Hubbard, spent Sunday in Paradise.

Sanford Moon and nephew, Harvey, spent part of last week in this locality with a view toward investing in farm lands. Anyone desiring an abode in our fair land of peace and plenty should "come early and avoid the rush," as former residents from all parts of the country are settling in this locality.

The Garrett County Climate.

"You can't better the Rocky Mountain climate," exclaimed the man who stayed at home.

"Nonsense!" replied the man who traveled. "There's a little place in Garrett county that beats anywhere I know. Why, when I was there, three weeks ago, I gained 123 pounds."

"Go on!" exclaimed the man who stayed at home, incredulously.

"It's a fact!" insisted the one who had traveled. "Come round to dinner tonight and I'll introduce you to her."

Agricultural Fairs.

The agricultural fair has played an important part in the history of our country. It has been an educating factor of no small importance as well as serving to arouse competition and giving recreation and social enjoyment. In this age of agricultural activity, when questions of the farm are being forced to the front, wrestled with and overcome, unusual interest is shown in exhibits of live stock, grains, grasses, vegetables and other farm products.

THE FOG.

The weird fog elf in robes of gray
Creeps up from the sea at break of day,
Gently caressing the hills one by one,
While a prisoner he makes of the glowing sun.

Yet the plants and the flowers lift their heads to be kissed
By the stealthily vanishing wraith of the mist.

None So Blind As He Who Will Not See

By MOSS.

BLIND mistakes are pitiful, but usually preventable.

Take the bichloride of mercury poisoning cases which the papers have been full of recently. The sight of a person facing sure death within a week and arranging his earthly affairs calmly and coolly arouses one's pity. At the same time one usually thinks that the victim should have known better.

Blind mistakes in buying are also pitiful and also usually preventable.

Blind buying leads to DISSATISFACTION and WASTE. Blind buying increases your COST OF LIVING.

It isn't pleasant to have your pocketbook sapped and get little for your money.

Avoid making blind mistakes in buying. Don't rely on the man who is in business for a day. Rely on the man who advertises REGULARLY and HONESTLY in this paper.

DON'T NEGLECT DETAILS IN SETTING A HEN.

Make Her Comfortable If You Want Her To Prove A Good Mother.

ROY H. WAITE.
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

It is not so easy to successfully hatch chickens by the natural method of incubation, as some people seem to think. There are several rules that must be observed, if success is to be had. In the first place, always select a good hen, don't try to set a Leghorn or one of the egg laying breeds, she may do well for a time, but soon goes back to her regular business of laying eggs. Always select a hen that shows a maternal instinct, one that is not disturbed easily and seems "set on setting." It should hardly be necessary to caution against the use of unhealthy hens for hatching. Such hens are apt to communicate their diseases to the young. Roupy or scaly legged hens are examples of diseases which should be avoided.

A GOOD BROODY.

More trouble probably comes from infestations of lice and mites than from any other one thing. Dust the hen two or three times during the hatch. Once will not be enough, for more lice will hatch from the nits and another brood set up. She should be in a quiet place, away from the other hens. Never even think of setting her in the regular nest. Give her a chance to exercise. If you do not, she will get lame and also probably dirty up the eggs. You can't shut her up in a box with feed and water handy and expect her to do well.

The old hen can't do much with a poorly arranged nest. It should not be too flat, so the eggs will roll apart, nor should it be too deep, so they will pile up. The nest should be made so she can get on it easily without breaking the eggs. Line it with some soft material, like fine straw, lawn clippings, etc.

Give the hen feed and water regularly, corn and wheat or corn alone is sufficient. Stimulating feeds may make her go to laying again. Do not put too many eggs under her. The number will vary with the size of hen, season of year, size of eggs, and value of eggs, but thirteen in winter and fifteen in summer is about correct.

WARM WEATHER FAVORS SPREAD OF DISEASE.

New outbreaks of the hoof and mouth disease continue to occur in Maryland and in neighboring states causing serious loss in a number of valuable herds. Thirty-nine farms in ten counties of the State have been visited by the dreaded disease with a total loss of 1,472 animals. One pure bred herd of Guernsey cows in Haddonfield, New Jersey, valued at over $50,000 was wiped out entirely. With the coming of warmer weather conditions will be even more favorable to the spread of the disease than heretofore. Every farmer should, for this reason, take every precaution against the introduction of the disease onto his farm or into his neighborhood. He can best help suppress the disease by following the suggestions issued from the State Experiment Station last fall by Dr. S. S. Buckley, Veterinarian in Charge.

Dr. Buckley stated, "The Experiment Station dairy herd and buildings are under voluntary quarantine, and we urge all owners of valuable herds to follow this example in order to aid the State Livestock Sanitary Board and the U. S. Department of Agriculture in checking the ravages of the disease.

"To succeed quickly there must be energetic co-operation on the part of farmers throughout the State. They should watch their animals closely and report at once sore mouths or lameness. If they have added new stock within sixty days they should inform either of the above agencies stating the kind and number of animals and where they were secured. They should also establish voluntary quarantine on their farms, and prohibit any cattle, sheep, or hogs from passing onto or off the premises. No one, if he can help it, should engage in the shipment of animals for any purpose whatsoever until the plague is well under control.

The farmer must determine for himself what are the needs of his particular soil. There are some general indications which may be a help. By looking carefully at the crop of wheat, for instance: a poor growth of straw would indicate lack of nitrogen, shriveled grain and heads not well filled would indicate lack of phosphoric acid, and a weak straw, one that lodges easily, indicates a lack of potash. Thus he can determine just what will bring him profitable returns for money invested is to try the different plant foods.

VOLUME 40. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1915. NUMBER 7.

COUNTY TAX RATE WILL BE $1.17 ON THE $100

Increased Appropriations Made for Schools and Roads—New Assessment.

This morning the Board of County Commissioners closed the annual levy for the current year and found that to meet the expenses necessary to operate the local government an increased tax rate will be necessary, caused by additional appropriations for the public schools and for the building and maintenance of new roads, besides providing the sum of $5,000 for a new assessment and to meet the requirements of the State tax laws. The rate will be for county purposes $1 17 on the $100 valuation and this added to the State rate of 33⅓ cents will make the taxes nearly $1.50 on the $100.

For schools $39,000 is provided for by the new levy, and for roads, including the building of new ones and the maintenance of those already built, the sum of approximately $43,000 is levied. The school appropriation over last year exceeds the sum of $6,000, while that for roads the amount is very materially increased.

Another item of large expense which enters into the sum total of making the tax rate high is that of $5,000 to meet the demands of the State Tax Commission, which body has ordered a new general assessment for the county.

The elimination of $310,000 from the taxable basis of the county in pursuance of the recently enacted exemption law, is also responsible to some degree in causing the increased rate.

The levy will be published in full in these columns next week.

MARYLAND STATE GOOD ROADS COMMISSION

Second of A Series of Articles From "Better Roads and Streets."

"Better Roads and Streets" for April continues the serial article by George D. Steel on the "Work of the Maryland State Roads Commission," devoting an entire page to seven half tone cuts of the members of the Maryland State Roads Commission as follows: Gov. P. L. Golsborough, O. E. Weller chairman; Andrew Ramsey, Thomas Parran, J. Frank Smith, W. B. Miller and John M. Perry.

The following data, taken from Mr. Steel's article, will be of interest to the readers of the Republican living in this section of Marvland, where so many friends of good roads reside, and where so much has been done for the improvement of the public highwavs.

"The Maryland Legislature last year appropriated the largest sum ever set aside for any one purpose, when the sum of $6,600,000 was appropriated for road work in 1914 and 1915. The greater part of this sum was placed under contract last year, and much work was completed, the final figures for which have not been compiled to date. The road system of the State is so far advanced, so far as construction is concerned, that it will be practically completed with the exception of a few very short and rather isolated sections, by the first of July of this year. The system as now planned, consists of about 1,050 miles of roads connecting all county seats, one with another, three routes being practically the main market routes of the State. Many of these routes also connect with Baltimore and Washington, although it is not, and never will be possible, owing to the natural topography of the State, to connect all counties with the city of Baltimore.

"Of the 235.20 miles of road, incompleted roads, and that the reports of the Residency Engineers have not been completed to date, the exact figures for 1914 have not been made up.

"The funds available for State road construction in 1914 and 1915 amounted to $9.075,000, the various sources being as follows:

State appropriation, for State roads	$6,600,000
Baltimore-Annapolis Boulevard	500,000
Balance remaining from 1912	1,000,000
Regular annual appropriation for State Aid	600,000
Regular annual appropriation for maintenance	300,000
Appropriation for Old Post road	75,000
Total for two years	$9,075,000

Of this sum, a little over $7,000,000 for State Aid Roads was placed under contract during 1914, and about $2,000,000 will be placed under contract early this spring.

"In 1913 there were 325 miles of macadam road oiled, requiring 950,000 gallons of oil and 12,000 tons of the same kind of stone chips that were used successfully the previous year. In 1913, a change was made in the oiling methods in sixteen counties of the State. In previous years, this oiling in all parts of the State had been done by force account, while in 1913 contracts for oiling all State roads requiring this treatment were awarded to two large concerns.

"In 1914, the contract plan of oiling having proven satisfactory and economical the State was divided into districts, and, during the winter, bids were called for, for oiling all the macadam roads of the State by contract by sections. Under this contract system, the oil is delivered to the contractor at the most convenient sidings. The contractor sweeps the road thoroughly and then applies from one-fifth of a gallon to three-quarters of a gallon per square yard, according to the traffic and the condition of the roadway.

"As a result of the methods used, as well as the high quality of the material, and the engineering skill which determined just what the application shall be on a given road, Maryland has as fine oiled macadam roads as will be seen on any State roads system in the country. Early in March, the writer covered about one hundred miles of these roads, and was surprised at their excellent condition after having gone through the winter.

MRS. H. A. LORADITCH, Treas.

May 3rd to 8th was designated as clean up week. Will the merchants and all property owners and tenants unite with the club in their efforts to have a cleaner and healthier town? A town or city is as dirty, or as attractive and clean as the people make it. It cannot rise above the level of its citizens. When traveling, you realize that a dirty city is made up of dirty households, inefficient citizenry. If you do not keep your town clean, you confess to unclean individual homes. As a man livith so is his home town. As you believe in your own town and have testified to this belief by investing in property or a business venture, increase your property values and your income by helping to make a clean town.

Remember, that a committee, however well organized, cannot keep a town clean. Neither can you depend upon an efficient Board of Health or sanitary laws. It takes concerted action, community pride of all classes, in all sections of a town, to bring about municipal cleanliness. Where fear of the law fails to achieve results, a sincere desire to make the whole town clean, will do the work.

While you are at it, just remember that it isn't enough to be clean yourself and in your own home. It is the cleanliness of your neighbor that counts in the ultimate result.

The flies that breed in your neighbors open garbage pail, in the dirty alley behind the restaurant, in the re use pail of a livery stable, or a private stable, will carry germs of disease into your immaculate home. Some one else's dirty cellar or seeping cesspool or germintes ted open sewer or closet can start an epidemic which the sanitation of your own home cannot overcome.

IT COSTS LESS TO BE CLEAN THAN TO BE SICK.

Knights of Pythias Attend Church.

Sunday morning about fifty members of the local lodge Knights of Pythias attended divine service in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church where the pastor, Rev. O. A. Bremer, preached a sermon befitting the occasion, his subject being Charity, upon which attribute the Knights of Pythias as a brotherhood is based. Special music was rendered by the choir. The sermon was highly spoken of by the Knights.

Will Be No Circus.

There will be no circuses, no elephants, circus street parades or red lemonade in Hancock or in Maryland this spring and probably not during the coming summer. The Federal government has placed a ban on circuis traveling, due to the liability of them spreading the foot and mouth disease. We will save our money and take in the fair next fall and see Garrett county in its glory.

GOVERNMENT STATISTICS ON SHEEP RAISING

Double the American Flocks If Dog Menace Were Removed.

The number of sheep in the 36 farm states, which do not include any in the Western Division, could be increased by 150 per cent, it is estimated, without displacing other live stock. Some authorities believe that the increase could be even as much as 500 per cent without serious interference with the number of other animals. An increase of 150 per cent in these 36 States would mean in money $144,267,000. In a new publication of the Department of Agriculture, Farmer's Bulletin 652, the responsibility for the loss of the country is laid upon the sheep-killing dog.

Sheep-killing dogs, it is said, are the principal cause of the marked decrease in the numbers of sheep on American farms. In ten years between 1900 and 1910 the number of sheep in the country, exclusive of the States in the Eastern Division, decreased 3,900,000 head, in face of the fact that during these same years the market value of sheep rose so rapidly that the total value of sheep in this arena was $19,000,000 or approximately 25 per cent more in 1910 than in 1900. Favorable though the market conditions were, they were not a sufficient incentive to induce farmers to risk the heavy losses from stray dogs.

The number of sheep killed annually by dogs cannot be stated exactly since there are many cases which are not reported at all. Judging from the figures in those counties and States in which reasonably complete reports are obtainable, however, it may be said that in the 36 farm states more than 100,000 sheep are killed each year by dogs. This, it is true, is less than 1 per cent. of the total number of sheep in this arena but a 1 per cent loss on a business that is being conducted on a profit basis of 5 or 6 per cent cannot be ignored. This estimate, it must be remembered, is also probably much lower than the actual figures. It is certain to that many men have been kept out of the sheep business through fear that in their own particular cases the loss would be much more than 1 per cent. Any one who has actually seen sheep killed, injured or frightened by dogs is likely to think twice before engaging in the business. In many cases while 1 or 2 sheep may be actually bitten by dogs, the whole flock is chased until it dies from exhaustion.

In addition to pointing out these facts the bulletin already mentioned, "The Sheep-Killing Dog," discusses the possible means of preventing in the future the loss from dogs. At the present time the various State laws on this subject differ widely, some States using the money obtained from dog license to reimburse sheep owners, while others permit the sheep men to recover damages from the dog owners and to offer them no recourse whatsoever. Dogs, however, are very seldom caught in the act of killing sheep. It is always difficult to determine their owners, and where the damages are paid by the State directly from the dog tax funds the money very frequently is far from sufficient to meet all the claims.

A remedy that is suggested for this situation is a uniform State dog law embodying the principle of a tax upon dogs sufficiently heavy to discourage those who are not willing to take care of their pets from keeping them. Under this plan all dogs over six months of age must be licensed each year, the tax paid at the time of licensing and a metal tag bearing the license number attached to the dog's collar. Any dog found without this tag, unattended and off its owner's premises, may be killed. When found unattended on a farm where sheep are kept the dog may be killed whether it has the tag on or not, and under any circumstances a dog caught chasing or killing sheep may be killed. All dogs which can be proved to be sheep killers must be killed whether caught in the act or not, and a reward of $15 should be offered for any one identifying a sheep killing dog. The money whenever possible from the dogs' be devoted to reimbursing sheep owners for their lost stock and the county should in turn recover this money whenever possible from the dogs' owners. A special license should be issued for kennels where large numbers of dogs are maintained under such conditions that they cannot possibly do any harm to neighboring flocks.

While some such plan as this is probably indispensable to the full development of the sheep industry in the United States, there are cases where the flock master will find in its absence the use of dog-proof fences very desirable. The grazing of sheep upon comparatively small areas of land sown to forage crops, instead of upon permanent pastures in larger fields, materially reduces the area to be fenced and makes this a practicable precaution. In the west fences have been built which prove a satisfactory defense against coyotes, and the fence that will turn aside a coyote will turn a dog. A fence of this character can be built as follows:

Posts 7½ feet in length, set 2½ feet in the ground and 16 feet apart; a barbed wire stretched flat to the surface of the ground; 3 inches higher a 36-inch woven-wire fence having a 4-inch triangular mesh; 5 inches higher a barbed wire; 6 inches higher a second barbed wire; 7 inches above this a third babed wire. Total height 57 inches.

It is important to remember, however, that the bottom strand of barbed wire must be stretched flat on the surface of the ground at all points. If necessary the ground should be graded before the fence is built. Thereafter such small holes as appear may be filled in. It is not always necessary to fence the entire pasture, for dogs usually attack sheep at night only. If a sufficient area can be fenced to give the flock protection during the night, therefore, they may be safely left in unineclosed pastures through the day. This method involves a certain loss of time in driving the sheep to and from the inclosure, but in many cases will be preferred to the expense of fencing on a larger scale.

"You must have lived in a little Scotch town," remarked a busy London woman, "to appreciate the pinpoints of interest to which a village may be reduced and the absolute publicity of your every movement in such a place."

"Once while I was visiting at home I happened to be lying down when callers came, so my mother did not disturb me. At tea time other callers arrived, and by way of making conversation one of them said to me very sweetly:

Willing to Wait.

A Baltimore clubman tells of two convicts who met for a moment alone in a corridor, and took advantage of the fact for a hurried interview. Said one, "How long are you in for?"

"For life," responded the other. "And how long are you in for?"

"Twelve years," responded the other.

"Then," said the "lifer," cautiously extracting a letter from its hiding place, as he glanced fearfully around, "take this and mail it for me when you get out."

Expensive.

"How often is your motor overhauled, Binks?" asked Dusenberry.

"Four times last month," said Binks.

"Four times in one month? Geerusalem! What for?" demanded Dusenberry.

Effacement.

"Did you go away on a vacation to forget your troubles?"

"Yes," replied the man who does not care for outdoor life. "There is nothing that makes you forget old troubles like going out and picking up a lot of new ones."

Philosophic Resignation.

"Does it take two of you to interview me?" asked Senator Sorghum.

"No," replied the patient scribe; "I brought my friend along so that you could give him first chance at the denial in case your constituents don't indorse what you say."

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson III.—Second Quarter, For April 18, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Ps. xxiii—Memory Verses, Ps. xxiii—Golden Text, Ps. xxiii, 1—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This most familiar of all the psalms to many people is as farreaching as any and will have its complete fulfillment only in the kingdom when Isa. xi, 10, 11; Jer. xxiii, 5, 6; Ezek. xxxvii, 21-28, shall be fulfilled in the eyes of all nations, with every other prediction concerning Israel's future glory. All the true shepherds and shepherdesses of the Bible are suggestive of Christ and Israel, with some reference also to Christ and His church. He is primarily the Shepherd of Israel, leading Joseph like a flock, dwelling between the cherubim (Ps. lxxx, 1). He is also the Good Shepherd giving His life for the sheep and giving eternal life to His sheep, the sheep of His pasture (John x, 11, 27, 28; Ps. c, 3). He is the Great Shepherd risen from the dead, by whom God works in His people that which is well pleasing in His sight (Heb. xiii, 20, 21). He is also the chief Shepherd, who, at the resurrection of the just, will give the crowns to those who have won them and among others the crown of glory to those who have faithfully fed the flock (1 Pet. v, 1-4).

All the shepherds, such as Abel, Jacob, Joseph, Moses and David, were wondrously typical of the Good Shepherd, and the women also, such as Rachel and Zipporah, who kept sheep, give us much to meditate upon, but all centers upon Him who is altogether lovely and of whom our souls say, "My meditation of Him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord" (Song v, 16; Ps. civ, 34). The sequences of Scripture are most interesting and helpful studies, and in Psalm xxii, xxiii, xxiv, we have one of the most wonderful. Ps. xxii tells very fully of His sufferings, as if written by an eyewitness; speaks of His hands and feet pierced, His garments divided and lots cast upon His vesture, and quotes some of the very words flung at Him as He hung upon the cross, but it also tells of the resurrection and the kingdom. Ps. xxiii suggests Israel's glory in the millennial kingdom, and Ps. xxiv tells of the King of glory ruling the whole world in righteousness.

No one can truly say "The Lord is my Shepherd" who has not seen Him dying in their stead, bearing their sins in His own body and received Him as their own Saviour (Gal. ii, 20; I Pet. ii, 24; John i, 12; Eph. i, 6, 7). Then only can we be sure that we shall never want any good thing, for He who spared not His own Son will with Him also freely give us all things (Ps. xxxiv, 9, 10; lxxxiv, 11; Rom. viii, 32). It is impossible that such a Shepherd could withhold from any of His sheep anything really good for them.

Pastures of tender grass and waters of quietness (Ps. ii, margin), such would He have us enjoy always if we would only keep close to Him and not stray away like a lost sheep, choosing our own pasture and causing Him to grieve over us, saying, "Oh, that my people had hearkened unto me and Israel had walked in my ways" (Ps. lxxxi, 11-16). Although none of His sheep can ever perish, they may wander and need restoration, as when David said, "I have gone astray like a lost sheep; seek thy servant," or, again, "Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation" (Ps. cxix, 176; ii, 12). He will be glad to lead us in the paths of righteousness if we are only willing to be thus led. Thus only can we foreinste the kingdom and know something of its peace and quietness and assurance.

The expression "the shadow of death" is just one word and is found ten times in Job, four times in the Psalms and four times in the prophets. It may refer to the whole time of our sojourn here for we may be said to be always in the shadow of death, but the believer can always say, "I will fear no evil," for to the child of God death is always gain and very far better (Phil. i, 21, 23). Death is never spoken of as the coming of Christ, for although death brings gain to the believer, it is always an enemy, the last enemy to be destroyed (I Cor. xv, 26). In life or death, if we are His, He is always with us to guide, comfort, sustain, protect us and assures us that He will never leave us or fail us (Deut. xxxi, 8; Isa. xli, 10, 13; Heb. xiii, 5).

The table in the presence of enemies will have a great fulfillment at the beginning of the next age, when He will come in glory for Israel's deliverance. It will then be a feast of fat things, when He will take away the rebuke of His people from off all the earth (Isa. xxv, 6-9). For the believer there is always a feast, and we may be day by day satisfied with the fatness of His house and drink of the river of His pleasures (Ps. xxxvi, 8). It is a reproach to the Lord when His people are seen seeking satisfaction at the world's table. When truly anointed with the Holy Spirit we shall so enjoy the Lord and His fullness that there shall be an overflow for others, but how few seem to overflow! Some one has said that with the Lord going before (John x, 4) and with goodness and mercy following (verse 6) we are cared for as only heaven can care for us. Then to think of our forever home, from which we shall go no more out (John xiv, 1-3); only unbelief can make us sad. May our hearts ever respond to "Let us be glad and rejoice and give honor to Him" (Rev. xix, 7).

1915 Overland

Real Riding Comfort

NEW underslung rear springs make the Overland one of the easiest and most comfortable riding cars in the world.

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

The Overland swivel seat gives absolutely free movement of the springs, prevents binding and reduces possibility of breakage.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

FARMERS' CLUB HOLDS NEIGHBORHOOD SHORT COURSE.

Value Of Lime And Legumes In Building Up The Soil Is Discussed.

The Progressive Farmers' Club of Prince Georges County held a most successful neighborhood short course at T. B., March 16-20, the subjects being "Farm Crops" and "Poultry Husbandry." This was the last of a series of such courses which the Extension Service of the Agricultural College has held in a number of neighborhoods this winter in co-operation with local farm organizations such as Granges and clubs. It has enabled many to have the benefit of teaching that the Agricultural College has never before brought directly to them.

Those attending the sessions of the short course were members of the club and their families, as the women folks as well as the men are enthusiastic in their attendance at the lectures. Demonstrations were given in selecting eggs for market, operating an incubator, mixing poultry rations, testing soil for acidity, judging seed corn, and in comparing different kinds of lime. Especial interest was taken in what Prof. W. T. L. Taliaferro, of the Agricultural College, had to say of the value of legume crops and lime in building up the soil for better production.

He said in part: "Nothing will help more in building up the yielding power of the soil than the use of legume crops, such as the clovers, alfalfa, cow peas, vetch and soy beans. These can be used for turning in as green crops or in growing a heavy sod as the case may be which fills the soil with humus and nitrogen plant food. It is not economy to buy commercial nitrogen at 15 to 20 cents a pound when the same results can be gotten by the use of legume crops, at the same time improving the moisture-holding power of the soil. Any of these crops can be easily grown on our Maryland soils, and with frequent applications of lime will give most of the plant food that our farm crops require.

The mistake, however, is often made of using too light an application. Not less than a ton of burned lime or two tons of ground lime stone or oyster shells should be used per acre. Such an application as this need not be given oftener than every once in five or six years so that the cost for lime would not be more than 50 to 60 cents an acre per year.

"In buying lime it has been found that if pure burned lime costs $2.75 per ton at the kiln, then hydrated lime or slacked lime should be $2.10 and ground limestone $1.50 per ton. What kind you should use depends entirely upon its quality, price, and the distance it can be hauled to advantage."

DO YOUR HENS LAY IN WINTER?

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

When eggs are high in price, during the winter, do your hens lay? If they do, wouldn't you like to be able to sell most of them? If they don't, wouldn't you like to have eggs to use without paying a high price for them? You can keep the eggs laid by your hens in the spring, when eggs are cheap, until winter if you wish. Of course, these eggs cannot be sold as fresh egs, but you can use them yourself, for they are perfectly good for cooking purposes. Then you can sell the fresh eggs at the advanced prices.

The best method of keeping eggs is by cold-storage, but this is not available to most poultry raisers. There is a method, however, that can be used by anyone—the waterglass method. The directions are as follows: Make up a solution using one part, by measure, of waterglass (sodium silicate) and nine parts of ordinary water which has been boiled and allowed to cool. An earthenware jar is usually considered best to keep the solution in. The eggs are put into the solution in as fresh a condition as possible.

It is best, where possible, to put the eggs in the day they are laid. It is also better to have them clean so that washing is unnecessary. They will also keep longer if they are sterile; no male birds running with the flock. Keep at least two inches of the fluid above the eggs, cover the receptacle to prevent evaporation and store in a cool place. Waterglass can be obtained either as a liquid or dry powder. The powdered preservative was put on the market the past year.

TOPDRESSING WHEAT WITH COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER IN SPRING.

Where the soil is rather poor and deficient in nitrogen it will usually pay in a normal season to topdress wheat in the spring with 75 or 100 pounds of nitrate of soda and the same amount of acid rock per acre. If the soil is fertile so that there is no question of a good growth of straw being produced in a normal season, it is not worth while to fertilize. The fertilizer should be applied early in the season, the first part of April, in order that the early spring rains may dissolve it and carry it down to the roots, where it must go before it can be utilized by the plant.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Little Foxes.

FIFTH LETTER.

It is fearful to think of the many ways by which our tender vines are spoiled, what a host of little sins stealthily find their way into our hearts only to spoil the purity of our lives and render us barren of good works.

There is selfishness, which resembles a sponge, in that it takes up all itself and gives out little or none only as it is squeezed. Selfishness always loves itself best. "What must I do to get a picture of one whom I love best?" said a mean man to a friend. "The easiest way," said his friend, "is to sit for your own portrait."

Ingratitude, too, is a mean little fox, that will not acknowledge its obligations for a favor, nor thank God for His mercies on Earth. The old saw puts it thus: "Bring up a raven and it pecks out your eyes." Ingratitude is so ravenously cruel that it justifies this proverb. Its very appearance is hateful. It is like kicking the bucket from which you drank. It is the basest of vices. No one owns it—he is ashamed to. Even the devil will not defend it. The antidote for it is "do good to the unthankful."

Then there is Envy that can't bear to see the success of others without sore eyes, and Coveteousness that cries, "give, give," and is never satisfied.

There is also Procrastination, or faith in to morrow instead of Christ, which has been the cause of many a man's perdition. God says, "Now is the accepted time," but you say, "by and by" and that road leads to the town of Never.

You who have idled away the morning of life have the day yet left you, though beset with many snares.

You who are in the full vigor of manhood, are you loitering and wasting the golden hours, or reclining at ease and squandering the noonday of your life? Do you not know that life is made up of little things? Are you treading in the good old way that leads to eternal happiness? In it are no secret places, in which the tippler's glass or beer keg can be concealed. No haunts of vice are there, nor is the air poisoned with the impure breath of the blasphemer's lips. You need not go to the haunts of iniquity or to the gambling den to see the foot prints of the little foxes. Look into your own lives and see the marks of these little pests and then guard against them, chase them away and with the confidence of a child look to a higher power for the victory. The little wrongs often inflict the greater injury and little acts and unkind words make deeper wounds in the hearts of others than the assassin's knife.

These little pests of our life creep in unawares and too often spoil all the fruit of our lives. From morning's light till long after the earth has wrapped herself in a veil of darkness, we see the effects on those who are strolling about, loafing on street corners and passing rude remarks on those who hurry by; or resting their lazy limbs on the soft side of a store box in front of the store, they are devising some new methods of serving the devil.

Child, are the little foxes of peevishness, fretfulness or anger nibbling your purity of character in the early morning of your life. Chase them away at once and keep stainless and pure the soul given you by your Heavenly Father. Ah parents and friends, do you wish the tender plant to grow into a sturdy vine, then plant it in love and guard it against the invasion of these little sins. Seek to have it refreshed with grace and train it over the great high cross that reaches beyond the dome of the sky, so that when you climb to the top for the richest fruit you may find yourself within the golden gate.

Why does the long and costly trail so often sweep the dirty pavement and rich ruffles and gorgeously decorated bonnet so frequently promenade the streets when the money unnecessarily spent on these things would feed and clothe the hungry orphan and freezing child.

Sisters! Why not pause long enough to raise the broken slips around you and plant them in new soil. Brother! Where are you? What kind of fruit are you producing? What are you doing in the garden? Are you training the vines for the Master's glory and guarding against the little foxes, or are they destroying your better nature and rendering you unfit for the heavenly Paradise? Are you too, decking the body with costly robes following the inclinations of your heart and trying to satisfy the desire of your soul with the empty pleasure of the world? Why allow the little foxes stop the fountain of your better nature? Why not clothe the soul in the beautiful robes of Christ's righteousness. Manhood and old age, how is it with you? Were the sickle of the reaper to be thrust in now, would he gather you among the wheat and treasure you in the garner of the Lord, or would you be bound in the bundle of tares and cast into the lake of unquenchable fire? The busy fox of unbelief—the worst and most destructive of all is doing his work. He is stopping your ears to the voice of conscience, reason, hardening your hearts in the deceitfulness of sin and rendering you indifferent to the tender invitations of the Saviour.

Well may every one of us cry out with the Psalmist, "Cleanse thou me from secret faults"—those subtle unnoticed sins that spoil the vine so sadly. They are the cares of the world, the deceitfulness of riches, the lust and pleasures of life which are choking the word and making us unfruitful. Diligently and earnestly must we pray against these things that are secretely spoiling the vines of our lives.

Take fromus the foxes, the little foxes that spoil the vines, for our vines have tender grapes.

NORTH GLADE

The little granddaughter of Stephen Rhodes is still quite sick.

Mr. A. I. Ameen was visiting at the hospitable home of Theodore Beckman last week.

J. L. Fitzwater, Jr., spent part of Easter holidays visiting his best friends here.

Messrs. Smouse and Leichter, International machine men, were canvassing in this community last week.

Should dancing be taught in our country schools? It seems to the writer that the time should be utilized in other directions.

The festival and box supper held here the night of 5th inst., was a decided success. A large and well behaved crowd enjoyed themselves, until a late hour. The net proceeds were $30. The good ladies of North Glade know how to please and entertain.

While we rejoice to hear of the success of Rev. McAmic in his meetings, we feel somewhat neglected here.

Perhaps we should all be a little more enthusiastic and energetic along religious lines. Don't you think so?

We congratulate THE REPUBLICAN upon its improved condition and its increased circulation.

THURSDAY APRIL 15, 1915.

THE commercial failures of the United States last year were 8,344.

THE tonnage of the Great Lakes fleet in 1914 amounted to 2,939,786.

A LITTLE more than one third of the workers in this country are agriculturists.

FARMERS in the Philippines raised 15,000,000 bushels of corn last year. Value, $12,300,000.

IN these days the small boy would rather swat the fly on the ball field than beat the carpet at home.

PAINTING the house and neglecting the backyard is like putting on a silk robe over soiled underclothing.

MARYLAND contributed to the Federal treasury for the drink bill, the sum of $5,200,000, according to government figures.

IF we don't boost Garrett county nobody else will, and every boost makes for progress and prosperity in which you share.

THE time for general prosperity has been postponed, according to Secretary Lane, who says in six months there will not be an idle man in the country.

THE Garrett County Board of Trade will cover a wide range and its work will benefit every section, every community and every citizen directly or indirectly.

LAST week was a Republican week. The party carrried the municipal elections in Chicago, Ill., St. Louis, Mo., and Clarksburg, W. Va., by big majorities.

WITH blissful ignorance a Democratic newspaper inquires. "What is business afraid of?" There's only one answer. Business is afraid of the Democratic party. It has old time reasons for being afraid of the party, and its experience during these two years has not belied that former education.—East Liverpool Review.

THE Riggs National bank of Washington, District of Columbia, has brought suit against Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Comptroller Williams. The bank says: "It has been been compelled to resort to the courts from the arbitrary, unwarranted and unlawful exercise of official authority by the comptroller.

THAT the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company or any person may not cut or trim trees that come in contact with its wires on the public highway of the State, without first obtaining a written permit from the State Board of Forestry and paying the required fees, is the effect of a decision handed down by Judge Urner, in the Court of Appeals at Annapolis recently. The opinion upholds the validity of Chapter 824 of the Acts of 1914, under which the Forestry Board was created, and its powers and duties defined. It affirms the judgment of the lower court, which dismissed the bill for an injunction brought by the telephone company.

THE CHICAGO ELECTION.

One of the many significant features of the Chicago election was the complete assimilation of the Progressive vote with the Republican, another indication of what is going on all over the country, that the former dissenting wing of the Republican party is realizing that the only hope of the country being rid of disastrous Democratic rule is in the reuniting of forces opposed to the performances of the Wilson administration. Of course the Democratic press belittles the result as a Republican victory, crediting the outcome to local conditions and the disaffection of the Harrison Democrats. But allowing for all these factors they do not account for the enormous majority given the Republican candidate for mayor. Chicago, of all the cities affected by the depressing policies of the Democratic administration, was compelled to maintain by far the largest army of the unemployed.

There can be no question that the deplorable industrial conditions of this thriving manufacturing center made an impression upon the voters. They could not get a direct whack at the National administration, so they rallied to the Republican mayoralty candidate to give that much vent to their indignation, and notice as to their set determination and line of action in 1916.

REPUBLICANS GETTING READY.

Speculation as to Col. Roosevelt's plans in connection with the presidential campaign of 1916 is always interesting. It is now reported that he will make a trip through Canada to the Pacific coast during the summer, and that opportunities will be afforded him on the way back to make speeches, participate in local "fights" and reestablish cordial relations with old-line Republicans. Many observers think they see a tendency on the Colonel's part to let bygones be by-gones, to make up with Barnes and Penrose and to concentrate his fire upon the Wilson administration rather than upon his former political associates.

Col. Roosevelt strayed a long, long way from the fold in 1912, and it is a long, long way back. He may intend to return to the party without attempting the audacious feat of securing the nomination for president. No one can prevent him from being a Republican again. But if the Colonel should be true to form, and should hit the back trail for the purpose of resuming leadership of the Republican party, he would find the trail lined with as choice an assortment of ambuscades, submarine mines and masked batteries as his belligerent soul could desire.

No doubt an attempt by Col. Roosevelt to capture the Republican nomination would overshadow the campaigns made in behalf of other available men. However, Republicans are assuming that the Colonel is out of running, and they are considering the qualifications of other men. Elihu Root is often discussed, notwithstanding his positive statement that he must not be considered. His recent address to the New York constitutional convention have confirmed the favorable opinion of men of clear perception as to his notable qualifications. He has struck a responsive chord in his appeal for the preservation of old liberties, and unquestionably a strong section of the party will favor his nomination, in spite of the reason he gives for refusing to become a candidate.

A few names are beginning to appear prominently in connection with the Republican nomination. Senator John W. Weeks, of Massachuetts, attracts much attention, and the more he is considered the more readily his availability is admitted. Philander C. Knox, of Pennsylvania, is discussed most favorably. His conspicuous ability, his residence in the Republican stronghold, his popularity among Republicans of widely varying views are all points in his favor. Ohio offers two good men in former Senator Burton and former Ambassador Herrick, with Gov. Willis in the background as further proof of Ohio's inexhaustible resources. Mr. Fairbanks, of Indiana, is being groomed for the race, and farther westward Senator Sherman and James R. Mann of Illinois, are attracting a share of the preliminary lightning flashes. The middle West, with Senator Cummins, and far west, with Senator Borah, are sure to be heard from.

In casting about for material Republicans often return to New York and speculate upon the possibility of nominating and electing Justice Charles E. Hughes.

In addition to this glittering galaxy, there is a big field of local celebrities whose families are sure they would be chosen for President, if only the public knew of their great abilities. Maybe the little-known ones will come to the front. There is time for a lot of history to be made before nomination day. In some respects 1916 will be a good year for dark horses. Some Republicans even go so far as to predict that it will be a "yellow-dog year." The ambitious ones who feel in their hearts that they are ideal presidential timbers have every reason to indulge in pleasant dreams and throw out their modest hints. They can bear in mind that Abraham Lincoln was not the most commanding figure in his party when he was chosen. If they do their best to imitate Abraham Lincoln, they will not go astray, even if their party fails to reward their merit by nominating them for President.

WASHINGTON, D. C., TO OAKLAND, MD.

Superb Scenery and Macadam Roads Found By Tourist.

An automobile trip from the National Capital to the county seat of Garrett county is one of the enjoyable things of life. It is a great pleasure in touring over this beautiful drive.

Scenery that equals the White Mountains of New England and at the present time, while the peaks are still capped with snow, a worthy rival of the European Alps is revealed to the eyes of the tourists in one gorgeous view after another.

The far-famed New England roads or the Alpian highways are not one whit better than the road which the Old Line State has constructed from Baltimore to Cumberland over what is known as the National turnpike. True, there are still twenty miles to be completed, six miles east of Hancock and fourteen miles between Gilpin and Hancock. In addition, Washington motorists will have to negotiate the one mile of dirt road just west of Gaithersburg. This last named stretch will probably be finished by May.

The road near Hancock is being relocated north of the Western Maryland Railroad tracks, thus eliminating four dangerous crossings; in the meantime the old road is being used. At this time of the year it is a little rough, but in two or three weeks' time the travel will pack the roadbed down so that it will be perfectly smooth and no trouble to drive over. The same may be said of the 14-mile stretch farther west.

Road building machinery is scattered all along this section, and work will no doubt commence on it as soon as the snow is off the mountains. The roadbed is smooth and the grades easy. In dry weather it will be easy riding; in wet weather chains are advised.

Leaving Washington the autoist has twenty-two miles of first-class macadam, then one mile of dirt road; from this point to within six miles of Hancock, a total mileage of seventy-six miles, it is straightway over road that is as good as the best drive in Rock Creek park. The first mountain west of Hancock, known locally as Sideling Hill, has been macadamized to the foot of the western slope. The view from the top of this mountain is superb and well worth a 15-minute halt.

This is the beginning of the unimproved portion of the road, but at Gilpin the macadam begins again and leads all the way into Cumberland. Of the 143 miles without a rut or a water break, the road to Cumberland and return will be termed the ideal drive out of Washington.

The Post pathfinders covered this route on a recent Sunday in a Locomobile six touring car, and were fortunate in selecting an ideal day. It is doubtful if the opportunity will again afford during the coming season the view of the mountains as they were at that time. They left Washington a few minutes after five in the morning and at 8 o'clock sat down to breakfast at Hagerstown. By this time the sun was up and the air had the feel of spring in it. Crossing the Cumberladd valley the real entrance into the Allegany Mountains begins.

Far off to the left a peak of the exact shape of the Pyramid rises above the surrounding territory. The south side of this hill is cultivated and showed a slight tinge of green. Blue birds and robins were flying about and not a sign of winter was to be noted. One hour later the north side of this peak came into view. It was covered with snow from top to bottom. All this time the Locomobile had been climbing steadily up the mountain side. The sun was shining warmly, when suddenly in rounding a curve the car shot into a snow-covered road and the frigid wind chilled the passengers.

For the balance of the day the climate alternated between winter and spring. When running along the south side of the mountains where the sun was shining it was warm and pleasant, but soon the top or bottom was reached and the curve made to the north side, where snow, cold, and ice were found in abundance. By this time, however, the sun has traveled farther north and all the snow and ice have been melted. In two or three more weeks the trees will be in leaf and the first wild flowers will be making their 1915 bow. Then will be the time to take this trip.

From Cumberland to Oakland is almost one continuous ride over and among the Allegany mountains, amidst the most delightful, picturesquescenery. It is one constant panoramna of God's handiwork. Over hills and mountains, through fertile valleys and by cozy farm houses along the old historic National Pike. From Frostburg to Oakland one is in "wonderland." Charming, delightful, magnificent you cry as you pass over the splendid State highway.

Grantsville is a historic village, built along the Pike for about a mile, a village of neat, cheerful, inviting homes, good business houses and hotels. At Keyser Ridge you are at the highest point in the State. Here you turn to the left and leave the old pike and travel the new State road for about two hours. The ride down the mountain affords an indescribable view of the picturesque "Cove." It is worth traveling days to see this magnificent view. Man has made the wilderness to bloom like the rose.

The unpetentious, but charming village of Accident is soon reached. A prosperous, happy community, with attractive homes, splendid farms, good church buildings and an inviting public school building. In less than an hour Oakland is reached, one of the most desirable and up-to-date summer resorts of the nation.

Married.

BOARDMAN—STURGISS—From Washington, D. C., comes the news of the marriage there on Monday evening of this week of Miss Nellie W., only daughter of Col. and Mrs. A. G. Sturgiss, of Oakland, to Mr. Edward L. Boardman, of Washington. The ceremony took place in the parlor of the Rev. Dr. F. K. Harden, pastor of Mount Vernon M. E. church, at the New Berne apartment house at 7 o'clock. The bride was becomingly attired in a dark blue traveling suit with hat to match. Among those present at the ceremony were Mrs. Anna W. Koonce, and Mr. Edward T. Koonce, of North Carolina. Shortly after the ceremony the couple left for a honeymoon trip embracing New York and the North. They will be at home at the Santa Rosa apartments, Washington, upon their return, about two weeks hence. Mr. Boardman is an electrical engineer in the United States Treasury Deparsment and the marriage is the happy culmination of a long friendship between old families. Mr. Boardman is a Baltimorean and the bride's charming personality needs no introduction to her home town. The couple have the sincere best wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy wedded life.

Kamp—Miller—Miss Laura Miller, daughter of George Miller, of near Accident, and Mr. Jonas Kamp, son of Judge and Mrs. Henry Kamp, also of near Accident, were married in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church in Oakland on Tuesday at noon by the pastor, Rev. O. A. Bremer. The ceremony took place in the presence of Judge and Mrs. Kamp, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Frazee, Mrs. Carl Frazee and Mr. John L. Englehart, the latter having driven the wedding party to Oakland in his automobile. They will reside on the Fred. Kamp farm near Accident.

SUCCEED OR FALL TOGETHER

Communities succeed or fall together. Competitors in trade, producer and consumer, employer and employee, the private individual and the public—all secure the best results if they work together. The success of one on legitimate lines means the benefit of all, and the failure of one means loss to all.

The more we consider these questions, the more clearly we realize their truth. But the unreasonable critic or agitator is the enemy of mankind, including himself. He obstructs and destroys, and he does not create or improve. One who is controlled by selfish, unfair or dishonest motives—even though he may secure a temporary advantage—will never receive any lasting benefit. This applies to all classes of people and to every department of life. It applies to us in considering our attitude and conduct towards others, and, with equal force, to those whose action or disposition affects us. If we are sincere and fair in our treatment of others we may hope for similar treatment by them. If we are diligent in trying to ascertain the good in others they may see good in us.—ELBERT H. GARY.

REMOVAL SALE—Will offer my entire stock of goods at greatly reduced prices and within the next thirty days will be located in the Litzinger Building. L. GORTNER. Adv. 5-2t

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS

Weekly Gleanings From The Oakland High School.

Miss Evelyn Helbig is confined to her home with an attack of mumps.

Mr. Leo Lyon was absent last week on account of the illness of his brother Vernon, whose duties he was performing at the B. & O. station.

The Junior class members will hold an exchange at Sturgiss' Pharmacy, Saturday, April 24, from two till five p. m. Come and help them by purchasing your week end provisions.

Last Friday being Arbor Day, instead of planting trees, we cleaned the grounds surrounding the school building. We make this an annual occasion to improve the premises. Each class is assigned one side of the school grounds and when the refuse is accumulated it is burned. We were favored with a fine day to clean up.

Recently we mentioned in our notes a literary contest proposed by the Keyser Preparatory. We suggested a date for the contest which they thought too late in the school year. We then proposed a date earlier, wishing to comply with their wishes and to have the contest if possible. We are now in receipt of a letter in which this date is courteously refused. We are greatly disappointed that we cannot have this contest.

On Friday night Macbeth, a la mode, was presented at the Maryland theatre to a large audience despite the inclement weather. We feel sure the cast feels repaid for the time and efforts they gave to the play. The Glee Club deserves praise for the rendition of a number of selections as also do our comedians, "Skeet & Joe" for their specialties between acts. We especially thank the M. E. Sunday School orchestra for their excellent music. The proceeds of the play were $62.50, and the net proceeds $34.20.

The followiug students have made not less than eighty per cent. in each subject studied and not less than ninety-five per cent in deportment for the seventh month of school: First year class, Alma Calhoun, Anna Calhoun, Helen Casteel, Reva Davis, Eva Falkenstein, Mildred Ford, Francis Miller, Mary Drake Naylor, Margaret Sincell, Elizabeth Townshend, Coyla Barnhouse, Victor Harvey, Robert Porter, Edward Scott and Robert Sliger. Second year class, Beulah Ralston, Carrie Mann, Carol Miller, Lillian Helbig, Winifred Weimer, Mildred Dixon, Felix Robinson, Pauline Jones. Third year class, Mildred Thrasher, Carrie Thrasher and Clara Bush. Fourth year class, Edwana Peddicord, Lena Ravenscroft, Leah Sincell, Harvey Bittinger, Harold Conneway, Delbert Davis, Harold Dawson, Robert Garrett, Ross Isenberg, Dottie Doman, Lulu Friend, Evelyn Helbig, Grace Laffey, Playford Naylor, George Queer and John Scott. Post Graduate, Robert White.

American Institute of Electrical Engineers Will Assemble at Deer Park.

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers, which is composed of members from every portion of the United States, men who take the lead in electrical work along all lines, will hold its thirty-second annual convention at the Deer Park Hotel, at Deer Park, on June 29th and 30th, and July 1st and 2nd. Morning and afternoon sessions will be held.

One of the topics to be discussed at the afternoon session of one of the convention days will be that of electrifying steam railways, a subject that has had more time devoted to it in the past few years than any other problem confronting the electrical world.

At the convention the heads of great electrical works, such as Edison's, the Westinghouse interests and the General Electric Company, will be present, as well as scores of engineers from every part of the country.

Floyd White's auto is making trips between Oakland and the Park. You will find him in front of Squire Rudisill's office. He will see Garrett county instead of visiting the exposition as he expected to do. The day the Journal was sold he presented the collateral for 750,000 votes and had more up his sleeve. This would have given him the Journal trip to the Panama Exposition had the contest been a success.

Mr. James D. Hamill is having the upper floor of his building on Alder street remodled for the purpose of converting it into a flat. It will contain six rooms.

Said one of the leading citizens of Garrett county, "I do not see how a better paper than The Republican can be printed. It is good enough." Good but we are going to keep trying to make it better.

While men were burning brush and log heaps on Sheriff Scott's farm, near Hutton, last Friday, the fire got beyond control and spread over ten acres of ground, leaving a clean field for the plow. No damage was done, but a lot of hard work was saved.

Mr. James P. Treacy, who recently bought the Jarboe property on Alder street, has a large lot of material on the ground and will begin the erection of his new garage in a short time. The building will be about 60x80 feet and entrances will be from Alder street and the alley in the rear of the property.

There is a rumor that the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company will open a branch store in Oakland. An agent was looking for a store room last week. The branch may be located in the Park for the summer.

The B. & O. Railroad Company has planted posts on the driveway, in the rear of the Ravenscroft block, to prevent driving teams along the track which has been of great convenience to the merchants.

There are several places, near Second street that are certainly not "beauty spots." While cleaning up it would be a good sensible idea to rid up those "eye sores," help the civic club create an "Oakland beautiful."

Mr. Fred A. Thayer returned to Oakland Tuesday evening from a few days' visit to his son Ralph in Baltimore. He was accompanied home by his youngest son, Frederick, who with Mrs. Thayer, visited Baltimore and Washington for several weeks. Mrs. Thayer is now in Alexandria, Va., and will return home in about two weeks.

Mr. Reuben Browning of Bloomington, Ill., arrived in Oakland on Sunday afternoon and is here as the guest of Senator and Mrs. Browning. He will visit relatives in other parts of Garrett before his return west. Mr. Browning left Oakland in 1876, first settling in Missouri, later going to Bloomington, near which city he was engaged in agriculture until about two years ago when he disposed of his farm and retired from active pursuits.

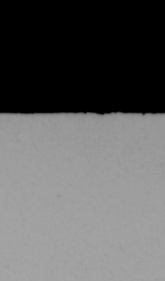
WHY! HOW! WHEN! CHRIST WILL COME

Misapprehensions by All In the Past.

Darkness Flees From Morning Light. Messiah Comes to Bless—First, His Faithful Church; Second, All People. Scriptures Previously Misunderstood. The Man of Sorrows No Longer—He Comes the King of Glory.



August 16.—The Photo-Drama of Creation appears to be the Bible Story, simply told and wonderfully illustrated by perhaps the most beautiful aggregation of Bible pictures ever presented. The object of the Drama is declared to be the re-establishment of faith in the Bible. Manifestly it is well adapted to this end. Few can witness it without deeper reverence for God and great personal benefit.

Pastor Russell's text today was, "When Christ * * * shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory."—Colossians 3:4.

The Pastor began by showing how foolish and unscriptural were many of the suggestions handed down from the Dark Ages respecting the object and the manner of Christ's Second Advent. The Bible declaration that our Redeemer would come again and receive His faithful people to Himself was once surmised to imply that all the remainder of mankind would experience eternal torture. But now, in the blessed enlightenment of our day, we see that the gathering of the Church in the First Resurrection is merely the completing of the Seed of Abraham (Galatians 3:16, 29), whose work thenceforth will be the blessing of all the families of the earth, according to the Divine Promise and Oath.

The declaration that at our Lord's Second Coming He will judge the world in righteousness, we once misunderstood to mean that the Redeemer would merely confirm a judgment, or decree, of eternal torment against mankind, the speaker asserted. He then briefly outlined the Divine Plan for human salvation from the sin and death conditions brought upon the race through Adam's disobedience and extended as a judgment to all his posterity. He showed that since "Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man," Adam and all his race would have another trial for life—individually, however. This new trial has been delayed until the Church class is tried and qualified to be the world's judges during its trial—during the 1,000 years of Messiah's Kingdom.

The Pastor explained that in this trial right and wrong, truth and error, will be set before mankind with the full explanation that whoever chooses sin will choose the Second Death, but that whoever chooses righteousness will choose life everlasting. He then contrasted this Scriptural view of the Judgment Day with that handed down from the Dark Ages—a twenty-four-hour day for damning afresh the poor race already suffering from the original condemnation.

How Christ Will Come.

Next was pointed out the unreasonableness of the unscriptural theories respecting Christ's Coming received from a darker time. According to these, the Redeemer would come again in the flesh, the only glory of which would be a shining skin. The speaker then quoted Scripture after Scripture to prove that our Lord was put to death in the flesh, but was raised from the dead a spirit being. Our Lord's flesh was given for the life of the world; and all His human rights will in due time be given to humanity.

It was also shown that since the Scriptures declare that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God," the Church must be changed by the power of the First Resurrection—made spirit beings like our glorified Redeemer, whom they shall see as He is.

Misconceptions respecting our Lord's condition have blinded our minds regarding the manner of His Second Coming, the Pastor declared. Thinking of Him as a fleshly being, we were unable to comprehend the Scriptures telling of His Parousia (presence) in the end of this Gospel Age and of the twofold work then to be accomplished—first, a separating work in His Church, unseen and unknown by the world; second, a manifestation to mankind, not in flesh, but "in flaming fire."

Parousia and Epiphania.

The speaker then discussed at length two words used in the Greek MSS. in reference to our Lord's Second Coming. He said that our English translation beclouds their significance. Christ's Parousia, presence, was shown to refer to a period when, "as a thief in the night," unknown to the world, He will judge His Church, giving reward to the faithful. This includes the resurrection of the dead saints and the change of the living ones.

After the Church has been glorified, the Epiphania, or shining forth of the Lord in glory, will take place. This will mean a sudden blazing forth of God's righteous indignation against all unrighteousness. Severely awful as these judgments will be, nevertheless they will manifest the Love of God. By the fire of that tribulation mankind will be uplifted and blessed.

EDITOR BARES WOES TO CHECK GOSSIP

Declares Publicly He Didn't Beat Wife's Face to Jelly; She's Gone.

DAHLONEGA, Ga., April 13—The editor of the Dahlonega Nugget, which is the largest, in fact the only newspaper in Dahlonega, has lost his wife. He knows just where she is and just why she isn't home, and in an effort to still the tongues of the village gossips and have the subject discussed and abandoned in a short time he has placed the entire matter before the reading public of Dahlonega in an editorial which misses no detail of the event leading up to his wife's rebellion.

The editorial follows:

"Yes, an editor without a wife. It is the way we are today. It may seem strange to you, gentle reader, that a man and his wife after living happily together for nearly 40 years will then separate. But it matters not how strange it may seem. It is our condition which we would not refer to hadn't a party who is too sorry for the dogs to notice circulated the report that we had beaten our wife's face into a jelly first of the week, running her off from home, causing the city marshal to become unusually active by riding two miles making diligent inquiry about the matter when there were real violations of the law committed on and near the public square within the last three or four weeks, one of which we are told that he witnessed, and if he ever opened his mouth about it we have not heard of it.

"Besides the real liars, we have a lot of double equipped forked, loose-tongued tattlers who have been busy ever since, and, being willing to do good for evil, also cause us to want to say something to keep them from running themselves to death and be given quarters with the devil on account of leaving this world with a lie in their mouths. This separation and jower of ours, and no fight or even a lick struck, was on account of two of our grandchildren who had been playing on the street pitching a ball for hours, instead of cutting wood and delaying in doing what they were sent to look after. Boys who we fed and cared for. Yes, the ones who we wanted to work in the office; not that we needed them, but to try to encourage them to work placing money in the bank at the end of every month to their credit to see if it would not cause them to be more active and grow up in usefulness. But our efforts failed.

"To see and know of them idling away so much time caused us to carry in some withes to be put into use when they came home. This started the racket, resulting in our wife taking the two boys and leaving but for her daughters in the country. To see them preferring idleness to industry was more than we could stand.

"We couldn't help but swear, but we were at home and it is nobody's business. We don't get out on the streets to swear and disturb persons like some persons do. No man or woman can say that we fail to provide for home and tried to cause our wife and daughter to lessen their work, by begging and persuading them to cut out their laundry business, without effect.

"Then we cut up clothes, broke wash pots, notified persons not to patronize them, because there was no necessity for them to run a laundry. Even cut out our residence phone for a while to see if they couldn't be stopped. Bob Meaders and many citizens know these to be facts, even the liars and tattlers know it, but they only tell one side. And our daughter quit home rather than to be ruled in this manner.

"And whoever shall willfully injure, tear down or destroy, use for any other purpose than the receipt of mail facilities or shall willfully take or steal such matter from or out of any such letter box, or shall willfully and maliciously assault any letter or mail carrier, knowing him to be such, while engaged in his route in the discharge of his duty as such carrier, or shall willfully aid or assist in any offense defined in this section shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned not more than three years or both."

The Day of Days

A False Impression.

The following is a part of Tax Commissioner Blue's address at Parkersburg recently, relative to the financial condition of our state.

"The liquor people purposely, and some who are not in the liquor business, unadvisedly endeavor to create the impression that West Virginia suffers financially because she prohibits the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. The appropriations for all purposes of the state, payable out of the general revenue, for the next biennial period, including over $400,000 to aid local public schools aggregates $2,500,000 annualy. The state has a present deficit and will have a deficit of approximately $700,000 on June 30th, next—the end of the present fiscal year. It is also true, however, that the state had a deficit of $350,000 on June 30, 1914, notwithstanding that in the fiscal year then ending, the state had collected license money from those engaged in the liquor business. Back of this, however, the state had a deficit of $480,000 on June 30th, 1913, notwithstanding in the fiscal year then ending the state collected as much revenue from the liquor business as in any year the state collected such revenue. Now, inasmuch as we had deficits for two succeeding years before prohibition came into effect, what shall the liquor people say, in their efforts to create the impression that the deficit in West Virginia exists solely today because she is a prohibition state?"

GARRETT COUNTY BOARD OF TRADE

An Appeal to the Citizens of Garrett County.

The work of the Garrett County Board of Trade is intended to cover the entire county, hence the business men and farmers of the entire county are urged to become members of the Board.

While the object is to boost Garrett county, the Board of Trade will give special attention to the interests of each election district and town of the county and will endeavor to call the attention of the outside world to the advantages offered to home seekers and investors in that particular locality.

The Board of Trade will aim to enthuse Garrett countains in their home county, to impress upon them the importance of developing the very best interests of the county.

It will stand for Civic improvement, good roads, improved school buildings and school conditions; co-operate with the farmer in the marketing of his crops, in the disposal of timber, etc; in the developing of mineral rights.

It will stand by the merchants in building up a home trade, by creating a "buy at home" movement. It will labor to bring the seller and buyer together. It will represent Garrett county as the ideal location for tourists, vacationists and summer homes. This is a profitable field to cultivate.

It will boost Garrett county, every nook and corner of it.

Its greatest success as a booster requires the hearty co-operation of every individual citizen. We must get together, pull together and do our level best to put Garrett county at the very front.

Boost Garrett county, it you don't who will?

The two papers, THE REPUBLICAN and the Democrat are 'Boosters from Boosterville." They are giving us, as a Board of Trade, as a county, column after column of space to help develop the county. They boost the county fair, the Civic Club, the church work, the school question, the good roads movement—everything good and uplifting.

Through these papers we appeal to the citizens of the county, hence one of the papers should be in every home in Garrett county, should be sent to friends away from the county, should have the widest circulation. Boost those who are boosting your interests.

The Board of Trade is in its infancy; it will grow, will spread until it reaches you, your farm, you and your town. It is doing foundation work, laying plans to help you in your interests. Time and patience is required. Co-operation is needed. Organization is to be effected. Thought is necessary in securing larger and better results.

The headquarters of the Board is in Oakland; its office is in room No. 2 Ravenscroft building. This is headquarters only—the Board, as suggested in its work and membership is county-wide. It is for all the people and their best interests.

The coal operator, the farmer and the merchant of Kitzmiller will have in it a friend, a booster.

The lumberman, the farmer, the store keeper at Creilin, Davis, Jennings and Friendsville will find it a good helper.

The miller of New Germany, of Gortner, of Grantsville, etc., will find in it a booster for buckwheat flour, "made in Garrett county."

Grantsville, Accident, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park and Oakland hotel managers will have a medium to procure summer boarders and tourists. "See Garrett County First" will attract the pleasure seeker.

Well! Well! This is great proposition. It is a mighty undertaking. It sounds well, but—

Keep quiet, Mr. Croaker. It is great. Great in many respects, but remember, Garrett county is a county of great possibilities, of rich promise, of growth, of prosperity. The men who came into this mountain wilderness, the abode of wild animals, without roads and far from civilization, accomplished great things and their sons and daughters have accomplished wonders and they have the courage, the ability and the will to accomplish greater things and they will do so

The Garrett County Board of Trade can be the instrument in accomplishing this end,

CORN CLUB WORK ENCOURAGES OUR BOYS.

Helps To Improve Both The Variety And Methods Used In Securing Larger Yields.

A striking example of the effects of interesting the farm boys in corn club work is told in an account of a visit of a representative of the Agricultural College to Charles County, where he visited a number of the boys in the Corn Club of the local agricultural agent. Norbert Langley, a 13-year-old boy, living in the neighborhood of La Plata, had a yield of 86¾ bushels of corn on his acre last year. He also raised, on a piece of ground his father gave him, 500 pounds of tobacco, which will probably net him close to $50. As a result of the boy's interest in the corn-club work, his father used the boy's yield of last year for his own seed and produced a first-class crop of corn, under unusually unfavorable conditions.

The methods he followed are those outlined by the State Experiment Station, which in regard to cultivating corn are as follows:

Cultivation should be thorough; it should begin early, and when necessary continue until after the tassel or even the ear appears. No rule can be given for the number of times corn should be worked; because, in some cases four times may be sufficient, and in other cases eight or ten workings may not be too much; weather, weeds, and soil conditions are the only guides.

If, after planting and before the plants have pushed through the ground, heavy rains form a hard crust, the field should be gone over with a spike-tooth harrow or weeder.

The cultivator should be started as soon as conditions will permit, not waiting until weeds show up. The best way to keep the weeds in check is never to let them get started, and the nearer each working is done at the proper time the fewer will be the number of cultivations necessary. Shallow cultivation is preferable at all times; if, however, the ground is hard, or compact and weedy the first cultivation should be deep and close to the corn; but when the plants have reached a height of six or eight inches the cultivations should be shallow, running the shovels not more than three inches deep. After this period of growth the lateral roots spread rapidly in every direction, soon ramifying through all the soil between the rows and the plants. Under normal conditions a large portion of the roots develop near the surface so that cultivating four inches deep may destroy 50 per cent. more roots than three inches deep.

It must be borne in mind that the destruction of weeds is not the only reason for cultivating, breaking a hard crust to allow the air to penetrate the soil, and to conserve the moisture is often eually as important as killing weeds.

FARMERS' DAY AT THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, MAY 29.

President Patterson Invites All To Attend.

If there is any one class of citizens who either by reason of their numbers or through their importance to the community should have a State-wide holiday set apart for their honor and enjoyment it is the farming people. Neither is there any place more fitting as the centre of this celebration than their agricultural college and experiment station, where "Farmers' Day" is now an annual event for the gathering of farmers and their families from all parts of the State to inspect the work being carried on at these institutions. The time selected—May 29—is singularly fortunate, as much of the early planting is out of the way, cultivation is just beginning and the summer harvest is still ahead of us.

By this time, if the farmer has made a good start with his spring's work, he will find much pleasure in observing further ways of enhancing his success. If he has made a poor start he needs to acquaint himself with every method of improvement possible that will help him square himself with his investment of cash and labor. If he does not find that which will in some way be of help to him on this holiday it is to his interest to find out why these institutions are not doing work that is of practical value to him.

The Agricultural College and Experiment Station are just as much any farmer's property as a farm or wood lot would be except that it is owned co-operatively and must be handled for the benefit of all concerned. What the tenant is to the farm owner the administrative officer of the Agricultural College must be to the farmers of the State who are sharers in the benefits of the institution. Is it not an indifferent farm owner who does not, at least, occasionally visit his farm to make certain that his tenant is giving the proper attention to its management?

SOY BEANS OR COW PEAS WHICH?

Some Advantages Of The Soy Bean Over Cow Peas as a Soil Improver.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Since the soy bean is coming into prominence in this State many farmers are beginning to ask the question, "Is it better to grow soy beans or cow peas?"

Which is best depends upon the soil and the climate and the purpose for which the crop is grown. Soy beans can never take place of cow peas on poor, sandy soil. For this soil nothing has yet been found equal to the cow peas. On the heavier clay soils of the State soy beans are ordinarily better suited than the cow peas.

Soy beans will yield as much or more hay per acre than the cow peas, and the quality of the hay is better on account of the soy beans retaining their leaves much better than the cow peas in the curing. Soy bean hay also cures much more rapidly than cow pea hay and is damaged less by rain.

Another advantage of the soy beans is that they will yield anywhere from 10 to 35 bushels of seed per acre, which can be harvested and threshed with the same machinery and as easily as wheat. Cow pea seed will deteriorate in case it is subjected to a week or 10 days of wet weather after it has ripened, while the soy bean is not damaged under these conditions on account of shedding the water quite readily.

The place of the soy bean in the farm rotation will always be that of a fertilizing crop as well as a hay crop. On the Eastern Shore and in Southern Maryland, however, where wheat is not a paying crop and straw is not essential for bedding, the soy bean may replace wheat as a ready-money crop, the seed of the better varieties now selling for from $1.50 to $3.00 per bushel.

There are many varieties of soy beans, and in the success with the crop depends largely upon growing the varieties best adapted to local conditions. There are certain varieties, however, which will do well almost any where in this State outside of the mountain section. There are: Wilson, Medium Yellow, Sable, Haberland, Virginia, Cloud, Ebony, Peking, and Taha. These varieties are all good seed and hay producers, excepting the Peking, which is better suited to seed production and not so well to the production of hay on account of its not growing as large as the other varieties, although on good soil it will yield two tons of hay to the acre.

LIME IS WASTED WHEN IMPROPERLY APPLIED.

H. J. PATTERSON, Maryland Agricultural College.

Considerable energy is wasted and money lost in the manner in which lime is often applied. In the first place it should be remembered that the tendency of lime is downward in the soil, so it should always be applied at the surface and never plowed under. In the second place it should be remembered that the lime, when in its caustic or quick state, has the most power in producing chemical and physical changes in the soil. For this reason the aim should be to get the lime into the soil in its active state, and have it thoroughly incorporated in the soil before it has had a chance to lose any of its active principles. With this idea in mind, lime should be slacked by means of water, and, as soon as in a powdery state, should be spread over the land and at once harrowed in, to thoroughly incorporate it in the soil. Lime should not be allowed to "air" slake, as by so doing it absorbes carbonic acid from the air and is changed back to the carbonate, the form in which it existed before burning and consequently some of that which was paid for in burning is lost. Lime put on small or large piles to slake should be covered with earth to keep it out of contact with the air while slaking, and, as soon as it has come to a powdery condition, it should be spread on the land and harrowed in.

WORKING IN LIME.

It will generally be found more economical to haul water to apply to the lime and slake it out at once rather than cover with earth. Slacking with water would be a more economical method than to lose part of the value of the lime through air slaking.

Do not apply lime on top of the land with the idea that the rains will dissolve it and carry it into the soil, for, in the first place the rains may not come until after some lapse of time and much of the lime will have returned to the carbonate; and, in the second place, it takes 700 pounds of water to dissolve one pound of lime and that amount of rain could not be depended upon.

Pure Magnesium lime, which is commonly claimed to be poisonous to the soil and crop, gave the highest yield in a crop test conducted at the Maryland Experimental Station, the results of which were published in Bulletin No. 66.

A comparison of the results showed stone lime and shell lime to be of about the same value on the soil.

Little Problems of Married Life

By William George Jordan

[Copyright, 1910, by Fleming H. Revell company.]

V.—The Wife's Settled Income.

The Stingy Husband.

THE most vital problem of married life is its simplest problem. It is the money question in the home. It is the division of the family income in a domestic partnership. Its solution means putting the home firm on a business basis. If unmet and unanswered it has more assorted possibilities of disillusion, discord, dissatisfaction, deception and disunion to the square inch than any other subject in the vocabulary of matrimony. It can be settled for a lifetime in a single hour.

Before the honeymoon reaches its first quarter this problem should be quietly promoted from the ranks of the unsolved. In a spirit of loving confidence and conference, in the interest of their united happiness, this question of the wife's settled income should be clearly and definitely understood between them. The amount of money involved may be only a trifle, but the principle means justice, and justice is no trifle. She seems in an atmosphere of sweet thoughtfulness and loving watchfulness over her happiness when he is the one who proposes this plan—a regular income for her as household queen, with a private purse of her own. But should he just driftingly let it remain in the realm of the unspoken she should not permit pride to make her an accomplice in his silence.

When a man says at the marriage altar, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," and two months later makes it necessary for her to resort to diplomacy to get 70 cents from him to pay the iceman his memory needs repairing.

When a man puts his wife's love and her respect for him in pawn for $2 or any amount of money he is likely to lose the ticket and be unable later to redeem the pledge. When she fears to speak to him about money and undergoes sacrifice, self denial and humiliation to avoid the ordeal her love is scheduled for adjournment. It is true that "perfect love casteth out fear." It is equally true that perfect fear finally casteth out love.

The husband who dolorously doles out dollars under protest on the installment plan to meet family expenses as if they were reluctant contributions to an outside charity is viewing home from a wrong perspective. When he requires his wife to mark down in a little book every item of expense—not to guide her in wise management, but for his personal satisfaction—and then goes over it as an auditing committee, quizzing her in civil service style on the wisdom of this expenditure and the reason for that, he is mistaken about wanting a wife. What he needs is—a housekeeper without pay. To be consistent he should set up a cash register in the kitchen and have every purchase rung up and a voucher put in the drawer.

When he leaves on the corner of the mantelpiece in the morning just enough money to last through the day while he is selfishly humoring every whim or wish of his own there is a suggestion of running a home on the slot machine principle—the mechanical delivery of scant supplies through small investments for immediate use.

There is an irritating assumption of superiority in man's managing of money and a cowardly insistence on woman's irresponsibility and extravagance quite characteristic of some men. If a wife can be trusted with the motherhood of his children and their guardianship and training and the management of his home, surely she should be trusted with whatever amount he can afford to run the house, not to be extracted from him by daily "assessment," but by weekly or monthly allowance that will permit her to take a broad view of income and expenditure, to plan wisely and prudently. If she be extravagant she must be taught economy through money responsibility. She can never learn by any other method.

The husband who splashes money in the home one week may let the weeks following be as dry as the bed of a mountain brook after a long, parched, rainless summer. You cannot keep the house wheels running by the water that is past. With this spasmodic supply of domestic funds there is usually an air of conscious generosity as if he were donating this money to his wife as a personal gift for which she should be grateful. In reality much of it may be already pre-empted by bills; the margin left for current expenses may be little. He usually has a vivid memory of the amount of his contributions, but a fine forgetfulness of the long intervals between them.

She may have to face, too, that most humiliating and most mean of all questions in home management, "What did you do with that $10 I gave you in February?" This method means unhealthy alternations between extravagance and parsimony, the reaction from reverses, the cutting down of income and the many dangerous sequels to this dire disease may bring the husband and wife face to face with a financial crisis. It is the entrance to a time of stringency, strain and sacrifice, with no exit made visible even by the telescope of optimism. It means a reconstruction of the home regime on siege lines. There is a reclassifying of household expenses, and many of the luxuries are quietly removed from consideration, and many of the old necessities are promoted to the luxury class.

Financing in times such as these rises from a mere science to the dignity of an art, and every dollar has to work overtime and do the duty of two or three. Chafing restrictions take the place of the old freedom, wants grow impudent and insistent, and a new atmosphere fills the home. It is a situation requiring slow, careful watchfulness as that of a sea captain standing on the bridge of an ocean steamer and directing the snail-like progress of his ship under slow steam through a heavy fog.

There is danger of fretting, blame, recrimination, protest and lack of sympathy on the part of the wife, met by a tendency to coldness, bitterness, anger, hopelessness, sulks, sarcasm or despair on the side of the husband. When conditions are darkest it is no time for blame of either. It is the hour when each should forget self in seeking to inspire the other.

When conditions are darkest the lamp of love should be kept burning brightest. This is an occasion where the two should pull together. You cannot move and guide a boat properly with one oar. It requires the two, on opposite sides, to move in harmony.

A spirit of unselfishness, of making the best of things, of not taking trouble too seriously, of laughing away little inconveniences instead of erecting a monument of a moan to them, counting the blessings that remain, thinking more of the salvage than of the loss, realizing the sweet duty and privilege of the stronger to be brave for the sake of the weaker—all help greatly in the crisis. Such an experience is not the most awful in the world. In the later days, if it has drawn the two into closer harmony and fuller realization of mutual dependence, it will be but a happy memory of an episode, the dawning of real living.

They may even later laugh merrily over that meager Christmas dinner they had in their one little room the year the factory failed, when they gave French names to the simplest dishes and helped each other to wine that their imagination transformed from water and gave orders in dignified society manner to the serving maid who did not exist and did other brave, foolish little things to hearten each other. They had determined that this Christmas should not be sad, and they were almost afraid to look into each other's eyes for fear of breaking down.

There were the extravagantly mendacious letters they wrote home about the building of the new wing to the house, their trouble with the servants, the parties they attended, the beautiful necklace her husband gave her on her birthday, when in reality all he could put around the throat he loved was his arms with a clasp made of his hands, and the plays and operas of a New York season, just because they were too proud to let the old folks know and they were going to fight and to win together—somehow.

There are real sorrows that make mere poverty seem wealth by comparison. There is the standing together by the sickbed of a dear little one in the hush of a dimly lighted room, watching, waiting, fearing and hoping. Then come long days and longer nights when, weak, worn and wearied, each looks for hope in the other's eyes, when all life is reduced to moments, when the light of hope dies and they face their great sorrow—together. Then must they meet the slow, creeping tide of long days of loneliness and emptiness of life when the thought of a child's laughter forever silenced brings a pang of anguish that no mere words can deaden. The gentle mutual thoughtfulness, wistful watchfulness and tender handed love of each ministering to the other lighten and lessen their journey through this Gethsemane in the lives of two.

When the mantle of disgrace falls on the shoulders of some one near to both husband and wife and a hurt pride and a wounded sense of honor threaten to leave an ugly scar, when their natures seem to grow bitter and resentful at this pain and shame coming to them who are innocent, then together must they be brave, and together must each be a source of strength to the other.

There are crises, too, where misunderstandings, begun as a trifle, augmented by that clever circumstantial evidence that so deftly fits into a theory, shake the foundations of faith, and doubt wedded to suspicion kills confidence. Then a calm conference, holding the balance of judgment suspended in the firm hand of love, listening to explanations without bitterness, seeking only truth with the wisdom that does not translate, perhaps, an innocent imprudence into a crime, may help to tide over an unhappy episode that assailed the whole future of both.

Faith and trust and love to be worth anything should be ready and equal to any emergency. They should never surrender if a ray of hope remains. Trust should be like a lifeboat, designed not for sunshine and calm, when the bright blue sky is unflecked by a cloud, but when darkness, storm and tempest make troubled seas.

The spirit of unity that pulls together through a crisis has little to fear for its happiness in any of the situations that may arise in the life of the home.

GARRETT COUNTY'S BIG FAIR.

Preparations Already Under Headway for the Fair of 1915

This week we want to talk with the farmers of Garrett county about the fair and what it means for their profit and happiness. Experience is a great teacher. We have had experience. A most inspiring experience, a most remarkable and successful experience which leads us to hope and work for greater results.

Now is the time to plan for your exhibit at the fair, September 29, 30 and October 1. Every district in the county is urged to be represented at the fair this fall. This is to be the climax of all our efforts to show the world what Garrett county can do. The fair will be extensively advertised. Buyers for horses, cattle and sheep will be attracted. Commission merchants will be here to purchase carload lots of potatoes. The potato exhibit will attract buyers from everywhere.

Why not furnish seed oats for the market? President Sliger had enquiries for seed oats. The farmers of Garrett county can establish a reputation for seed oats. Will they do it? We ought to have 50 exhibits of prime oats at the next fair.

It will be a great day, a profitable day for the farmers of Garrett county when they strive to be prize winners in their line of work.

Farming for business or farming as a profit making business A farm with well managed departments run for profit. Each farmer, each and every member of the farmer's family planning for the greatest success on a few weill cultivated acres. No use spreading yourself over 50 acres, when the same results can be produced from ten acres.

Working with a prize in view makes the work more cheerful and promising, arouses ambition, enthuses the boys and girls and produces results.

Remember the fair this year is going to be a great success. That Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 29, 30 and October 1, are going to be the greatest days in the history of Garrett county; days of happy, enthusiastic surprises, a regular jubilee occasion, days of delightful astonishment.

We want every farmer and every farmer's family to have a part in the jubilee, so we send out this appeal. You are now planning your summer's work. Select an acre or two for special cultivation, for special thought, for record breaking results. Decide to take the first prize; by so doing you interest the boys, and becoming interested, they will remain on the farm.

Help us make the fair of 1915 a howling success and cause the whole state to "sit up and take notice."

Sure as two and two make four, so sure will the fair of 1915 be a magnificent surprise and a wonderful exhibition of what Garrett countians can do when they try.

RU-BER-OID ROOFING

COSTS MORE - WEARS LONGER

RU-BER-OID costs a little more than imitations, but its first cost is practically the last. Customers who have used it for years tell us that RU-BER-OID puts an end to repairs, and that cheaper roofings that they have used begin to go to pieces after a few seasons.

RU-BER-OID (always spelled with one "R" and pronounced "Ru" as in "Ruby") is built to withstand all extremes of climate. It is permanently waterproofed.

Many RU-BER-OID roofs are still serviceable and watertight after more than 20 years of hard wear. We know the value of RU-BER-OID and we recommend it because it always gives satisfaction.

Beware of imitations. We sell the genuine, with the "Ru-ber-oid Man" (shown above) on every roll. It comes in slate gray or in attractive colors—Tile Red and Copper Green. Drop in, we'll be glad to show you the real RU-BER-OID.

THREE DWELLINGS BURNED DURING WEEK

One In Town, Another Nearby and Another on a Farm Located Near Deer Park.

The past week has witnessed the burning and complete destruction of three dwelling houses, two of them being located on farms and another in Oakland.

On Thursday afternoon the dwelling on Miss Nell Turley's farm, near Oakland, which was occupied by a family named Cross, was burned with all its contents, followed on Monday morning by the burning of a small dwelling located in Oakland, owned by Mr. E. J. Fringer, and occupied by Roy Nair and family. The latter building was insured for $350 and was completely consumed the fire having gained such headway before the alarm was given that it was impossible to save any portion of it.

Tuesday afternoon a small dwelling on the farm of J. B. Meese, near Deer Park, was also burned. The fire was of a mysterious origin. No insurance was carried upon it.

Praise For Rev. G. W. Kepler.

The sermons of Rev. Kepler at the morning and evening services at the first Methodist church last Sunday, were both thoughtful, earnest and inspiring messages. Somehow, there is a peculiar power about the plain, simple straightforward appeal of this quiet, unassuming man—a power that is only given to him who has heard and heeded well, through the storm and stress of long and toilsome years, the call of that still small voice—a power that can not be assumed—a power that talent and gift of oratory can not give—a power born of Faith and a life of strict fidelity to duty.—Doddridge Republican.

Miss Louise Compton, who taught the Springdale public school, has returned to her home at Elk Lick, Pa.

SUCCESS CROWNED EFFORT

Greate Concerte and Syngging Meeting Was Largely Patronized.

The musical entertrinment staged at the Maryland Theatre last Friday night under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society of the Lutheran church, was largely patronized and the numbers on the program were well rendered by those taking part.

Aside from the musical talent shown the quaint costumes and mannerisms of those taking part in the program, gave one of this age a lasting impression of the prevailing styles seventy-five to a hundred years ago.

The music was furnished by the Oakland orchestra, which played exceptionally well throughout the evening.

The part of tymist was well taken by Prof. C. E. Bender, while the pianists were Mrs. Loraditch, Miss Hagans, Miss Eleanor Hinebaugh and Mr. Isenberg.

Those taking part in the program were all local people with the exception of Mr. John Johnston, of Morgantown, W. Va., who came over to Oakland as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Renninger. Mr. Johnston had two numbers on the program and he sang well and was accorded hearty encores after each number. He has a strong tenor voice and his services were highly appreciated by those having the entertainment in charge.

Dr. John G. Robinson, of Accident, also took part in the program, singing in his old-time manner which is always appreciated by his Oakland friends, who are legion.

Married.

MARTIN—HARVEY—James Earl Martin, of National, Md., and Miss Bessie Odell Harvey, of Kitzmiller, Md., were married Saturday morning at the parsonage of the United Brethren Church in South Cumberland by the Rev. H. E. Richardson. The couple left in the afternoon for Blaine, W. Va., but will later return to National to reside.

Mr. Joseph Potter, of Johnstown, Pa., is visiting in the vicinity of Sang Run.

MESSRS. ASHBY AND WHITE WANT TO BECOME SHERIFF

Announcements to This Effect Are Published In The Republican Today.

By reference to the column containing the announcements of candidates seeking nominations at the hands of the Republican voters of Garrett county, those of Mr. Albert Ashby, of District No. 14, and Mr. George D. White, of District No. 7, both seeking the office of Sheriff, will be noticed.

Mr. Ashby has for the past two years been a member of the Republican County Committee and has rendered excellent service to his party as snch. He has never before sought office other than that as a member of the City Council of Oakland, to which office he was elected two years ago. He is a member of the old Ashby family of Garrett county, having been born and reared within the borders of Garrett. He is well qualified for the position and will make a most excellent officer, being active, enegertic and possessing that quality of character necessary as an officer of the law.

Mr. White, well known as one of the first Sheriffs after the formation of the county, which office he filled with satisfaction to the people generally, has been a resident of Oakland nearly his entire lifetime. He is a son of the late Rowan White and has for two or three years past been a traveling salesman for a Baltimore commission house. While Mr. White is well past the prime of life he is still active and energetic. He has been a candidate for the nomination for sheriff a number of times but failed at the polls. Two years ago he received 248 votes while Sheriff Scott, his successful opponent received 674.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER

Mr. Fred. Kamp, of Friendsville, son of the late Judge Henry Kamp, of Accident, is a candidate for the nomination for County Treasurer, as will be noticed by referring to the column containing the announcements. Mr. Kamp, born and reared at Accident, moved to Friendsville in the year 1901, where he is engaged in farming. He is well qualified for the office and will give satisfactory service to the public should he be nominated and elected.

MARYLAND'S LAW FOR ROADSIDE TREES SUSTAINED

Courts Declare Constitutional New Law for Protecting Trees within the Public Highways.

The Court of Appeals of Maryland on April 9th, of the current year, affirmed the right of the State Board of Forestry to protect, plant and supervise the care of trees along the public highways of the State. This right had been contested by certain individuals and corporations, and an attempt made through the lower court to prove its unconstitutionality.

The law, as passed by the General Assembly of 1914, empowers the Maryland Board of Forestry to plant trees along the roadsides; make plans of planting and estimates of the cost for any person or organization who may apply; superintend the actual carrying-out of such plans for roadside planting through State Forest Officers or local Forest Wardens; furnish available trees at cost prices from the State Forest Nursery established for the purpose; and protect roadside trees already planted from misuse, unwarranted removal, mutilation, promiscuous trimming or any other injury, except where deemed expedient or necessary, and then only by permit of the Board. In addition to its foregoing provisions, the same Act prohibits as illegal the posting of signs and advertising matter on trees, fences, poles, posts or any other structure within any public right of-way, or on the property of another without his written consent.

It will thus be manifest that full powers are delegated to the Board for the protection of grown trees, the planting of new, and the prohibiting of such objectionable signs and notices as may in any way detract from the beauty and appearance of Maryland highways. In years past much damage has been done by hasty and irresponsible trimming of trees where for any reason they were deemed derogatory or in the way. The new law gives to the Board power to stop this through the issuing of permits which make suitable provision for any projected work of this nature, and the competent supervision of a State Officer in its execution.

It was this right which has been at times contested, but is now sustained, and its wise application is an earnest of the gradual improvement which it should bring about through the betterment and beautifying of the State's highways.

FOUR YOUNG MEN CHARGED WITH AUTOMOBILE THEFT

Were Arrested On Complaint of Thos. A. Deveny at Clarksburg.

Accused of stealing an automobile valued at $2,000, Bert Lynn, Charles Aultman, Henry Huhan and George Huhan, four well known young men of Fairmont, were arrested Monday in Clarksburg by local constables and taken to Fairmont, where they appeared before Justice of the Peace M. R. Mustgrove and were told that bail bonds of $500 each would be required for their release.

The complaining witness is Thomas A. Deveny, owner of the car and a summer resident of the Park. The car was taken a week ago, and it is said that the young men, or at least some of them, had intoxicating liquor with them, and that during the week the car was in their possession they enjoyed themselves to the limit.

Last Saturday officers armed with warrants for the young men's arrest started out on the trail of the missing car which was found in Oakland, but the young men had fled. They were overtaken by the officers in Clarksburg and were arrested in a Clarksburg hotel at 4 o'clock Monday morning.

All four of the men were ill, it is said, at the time of their arrest and one of them was taken to a Fairmont hospital for treatment. The men arrested allege that they rented the car from a son of Mr. Deveny and that they are not guilty of stealing it.

Aultman has for a number of years been Mr. Deveny's chauffeur and came to Oakland about ten days ago with the car, being accompanied by the three who were arrested with him.

GARRETT COUNTY BOARD OF TRADE

Appeal to the Farmers of This County to Raise Seed Potatoes.

The Garrett county Board of Trade would like to interest the farmers of this county in the movement suggested by the faculty of the Agricultural College, to make Garrett county the seed potato producing market for the eastern part of the state and Virginia.

The test has been very satisfactory, made by several farmers of the county and the results warrant the planting of a crop sufficient to meet the demand.

Many car loads of potatoes will be required by the potato raisers. Our neighbors of the mountain region of Allegany county will plant with this trade in view. Garrett county should take the lead.

The Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain are the potatoes to plant. The Board will try and have this potato on sale in different parts of the county.

The Board will join the Fair Association in its efforts to awaken a greater interest among the farmers in their life work, hence in addition to the premium offered by the said Association, the Board will give the following additional premiums:

For the best half bushel of Irish Cobbler, $1.00; for the second best, 75 cents; for the third best, 50 cents.

The prize winning potatoes to become the property of the Board of Trade at the close of the fair, to be used for advertising purposes.

For the best display of the following varieties, half bushel each, Irish Cobbler, Green Mountain and Early Rose, $1.00; and for second best, 75 cents.

The Board of Trade will make an effort to find a market for all the seed potatoes raised by the farmers of the county. In fact the Secretary is now corresponding with merchants and potato growers on the subject so as to create an interest in the Garrett county grown Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain potatoes.

Farming for profit, is the result of raising seed potatoes. It means an increased bank account, it means ready cash for home purposes. It will advertise Garrett county advantageously.

For further information address, L. A. Rudisill, Secretary, Oakland, Md.

TRIP FROM OAKLAND TO UTAH

Description of a Trip Made to the Pacific Coast.

FIRST LETTER.

From Oakland one has a choice of routes and trains to the west. He may go via Cincinnati and St. Louis or by way of Bellair and Chicago. The first named route was selected.

Leaving Oakland at 10:18 p. m., one reaches Cincinnati about 8:05 a. m., and has time for a good breakfast in the dining room of the Union depot. This city is one of much interest, within the corporate lines are numerous hills covered with handsome residences. There are several public parks or "woods;" a splendid "zoo." The street car system extends everywhere and afford a splendid view of the city.

At 9:00 a. m., the train is taken for St. Louis, a most enjoyable day light ride through a rich farming country and by a number of large manufacturing cities; a ride of 339 miles on a steel train. It is six o'clock when the train pulls into the splendid, large, cheerful union depot at St. Louis.

Here an enjoyable day was spent in sight seeing, Oakland and Mountain Lake Park are patronized by St. Louisians. From here we travel to Kansas City and have the free use of a reclining chair car. Leaving the station about 8 p. m., we arrive in Kansas city at about the same hour in the morning. Here are located the great packing houses of the nation whose products are shipped to all parts of the world.

Kansas City, Kansas, and Kansas City, Missouri join each other. An enterprising boozer built a saloon in Kansas City, but extending over into Kansas City, Kansas, about ten feet. He had his bar on the Missouri side, so that he could supply the thirsty people of Kansas, it being a dry territory. For a time he did a flourishing business, but a way was found to end his business after a time.

Here the Union Pacific road was taken for Denver. A daylight ride was enjoyed through Kansas, one of the great states of this country. In farming, in educational and in industrial pursuits among the foremost in the union, especially has it a reputation for educational advantages.

The capital, Topeka, is about two hours ride through a beautiful, wealthy farming country. For more than a quarter of a century has the State been blessed with prohibition and because of the banishment of liquor has become a wealthy state, a state of most charming homes, both in the town and country. It is not an uncommon sight to see twenty or more automobiles stand at the country church yard during the hours of service. Drunkenness and pauperism is almost unknown.

For hours and hours you ride through what was once known as the Great American Desert, now rich prairie farms and cattle ranches. Once the home of the wild Indian and Indian wars, now the land of peace, plenty and prosperity.

At Manhattan the United States government has a large cavalry fort and training school. A State Agricultural school is also located here. We are now passing through the wheat belt of the State.

Clay Centre and Salina are two prosperous towns and great shipping points. At the latter place is a Methodist University. Shortly after leaving Salina night overtakes us and we awake in Denver, Colorado.

We take the Denver and Rio Grande Railway for Salt Lake City, known as the scenic route to that Mormen city. The ride is a delightful one, one never to be forgotten because of its picturesque scenery, the majestic mountains, gorgeous canyons and beautiful rivers; its daring pieces of engineering to get over the mountains; curves, loops, up and down grades, through snow sheds, along great precipices; one continued feast on God's wonderful, glorious creation in this mountain fastness. It was in the month of August when we crossed the mountain at Marshall's pass, yet midwinter was about us, snow capped mountain peaks and snow along the railroad tracks in abundance.

Of the canyons we have not the ability to write. Our supply of adjectives, of a descriptive charter, is not sufficient for the task. As we gaze upon the scene one is lost in amazement. One surprise after another greets us. We look and wonder. Beautiful! Grand! Magnificent! You hear from all parts of the pullman sleeper. Isn't it wonderful? Like the sweet singer of Israel, we are led to exclaim, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the earth shows forth his handiwork."

Soon the day is ended and the night cometh. A good nights rest is enjoyed and the new day finds us in Utah—the home of Mormonism, the twin relic of slavery. The scenery has changed somewhat, while mountains are seen, we travel mostly through a well cultivated farm, vineyard and fruit growing country, everything raised by irrigation. The fruit most delicious and abundant.

The ride to Salt Lake City is enjoyable and full of interest, and Salt Lake City is the mecca of thousands of tourists from all over the world. Here we spend several days in sight seeing, which we will write about in another letter.

BITTINGER.

Automobiles were in evidence on our public roads last week for the first time this spring.

B. E. Callis, of Hoyes, who was principal of our village school during the past winter, re-visitited this community last Sunday. He was accompanied by his sister.

Miss Myrtle Emory, of Jennings, spent last Sunday with her brother at this place.

Rev. J. L. Marvin, of Auburn, Indiana, visited the congreaations of the Lutheran churches of this charge last Sunday and delivered trial sermons in the three churches, which will likely result in his being called to become regular pastor.

Mrs. G. W. Engle, of Baltimore, spent a few days recently with relatives here. Mrs. Engle came up from Baltimore in Senator Speicher's automobile.

Miss Clara Stark entered upon the discharge of her duties in a position recently secured at Mt. Lake Park, where she expects to remain during the summer season.

PLEASANT VALLEY

We are all glad to see the beautiful days of sunshine and to hear the song of the birds again.

The farmers of this community are now busy sowing oats.

The scarlet fever patients, Pearl Swiers and Frieda Fulmer are much improved at this writing.

Mr. A. J. Lee and family were visiting J. H. Sims on last Sunday.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Friend and left a son.

Mrs. R. E. Bittinger who underwent a surgical operation at her home last Friday, is getting along very nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. Gibson of Loch Lynn Heights, have moved to the Chas. Gross farm for the summer.

Mr. H. B. Harvey is now living on his farm at this place.

Mr. Otis Riley and family moved to the Welch property last week.

The box supper held at the Bernard school house on last Wednesday evening was largely attended and all report a good time.

Why Not A Canning Factory.

In the eastern part of the State preparations are being made to establish several new canning factories. So extensive has this business grown that about $13,000,000 worth of fruits, vegetables and oysters are packed annually in Baltimore and more than 7,000 people are employed in this industry.

The growing of strawberries, peas, corn, tomatoes and other vegetables have in many instances superseded the aforetime staple crops, wheat and corn.

Recently the writer ate for his supper near the town of Oakland canned beans put up by the home folks. They were equal to any canned beans we had ever before eaten and much superior to some put up by factories for flavor, tenderness and freedom from strings. They were delicious.

Why not some one or more ladies take up the question of home canned goods and put them on the market. A canning factory, centrally located would pay in Garrett county. The coal mines and lumber camps near by would consume a large amount of canned goods. The cultivation of vegetables would provide work for the boys and girls.

Why not can vegetables for home use? It would be a great saving in family expenses and a superior article of canned goods.

The splendid farms around Oakland would be great vegetable producing plants. The soil is well adapted for that purpose, as is proven by the splendid cauliflower and other prize vegetables raised by the Henry Weber Sons Co.

THE REPUBLICAN would suggest that the Board of Trade take this matter up and look over the possibilities of one or more canning factories for Garrett county.

Stock For Sale.

The undersigned executrix of the late Samuel P. Specht, offers for sale the stock of merchandise now on hand, located in the store building in the town of Deer Park, and will rent the building and fixtures to the purchaser.

GARRETT SHOULD RAISE SEED POTATOES FOR STATE

Suggestions Made by The Republican Months Ago Favorably Considered.

The farmers of Garrett county will be interested in the following letter received by R. E. Sliger, President of the Garrett County Fair Association, from acting Dean W. T. L. Taliaferro, of the Maryland Agricultural College, dated April 8, 1915:

"Your letter received and box containing the potatoes to our potato expert and have him write you as to what they are. After my knowledge of Garrett County's potato crop was so forcibly impressed upon me at your fair last fall, I have referred them to you for further information and hope that some of them have been purchasers."

The Republican for many months has urged the farmers of Garrett county to enter this profitable field of raising seed potatoes for the large planters of the Eastern shore and Southern Maryland, as well as the State of Virginia.

By a practical and thorough test at the Agricultural college, and by three or more farmers of this county, it was proven beyond doubt and contradiction that the Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain potatoes raised in Garrett county were in every respect equal to the famous seed potatoes of the same name produced in Maine and that they were better adapted to the use of potato growers in Maryland than the Maine variety.

Because of its faith in Garrett county, and wishing for the greatest prosperity of the county, The Republican has from time to time called the attention of its readers to this subject.

It is glad to see the interest the Garrett County Board of Trade has taken on this subject and the effort the Board is making to get our farmers all over the county to go into this business. The special premium it offers should attract general attention.

Doubtless the Agricultural Association will give special attention to the question and offer a liberal premium for the best exhibit of these two kinds of potatoes at the fair next fall. Let the slogan be: "Garrett county seed potatoes the best for the Southern planter."

The Republican would also like to see special effort made in the mountain section of the county especially for a revival of the sheep industry. The day was when Garrett county mountain mutton was famous in many markets and in several famous eating houses of the land.

The Republican is and always has been and will continue to be a Booster for Garrett county—every nook and corner of the county. We are trying to print a paper for the people, of the people and with the people, and our increasing subscription list shows that we are succeeding.

This is the time for the progressive farmer, the business man and every well wisher of Garrett county.

The work seems to be progressing enthusiasticaly and the directors of the Board of Trade are working out plans for the best interests of the county. This is the time to get together and unitedly labor to accomplish this end.

When in Oakland call at the Board's headquarters and cheer them on in their work.

Mistakes will happen in the best families. Type make us say strange things sometimes. Last week, an oversight in proof reading made me say, "Be a Booser," when the copy said, Be a Booster. Some difference. Don't Booze, but do be a Booster.

L. A. RUDISILL, Secretary.

Less Dogs—More Sheep.

There are tens of thousands of acres of ground in Garrett county that could be profitably used for sheep pasture. These acres today have no valne as a revenue producer. They lie idle because not tillable. On them sheep would thrive and bring to the farmer a snug sum for improved farm machinery, for a better grade of cattle, and for improved conditions on the farm for storing crops and preventing loss through waste.

There are too many worthless dogs and too few sheep today in Garrett county. Within a short distance of my home there are families with from one to several dogs to pay taxes on who cannot pay the merchants the small accounts they owe for the necessities of life, not one merchant but every merchant who trusted them for their daily bread. They have no more need for a dog than they have for an elephant.

Garrett county ought to be the sheep producing county of this state. The mountains and waste places should be covered with flocks of sheep. We need to awaken to the great possibilities before us in this line of farm work.

Fishing Tackle.

Lesson IV.—Second Quarter. For April 25, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xvii, 38-51. Memory Verse, 45—Golden Text, Rom. viii, 31—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The armies of the living God defied and the people of God reproached describes the state of affairs at the opening of this lesson (verses 10, 26, 36). I have just read in the papers of a deficit in each of two mission boards of over $250,000 and of one denomination that has lost 300,000 members in six years. Does there seem to be any parallel, and if so where is the David for the occasion? We have reason to thank God for a man like Rev. William Sunday, who is rescuing more souls from the hands of the enemy and slaying more giants than any other man in America today (May, 1914), as far as we are able to judge, because he has learned how to sling stones with deadly aim in the name of the living God. We cannot but thank God also for such a witness as Daniel Crawford, from the heart of Africa, who has been standing for the living God before the preachers and students and hundreds of thousands of the people of our land. Oh, for more such Davids and Daniels! Who is willing to be another such? How pitiful to see the men of Israel sore afraid and fleeing from one defiant Philistine! (Verse 24.) The words of Joshua are applicable, "O Lord, what shall I say when Israel turneth their backs before their enemies?" (Josh. vii. 8.)

David, the shepherd boy, of no account in the eyes of his brethren, found this condition of things when he came to the camp, sent by his father to see how his brethren fared and to bring them some good things from home (verses 15-18), he having returned from being Saul's armor bearer to feed his father's sheep at Bethlehem. Eliab, his eldest brother, misjudged him and spoke unkindly to him, but he meekly replied, Is there not a cause? (Verses 28, 29). David's inquiry as to why this man should be allowed to defy God and reproach Israel was told to Saul, and he sent for David, and he said to Saul: "Let no man's heart fail because of him. Thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine. The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion and out of the paw of the bear, He will deliver me out of his hand" (verses 32-37).

Saul armed David with his armor—his helmet, his coat of mail and his sword (what a snapshot that would have made!)—but he could not go thus, for he had not proved it. So he put it all off him, and with his sling and five smooth stones, which he knew how to use, and with his staff in his hand he went forth to meet the giant, the great mass of blaspheming flesh and blood (verses 38-40). The giant disdained him and cursed him, which is about the way that flesh always acts toward the spirit, or mocks, as Ishmael did Isaac (verses 41-44; Gen. xxi. 6; Gal. v. 17). How grand are the words of David, "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied" (verse 45). The invisible God was much more real to David than this visible giant, who made Israel to tremble. He reminds us of Caleb and Joshua, to whom giants and walled cities were nothing, because they saw and believed God. Moses also endured as seeing Him who is invisible. Most people, however, see the difficulties and see themselves as grasshoppers (Num. xiii. 33).

Then notice David's one desire, that all Israel and all the earth might know the God whom he knew, the living God, the God who could deliver from an actual lion and bear. He had no thought of himself nor desire for any glory for himself, but he honored the Lord, and the Lord did honor him, according to I Sam. ii. 30. It is great to see no man any more save Jesus only and to say from the heart: "The Lord is my light and my salvation. Whom shall I fear?" (Mark ix. 8; Ps. xxvii. 1.) Nothing can be compared to such a confidence in God as David had. Now see him running toward the giant, placing a stone in his sling, and with a prayer to his God sending it in the name of the Lord of hosts and for the honor of His name. Do you wonder that it went straight and struck hard, sank into the giant's forehead and felled him to the earth? The eyes of all the thousands of Israel and of the Philistines were upon David as he ran to meet his enemy, but he gave that no thought, for his eyes were upon the living God, and God's eyes were upon him, according to II Chron. xvi. 9.

David had no weapon, so he ran and stood upon the giant (can't you see him?) and, taking the giant's sword, cut off his head and carried it away in triumph, first to Saul and then to Jerusalem. He took the giant's armor also (verses 48-58). This was all written for your benefit and mine that we might learn to be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. I do not understand how neither Saul nor the captain of his host knew who David was, although David had been Saul's armor bearer, but I rejoice to meet Jonathan again and to see him loving David as his own soul and stripping himself of garments and armor to put them upon David (chapter xviii. 1-4). Then I think of Him who loved me and gave Himself for me.

Real Riding Comfort

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

The Overland swivel seat gives absolutely free movement of the springs, prevents binding and reduces possibility of breakage.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The Refuge of Lies.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Instinct leads animals to make provisions for the future. All men feel this necessity, though in doing it some are much more earnest and prudent than others. They make their plans and arrange for the disposition of their time so as to accomplish their purposes. They labor to acquire happiness and wealth. They build houses and furnish them comfortably; they have business schemes; they plow and sow and gather the fruits of their toil; they are careful to provide food and shelter, raiment and every necessary comfort for loved ones, and rightly so, for "He that provideth not for his own and especially his own house, hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." Why do men organize and support governments but for the protection of the weak against the strong; of life, person and property and the peaceable enjoyment of their rights? It prepares for war in time of peace though the wisdom of this may be doubted, unless it is solely for defense.

Men use all means to secure comfort, safety, peace and happiness of the body. Suppose you visit all nations and tribes of people you will find the belief in a future life--that the soul lives after it has left the body. Some of these ideas of the future existence may be crude, nevertheless the belief is universal and there is the general expectation of a day of final accounts, when we must answer for the deeds done in the body. You will find also that men have some plans by which to meet these demands; some hopes that it will be night with them in that great day. Behind these schemes they take refuge. In them they trust and build their hopes of eternal happiness on such sandy foundations and think them a sufficient shield from the wrath of the Great Judge.

All realize the necessity of refuge. The destructive storms, the blighting frost, suggest the need of a covering—a house into which we can retreat, so when the irresistible tornado sweeps across the face of the earth and spreads a pall of darkness over the land, we seek a place of safety—a refuge from its fury. The ship makes for harbor and when we discover the signs of the coming storm we drop our work and hike to the shelter where we hide until its fury is spent. It may be the home, the cave, or the rude dug out of the prairie, still it is a refuge from danger that we instinctively seek. Nature suggests the wisdom and necessity of a suitable refuge. This necessity is felt because of the enmity between man and man. He thirsts for the revenge. One man killed another and the friends of the slain avenged the death of their kinsman by the blood of the slayer. This gave rise to the provision of the cities of refuge in Israel.

War and its dire calamities suggest the same thing. The wise commander provides for the contingency of defeat. If overpowered by the enemy he retreats to the fortifications or seeks refuge behind the strong walls of the fort.

From our natural surroundings which embodies the best wisdom in temporal affairs, the idea of a refuge is transferred to spiritual things. A foreseen danger leads to the provision of a refuge. God has said, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," and He has appointed a day of reckoning. The great mass of men believe this; they admit their accountability but have some plan for meeting it. They are resting in this hope, as a refuge against the day of wrath unless they are plunged into despair where they can rest but a little while in the flesh. Many a man is resting behind his false refuge in peace and quieting his conscience against the day of reckoning when wrath shall be revealed against all ungodliness.

Satan is a strategist. He hurries some on in the broad way of open transgression, while he makes others the victims of special sins, as pride, cruelty or avarice. In others he incites the spirit of disbelief of the truth. With some it is indifference or inattention to the spiritual things. Conscience is its own accusser, and the transgressor, feeling the necessity of a refuge often resorts to one of lies but all such will be swept away.

A sense of guilt gives rise to the feeling of this necessity. Transgression and remorse are connected unless it be in cases of obduracy. Even Pagans feel the workings of conscience, these pangs of torture, hence the sighings for peace, longings for rest and desires for refuge.

It arises too from calamitous events of life. A near approach of death gives rise to the same feeling. Men mock at religion in health, yet quail before death. Voltaire after a life spent in ridiculing religion shuddered at the prospect of death for he found his refuges were lies. The reckless cowboy on the plains feels the same need as the storm sweeps down upon him and the darkness of night is made terrible by the tempest and lowing of a thousand cattle. As the lightning flashes and the voice of God is heard in the thunder, his heart fails him, he is hushed in awe of the divine power, while the knee that was too proud to bend before God in the calm, is bent on the prairie and the lips that uttered blasphemy now offer supplications for protection. His refuge of lies failed him in the storm. What will it be when the storm of divine wrath bursts upon the earth? Sometimes under the influence of pungent preaching the truth flashes into the mind and they tremble. They are afraid their refuges will topple upon their heads.

Sad that these impressions so fleeting still when they flee to sadder refuges of lies for safety.

All such refuges are shams, deceptions which tend to destruction. Beware of refuges of lies.

JOHANNES.

Dr. Ward Writes of the Two Months He Has Been in the State of Maine.

To the Editor of The Republican.

After two month's residence in the State of Maine, there are some incidents of interest to me.

This is a beautiful State, consisting of unique mountains, numerous lakes, large and small, and rivers teeming with fish,—trout, bass, pickerel and salmon. Beautiful extensive landscapes, productive of flowers and luxuriant fields of grass and fine apples in abundance. I have noticed many well loaded wagons of bright green hay coming into the city since coming here. This is a vast potato region, for which Aroostook county is famous. Unfortunately, this year there is little demand for this crop. Potatoes now selling in the country for 25 cents a bushel. Last fall they brought 50 cents.

Maine is getting ready to vote the Republican ticket in 1916, even if Theodore Roosevelt should be the nominee, so say the thoughtful business men. As goes Maine so goes the Nation. Look out!

We have had two months of the most beautiful spring weather, I have ever seen under the stars. When New York and Philadelphia were held in the grip of a blizzard, a few days ago, we had cool nights and bright sun shiny days. As I sit at my window on Pleasant street, the lawns are showing a beautiful green. Surely this is a magnificent summer country, from Canada to Portland. In the autumn in the northern region it is fine hunting for the larger game—bear, deer, moose, caribou, foxes etc. Last fall a young lady by herself captured, with her winchester, a fine black fox, for which she got $500. Think of it, that young lady could take care of most any ordinary man without embarassment.

The people are energetic, quick witted, industrious, ambitious in educational matters, broad minded, courteous as though it was a part of life's business to be so, with emotions well concealed, they play the Yankee well. They are not only interested in Maine, but in the whole country, from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. They are nationalists.

In references to the churches, they are for the union of Protestantism. When this matter is discussed they show the keenest interest. If there was as little church prejudice in the South, as there is in the North, you could no more keep the kindred churches apart than you could have the omnipotent thunderbolt, without the thunder. One of these times the lightning will strike.

Maine is a prohibition state. Well, how does it work? It works well, where it does work. And this is pretty general throughout the State. It works well in building up a clean looking, bright, intelligent citizenship. It works well, in building up beautiful commodious homes all over the State. It works well, in promoting a great educational system throughout the commonwealth. It works well in building up good bank accounts for the average citizen. It impresses you with a high state of civilization. Does Prohibition prohibit? Yes and No. It prohibits, where the citizens are Americans, and the political situation is in their hands, and this takes in the larger part of the State. Here they not only have the prohibition law, but the officers are in sympathy with the law, and it prohibits. In the manufacturing towns, when the foreigner has supplanted the American, and where the political candidate in order to secure his election, takes the wrong side of every moral question, to secure his election, and when it is openly hinted that the officials higher up are not in sympathy with the law, and that the decission of the lower courts, will not be upheld, it does not prohibit. No law enforces itself. How easy it is for this class to go to Boston, or else where, and get the worst whisky, and get on a corresponding drunk, and land in jail as they do. One of these times Maine will enact a law that will put the delinquent officials, if by chance he gets into power, and the drunk in the same cell.

R. B. WARD.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Miss Alice Rambeau, a former Park summer visitor, now living in Berlin, Germany, contemplates returning to the home of her brother in Wheeling.

Last Thursday Miss Eva Welch announced her marriage which occurred last fall, to State-road Inspector Brown. They have gone to housekeeping in Accident.

Messrs. J. L. Eckhart, Joseph C. Rathbun and John Stevenson wil represent this section as the local committee of the Garrett County Board of Trade. They will help boost Garrett county, for in so doing they will help themselves. Superintendent Reed, of the Park Association, has 'given the Garrett Board of Trade use of one of the large rooms in the Assembly Hall, during the months of July and August, for exhibiting samples of tile, brick, building blocks, etc., made in Garrett county. On the walls of the room will be hung pictures of different portions of Garrett county. A good way to advertise Garrett county. This will be an interesting place for our summer guests to visit.

Mrs. George W. Cockran rented the Welch cottage for the summer. She returned to Wheeling Friday afternoon.

It seems like old times to meet the genial, goodnatured Dr. and Mrs. Logan Carr on our streets.

Dr. Reed has opened up the Mountain Lake Park Association office. Both phones. He is beginning to get busy with summer plans.

Mr. John B. Waugh, of Cumberland, spent last Thursday in the Park and arranged with W. H. Landon to put in a complete bathroom outfit, and hot and cold water in his house.

Miss Zeck, of Grafton, spent part of last week in the Park, looking after some improvements to her property.

Mr. W. C. Dunnington, of the Mountain Lake Hotel, is giving personal attention to several improvements to the interior of the hotel.

Farmer (to city boarders)—Sorry that you young folks got stung. How'd it happen?

Spokesman—Well, you see, we were standing beside the beehive wondering how the bees made honey. I guess they must have overheard us, for they came out and gave us a few points.

The Misses Hamill are getting their cottage ready for summer guests.

Mrs. Howard Smouse spent part of the winter at Petersburg, Florida.

Too many worthless dogs in the Park. They are a public nuisance.

J. E. Callis is putting in the foundation for his dwelling house, in Loch Lynn.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Harvey are now living on their farm near the Park, and delighted over the idea of getting back to farm life and enjoyment.

Mrs. B. C. Hartman went to Headville, W. Va., Saturday to see her mother, who is dangerously ill.

Newman Wilson and family have moved to Mineral county, West Va., and are located near Keyser.

Mrs. Alma Clary has returned to Loch Lynn and will occupy rooms in the Odd Fellows hall building.

Rev. Dr. McKain went to Bruceton, W. Va., to hold quarterly meetings for the District, Superintendent, F. E. Rathbun supplied Dr. McKain's pulpit Sunday night and delighted the large audience assembled.

Peter J. Lohr, of the Park, has a contract for plastering four houses at Rowlesburg, W. Va.

Blaine Callis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Callis of the Park, is now located at Rowlesburg, W. Va., and is in business for himself.

Floyd White took Mrs. L. Jones, daughter and son and Mrs. Lish, to Deer Park Sunday evening to attend the church services.

Mrs. McKain enjoyed a visit from her father last week. Mr. Brown returned home Monday morning.

Floyd White drove over to Gorman Sunday morning and brought Miss Mildred Welch to her Park home.

Rev. Lewis Jones will preach in the Baptist church next Sabbath morning.

Miss Belle Pritchard, who spent the past winter at her home, Mannington, W. Va., has returned to the Park.

Mr. J. P. Harmon and family have moved to St. Mary's, W. Va. We were sorry to have them leave this place.

Rev. Barnhouse has moved from Loch Lynn to the parsonage at Pleasant Valley.

Prof. George W. Sterling and family have returned to Loch Lynn. The Professor has purchased the house Newman Wilson built in that village a few years ago.

Monday evening sparks from a B. & O. engine set the glade in front of the Crane and Carr cottage on fire. No harm was done.

Mike Laffey sold his house in this place to Peter Gortner, Jr., for $900.

Mrs. Eugene Wilson, through M. M. Schrock, sold her house to Mrs. Neta Cline, of New York city. Consideration, $2400. Mrs. Baldwin, Mrs. Cline's mother, will occupy the house about May first. Mrs. Cline has arranged to make some improvements to the house.

Mrs. Edward Browning has rented the Fulton house and is now occupying it.

THURSDAY APRIL 22, 1915.

EVEN the weather is going dry.

WHEN the prosperity the Democratic observers have sighted comes every man can take a jitney ride.

IT'S to be hoped that Taft and Roosevelt buried their old grudge as well as their old friend at New Haven the other day.

THE new submarine being built for the United States can stay under for 100 days. There is no trouble in staying under, its coming up that bothers many.

"PROSPERITY is here," said President Wilson last week. Have you seen any of it around here? The coal mines remain idle along the West Virginia and Maryland state line.

IF we but stop to think of the net result of each deadly swat at this time of year we will be amazed at the fly prevention possibilities that are within our grasp. Safety first. Swat the early fly.

SIGNS of returning prosperity continue to appear—as in the threatened strike of carpenters in Chicago for higher wages and under conditions that will throw 100,000 employes out of work.

SENATOR Lewis, of Illinois, hears that President Wilson will prefer to retire to private life if his policies are enacted into law before the expiration of his present term. Existing conditions indicate that he will retire.

ON March 1 the index figure of crop prices in the United Statas was about 7.6 per cent. higher than a year ago, 27.1 per cent. higher than two years ago, and 12 per cent. higher than the average of the past seven years on March 1.

THE American voter is becoming a thorn in the side of the professional politician. He is beginning to insist on advance information as to just exactly what the candidates will do in the event of his election. Which, to the politician, is a sad state of affairs.

STATISTICIANS agree that the United States has now more than 100,000,000 inhabitants, not including "little brown brothers." Geographer Sloane of the Census Bureau allows that we passed the round figure Saturday at 4 p. m. Actuary McCoy of the Treasury calculated that there were 100,016,000 persons here by February 1.

THE membership of the Garrett county Board of Trade is increasing right along. The county organization will be completed in a very short time. The interest in the movement is growing. Very strong local committees are being secured. The success of the Board of Trade means much for the future of Garrett county, in its best development and greater prosperity.

THE most impressive sign that President Wilson's General Prosperity is here (?) is this statement in the Baltimoro Sun of last Monday. The Alaskan Engineering Commission has announced that during the next few months there will be places in the commission's service in Alaska for about 400 men. Chairman William C. Edes says, however, that the commission has thus far been swamped with upward of 40,000 aplications.

That is to say that upward of 100 men applied for each position. That means that 99 men will be disappointed. Not much prosperity shown in that item.

There is nothing which exasperates Democrates so much in any campaign, national, state, state or municipal as a reference to "the full dinner pail," remarks the St. Louis Globe Democrat. Yet the apothegm is one of the most respectable and illustrious of any in the parlance of our party politics. It was first used by Mr. McKinley in his Ohio campaign in 1895, to express what the policy of the Republican party would be if restored to power. "The full dinner pail," said Mr. McKinley, "is the sign and symbol of a people's prosperity." The expression at once gained vogue because the dinner pail was not then full, but in disuse. The Democrats of that day were tolerant of the phrase, but after 1896 has brought the Republicans and protection back, and a few months more saw the empty dinner pails filling up as if by some miracle like that of the loaves and fishes, their resentment began to grow. They snarled at every mention of the "sign and symbol." We have, on several occassions, had great fun by arousing our esteemed Democratic contemporaries to splutterings of rage by passing reference to the "full dinner pail," against which Democratic leaders have such a prejudice that it is always thrown out whenever they come in.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. WILLIAM DURST.

Mrs. William Durst, near Jennings, died Monday, April 5th, from a complication of diseases due to the infirmities of age. She was about 76 years old A number of children are bereaved. Interment in the Dunkard cemetery, near Grantsville.

ELIAS BAURMASTER.

Elias Baurmaster, aged 80 years, died at the home of his daughter—Mrs. Peter Yost, a few miles southwest of Grantsville, Friday, April, 8th. Death was due to dropsy and other ailments. One son—Edward, two daughters—Mrs. Yost and Mrs. Ross Lichty, of Nebraska, are bereaved. Interment at Summit Mills Sunday.

WILLIAM PLASKET.

William Plasket of near Guard, quietly passed to his long resting place a few days ago. Mr. Plasket was a man of the highest honor. He was highly respected by all who knew him. ELLEN JANE HOYE.

In memory of the late Ellen Jane Hoye, who died at the home of her sister, Mrs. L D. Thrasher, in Deer Park on April 13, 1915, and was laid to rest in the Deer Park cemetery beside her two sisters and her oldest brother.

Miss Hoye was the daughter of the late John Hoye and Ann E. Hoye, and was for many years one of the most respected and honored residents of Deer Park. She came of an old and highly respected family, her great grand father, Paul Hoye, having come to this country from Belfast, Ireland, about 1760 as agent for the Salisbury Land Company and having settled in Washington county, this State. He had two sons, John and William W., the first named locating in Cumberland and the latter near what is now Hoves, in Garrett county, where the father of the deceased was born. After the marriage of her father and mother they located at Selbysport and later at Petersburg, W. Va., where Ellen Jane Hoye first saw the light of day. The family consisted of ten children, three boys and seven girls, of which seven have entered to the great roll call, leaving one brother and the eldest and youngest sister still living.

Her early girlhood days were spent at the ancestral home on the Northwestern turnpike at what was then known as Hoyesburg, which was said to have been the finest home between Winchester and Clarksburg and which was destroyed in 1852. She remained at the old homestead for some five years after the Civil War with her brother, our fellow townsman, Squire William D. Hoye, until in 1871 when they removed to a farm belonging to the Hoye estate near Oakland, this now being the Weber place. After remaining there until 1882, they again removed and this time located at the present home at Deer Park. After the marriage of her sister, Miss Ellen continued to reside with her brother until the time of her death.

Miss Hoye joined the M. E. church, South, in Oakland under the pastorate of the Rev. George Zimmerman, D. D., about 1874, and was later identified with the Lutheran church of Deer Park. Her sweet Christian character and her many friendly traits attracted to her many friends who now remain to mourn her loss. In the closing hours of her life her trust and faith in the Saviuor of mankind was shown by the way in which she approached death and her last words were uttered in conscious moments were quotations from the Bible and from some of the well known hymns, her last utterance being part of the twenty-third psalm, while her cousin, Mrs. Jennie Lee, of Mt. Lake Park, and her brother knelt at her bedside. Near the end she exclaimed that she loved everyone and clapped her hands in seeming happiness.

The end came very peacefully and on the fifteenth she was laid to rest beside the loved ones who had preceded her to the better land. The funeral service was conducted at the home of her sister by Rev. Frank McCamic, of the Deer Park Methodist churh, assisted by Rev. Dr. Ely, of the Oakland Presbyterian church. Her brother selected as pall bearers warm personal friends of many years standing, the following being the honorary pall bearers; R. T. Browning, G. S. Hamill, F. H. Thrasher, James A. Annan and J. L. Wheeler, and active pall bearers: P. J. Garrett, C. A. Ashby, S. Hinebaugh, W. C. Jones, Dr. E. E. Sollars, and F. H. Clary. After the service at the house, the body was conveyed to the cemetery where after a beautiful closing address by Dr. Ely it was lowered into the grave.

ONE OF HER MANY FRIENDS.

The Busy Mother.

BY SARA ROBERTA GETTY.

From early dawn she works, till late at night:
No rest for aching brow or her tired feet,
Her help brings aid in every childish plight
To every baby woe a refuge sweet.

At night she sits, a babe upon her arm
Its downy head in safety on her breast,
About her knee secure from any harm
She hears the lisping prayers of all the rest.

As she, all weariness and cares forgot
Imprints upon each cheek her good night kiss
Not with a queen would she exchange her lot
No throne could bring such happiness as this.

Dear loyal mother, we who love her, know
That clothed in mystery deep her kingdom lies
(Safe and secure where none but she may go)
Within the azure depths of baby's eyes.

Tired mother, falter not, each noble deed
However small, is watched by One above,
He help will send each wayward step to lead
And power to rule each little heart with love.

A Fox Farm.

L. S. Yoder of Springs, Pa., is the owner of a real fox den. On the eastern side of his barn he has a tight wire cage about 12x30 feet where he has five foxes which are all one year old, three gray ones and two red ones. They were captured last summer and are nearly full grown now.

Mr. Yoder has for their comfort a box under the ground with wood spouts running into the same. As soon as a stranger comes on the ground they, true to fox nature, run to shelter.

They are not wild to the members of the family, and will eat out of their hands, but when any of the humans put their fingers through the wire fence, the foxes will snap at them.

Mr. Yoder has had some experience in the taming of foxes; when he was a boy he had a pet fox which was quite tame. He tells a story which shows the skill of the fox. On one occasion his father cut the heads off two chickens, and to see some fun threw the heads to the fox in the presence of a young shepherd dog. The fox got both heads in his mouth and the dog jumped on the fox, but the latter paid no attention to the dog, but dug a hole in the ground, buried the heads and then licked the pup.

Mr. Yoder is the only man in the county who has started a fox-raising industry. What success he will have will be seen later.—Myersdale Republican.

A Great Meeting.

The Garrett County Board of Trade Tuesday evening enjoyed two talks from agricultural experts, who happened to be in town and who upon invitation remained for the meeting of the Board of Directors.

The first speaker was Jesse M. Jones special agent of the United States Agricultural Department. The second speaker was C. H. Alfred of the Western Maryland Agricultural College. The addresses were full of thought, interest and striking information on farm topics and on a line the Board of Trade is considering.

The addresses made a deep impression upon the 20 or 25 people present, and will bring results of much value to Garrett county. Both of the gentlemen were farmers, grew up on a farm, studied farm life, hence spoke from practical experience. It was a real treat to hear them.

These gentlemen will return to Garrett county court week and hold a meeting under the auspices of the Garrett County Board of Trade. The date will be announced later.

The meeting was held in Squire Rudisill's office, the headquarters of the Board of Trade. It was suggested to cover Garrett county next fall with a score or more meetings over the county. The Board of Trade will take the matter up.

ATTENTION PROPERTY OWNERS.

Attention is particularly called to Section 6 of Chapter 13, of the Revised and Codified Ordinance of the Town of Oakland, page 40, which reads as follows:

"It shall be the duty of all occupiers of property within the corporate limits, whether they be the owners thereof or not, to remove all dirt, ashes and filth of every kind from the streets, alleys, gutters and pavements, both in front and the rear of their respective premises, and to keep the same in a clean and healthy condition; and if any person shall neglect or refuse to remove such dirt or filth within twenty four hours after notice shall have been given the same shall be removed under the direction of the Mayor, and the costs thereof, together with 50 per cent. additional thereon shall be collected from the occupier of the premises."

For the last two years the alleys have been cleaned under the supervision of the Civic Club, but this work will not be undertaken by the Club this year, and it is therefore more than ever incumbent upon the individual to see that, especially the alley in the rear of his or her premises, is in a clean and sanitary condition. The officers have strict orders to enforce the ordinance above set out.

Little Problems of Married Life

By William George Jordan

[Copyright, 1910, by Fleming H. Revell company.]

IV.—Living in Boarding Houses and Hotels.

WHEN some kind bird lover in a mansion facing Central park had a fine three story bird house built and placed in a big elm that extended its green branches over the park wall and across the roadway we were all interested. It was really a triumph in carpentry, and it bore proudly, in large painted letters across its front, the name "Birds' Apartment House," so that house hunting birds could read and understand. And as an extra inducement to secure tenants a generous supply of nest building material was placed on each of the three floors. With a neighborly interest you may say was just idle curiosity, I waited the coming of the first tenants.

It was not long before the grandeur of the edifice caught the eye of a busy chirping robin. He twittered speculatively near the open door as if attracted by the sign, but fearing the rent would be too high. Then he boldly entered the ground floor apartment. In a few moments he came out and flew away till my eyes could no longer follow the black speck in the distance. Soon he returned with another bird, and, idly speculating on my neighbor's affairs, as mortals will, I presumed the new bird was his fiancee, whom he had called for to go house hunting.

The young couple stayed within but a little while, and then, perched on the ledge as if studying the neighborhood, they chattered excitedly as if conferring on the wisdom of their choice. It was really not my affair at all, you know, and I did not mean to be in the least intrusive, but somehow I felt confident they would take the place.

Next morning, bright and early, a twittering, cheery "chee chee" and a rustle of wings made me turn my eyes to the house in the tree, and I was sure that the new family were moving in. Soon, to my surprise, I saw twigs, sticks, blades of grass, tufts of cotton and strands of hair pushed and pulled impatiently through the open doorway by the indignant birds and fall fluttering into the street. Then the two birds scurried off on a shopping expedition in the neighborhood and soon brought back in their tiny bills twigs and other furnishings of their own. Then I understood it all—it was the birds' instinctive protest against beginning their wedded life in furnished rooms; they wanted to build their own home in their own sweet way. There is no pride of personal possession when a wife lives elsewhere.

From lack of real occupation her days are long and wearisome. She has not that absorbing stimulus which in a home of her own would fill her hours with duties transmuted into pleasures. The days of inaction are often consciously filled with time killers, like reading, walking, shopping, matinees, visiting and overelaborate care of her clothes, which instead of being episodes of change in her daily life become almost the whole story.

There is, too, the constant forced association with those she does not like, whose presence irritates, whose jests jar when she is not in the mood for them and whose tales of private griefs poured into her unwilling ears make the lamentations of Jeremiah seem joyful by contrast. There is no sense of privacy; there is the feeling of living constantly on parade, with a constant curb of expression on the emotions.

Though her heart may be worn and weary and her mind worried, she must put on her property smile of sweetness when entering the dining room, for she must run the gantlet of critical eyes, and if her own show signs of tears she knows it might start a trail of gossip and speculative comment difficult to stop. The insincerity, curiosity, idle talk, petty meanness, criticism and monotonous sameness so commonly incident to the life are trying to her. It is difficult to live in it and be not part of it. It is so easy to sink by gravity to the common level!

There is always this danger where a number of people of varying tastes, interests and ideals are forced by pressure into a family community without the genuine love, sympathy, comradeship and unity of purpose of a home family. And if even these qualities be absent in the family there is a tie of blood which has a certain degree of neutralizing power in every discord.

This homeless life in a boarding house is harder for the wife than for the husband, as a long term of punishment is harder than a short one. His business duties, keeping him away from the scene most of the time, make his realization of it perhaps less, yet he may suffer vicariously in noting the subtle changes in his wife, either in her struggle against the environment or in her surrender to it. In the false perspective of their living, sources of misunderstanding multiply, and the loving adjustment of their views and ideals may be disturbed as the needle of a compass is automatically deflected in certain regions.

Meals that in their own home might be enjoyed in frank, genial, trusting companionship and sympathy are now taken under the fire of many eyes that make the sweetness of instinctive confidence impossible. In the artificial atmosphere of their living he may be almost afraid to look across the table for fear of being accused of flirting with the new boarder from Kentucky, who expects to be in town all summer.

If the husband does not talk he is likely to be charged with being disagreeable and sulky. If he does talk he may be accused of trying very hard to be fascinating to some one for whom he really does not care two straws. Caught between the horns of the dilemma, the husband thinks hard, says under his breath something not for publication and wishes—that he had a home. The wife may suffer, too, the same mistranslation of her most innocent actions.

The quiet social evenings with a few friends have always to be considered from the standpoint of some one else's convenience. The lady on the third floor back is sick and cannot bear the noise of a piano, or walking on the floor disturbs the rest of the nervous old gentleman in the rooms underneath, or any of a dozen other considerations may emphasize the limitations of boarding. Where two are forced by circumstances to live for a time in furnished rooms or in boarding houses, it makes a special call on their finest tact, patience and love to neutralize the effect of many conditions that they would never voluntarily choose.

Hotels give more independence, but more isolation; more freedom, but also more loneliness. The unwelcome closeness of contact of boarding houses is exchanged for an equally unwelcome aloofness and coldness. Hotels are excellent institutions for travelers or those desiring temporary quarters, but they pall quickly on lovers of a home. They have such an institutional atmosphere as you walk two blocks after leaving the elevator, through heavy, red carpeted corridors, carrying a large key attached to a brass numbered arrangement the size of a young plate, and the only mark that differentiates your rooms from the others as you approach it, is the number 1422.

It would be hard to imagine a wall motto "God Bless Our Home" hanging in a hotel. It would seem irreverence, with an undertone of sarcasm.

The elaborate array of dishes on the menu may attract for a few days, but you soon grow tired of the simplest articles of food masquerading under French aliases and you long for simple meals and simpler surroundings. You would like to see a boiled potato with the courage to stand up boldly and defiantly, in spite of its humble origin, and not trying to slip into your good graces under the alibi of a foreign title. You long for plainer food and home cooking, for more genuine comfort and less gilt and glitter and decoration, where you can be truly your natural self, where you can even lean your elbows on the table if you feel like it. It is just an honest heart hunger for a home.

Eating in restaurants has driven many a good young man into matrimony. Living in boarding houses and hotels later has driven many a man out of matrimony. The vain display, the vulgarity, the fictitious luxury, the constantly enforced contrast between your circumstances and those of others combine to create a restless, uncertain, irritating living far from conducive to happiness in marriage.

One vital note in the music of life is the sense of possession. In marriage it transforms the lonely pronoun "mine" into the one of larger, sweeter meaning, "ours," and the alchemy of love makes "mine" and "thine" interchangeable elements. It is the impelling spirit that makes homes, where the sense of dual possession in unity transforms a new picture, a new ring, a few new books, a new chair or new curtains into a real event that brings genuine pleasure. It is not the petty value of the things themselves that counts, for all that is best in the home would defy a tax assessor to discover, for it is ever the intrinsic and the intangible.

The advent of these new possessions responds to something deep in the human heart—the joy of united ownership, of building together for a larger future, is what counts in the sacredness of making a home. It is this spirit that makes our simple geranium in the window seem greater and more real than some one else's conservatory across the street. Home is the gathering together, under one roof, of all that is dearest and nearest to us. Like that earlier Eden given to a man and a woman, it can be made a real paradise if love, honor, comradeship and unity be its atmosphere.

GRANTSVILLE.

The farmers around Grantsville are busily at work, plowing, cleaning and clearing up.

The green grass, well kept lawns, and the general cleaning up makes a pretty sight and creates a wholesome feeling.

But few country villages can boast of as complete stores as are found here. They carry a large, varied and well selected line of goods and at live and let live prices.

The five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hetrick of Negro mountain, died on April 1st of diphtheria. The mother and two other children are suffering from the same malady.

At the municipal election the following gentleman were elected councilmen: Albert Swauger, H. H. Baker and C. H. Younkin.

Mrs. H. P. Miller of Stone House Farm, was taken to the Western Maryland hospital where an operation was performed. At last reports, the patient was doing as well as could be expected.

The new bus line has started from Somerfield to Frostburg, making schedule time, both going and coming. Mr. Shirer, the driver, had several passengers from this place, both Tuesday and Thursday.

Mrs. H. C. Bonig and daughter, Mildred, spent Sunday with the former's brother, Chas. Bonig, of Cumberland.

Mrs. G. C. Keller is spending a few days in Winchester, Va.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. John Walburn of Jennings, on March 31st, a pretty baby boy.

Edward Beachy sold a handsome team of horses, a bay and dapple gray, to Milton Kinsinger last week. The horses were in splendid condition, weighing jointly 3000 pounds.

John Zehner, who has been having a bad attack of grippe with an abscess in the head, is recovering.

Next fall this vicinity will have several exhibits at the fair. The completion of the state road brings this place within two hours or less of Oakland. Every Garrett countain should interest himself and herself in the success of the fair.

A birthday party was given to Joe A. Beachy and Mrs. Edward Beachy, both neighbors, living a few miles from Grantsville. There were about two dozen guests present, each bringing something to eat. A very enjoyable day was spent.

D. M. Zeller, it is reported will locate in Kentucky. He sold his barber shop to Thomas McKenzie.

Grantsville is interested in the Garrett County Board of Trade. Slogan—"See Garrett County first."

AVILTON.

Farmers are all busy plowing and scattering lime for their spring crops.

O. S. Fike and family spent Sunday with James McKenzie and family.

Squire Brown and wife took supper with Mr. and Mrs. Orville Stark Sunday evening.

Herman Broadwadwater purchased a fine automobile last week, and expects to do a rushing business hauling passengers this summer.

Harry McKenzie made a business trip to Frostburg Saturday last.

Miss Hilda Keyes, who taught a very successful school here, returned to her home Saturday evening.

Mrs. Susie Garlitz spent Sunday with Mrs. Fannie Weitzell.

Mrs. Ella McKenzie and daughter spent Sunday with Mrs. Sam Orner.

Mrs. Enoch Robeson returned home Sunday evening after spending a week with her parents at Fair View.

Henry Duckworth, our hustling apple tree trimmer and grafter, made his departure from Pea Ridge to Paradise Sunday last where he will be the guest of some of the fair sex of that country.

Kernel Brown is spending a few days in Lonacohing the guest of his sister, Mrs. Rella Emerson.

W. F. Custer spent Sunday evening the guest of Fannie Weitzell.

Hugh Weir and son Willie, of Lonaconing were visiting friends here Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Pattie Broderick spent Sunday with his father near here.

Sam Hummel was visiting the Merrill school one day last week.

DEER PARK

Destructive forest fires raged about Deer Park last Sunday and Monday. All the fencing on the farms of Sylvester Hinebaugh and Benjamin Campbell were destroyed and a greater part of the land burned over, the mine cross ties and props stacked up on Charles R. Savedges farm were consumed. The flames leaped as high as the tree tops. For a time the people were alarmed at the threatening flames. Mr. Hinebaugh's loss will cause him much inconvenience and money. His farm as well as those of the neighbors are out in the commons. The fire, it is supposed, was caused by some careless person droping a match on the dry leaves after lighting a cigar.

The Deer Park Improvement Society has decided to lay a brick pavement through the grove.

Clean up day is here, and property owners are putting everything in a presentable shape.

The people of this village wish the Garrett County Board of Trade much success in advertising Garrett county as THE place for tourists and vacationists. That class of people are money spenders and are thus profitable to any comunity.

The indications are that the Deer Park Hotel will have a very fine season—the best for years. This means a good market for the farmers of this vicinity.

Think This Over.

State Forester F. W. Besthy, sends out these pointed paragraphs:

"Forest fires kill the youg growth; without healthy young growth now, no good forests hereafter.

"Fires damage large trees, causing early decay.

"Fires in a few hours destroy the growth of many years.

"Fires increase taxes by reducing forest values.

"Fires cause springs and streams to dry up.

"Fires kill or drive away game.

"Nine-tenths of the fires are the results of carelessness; will you join those who are careful?

"If you can stop a fire, do so; otherwise, notify the Forest Warden."

GROWERS SHOULD SPRAY FOR CODLING MOTH.

Mixture Should Be Applied Before The Blossoms Fall.

T. B. SYMONS,
Maryland Agricultural College.

In spraying for the codling moth it is necessary to consider several facts. First, the insect causes injury by eating into the fruit, and rarely does the spray come into actual contact with the insect; therefore the so-called contact sprays, such as are used for scale insects or plant lice should not be employed, but stomach poisons, such as Paris green, arsenate of lead or other arsenicals, must be used. Second, the insect enters the fruit usually within 48 hours after hatching, and is thereafter beyond our reach, so the spray must be applied in time. Third, the fact, to which attention has already been called, that the hatching period for the eggs of one brood extends over a considerable space of time; therefore, to get the best results two or more sprayings should be given. Fourth, in Maryland there are two broods of the codling moth, and to prevent injury by the second brood larvae one or more midsummer sprayings may be applied. In spraying for first-brood larvae it must be borne in mind that they enter the fruit at the calyx, therefore the spray must be applied before the lobes of the calyx close enough to exclude the spray. Fifth, sprays followed immediately by heavy rains should be repeated. Sixth, spray only with a pump which will give good pressure, not less than 80 pounds, and more than 100 pounds is much better, so as to force the spray into the calyx. Do not spray until nearly all the petals have fallen from the blossoms on account of danger of injury to the blossoms and risk of killing bees, which are important agents of pollination.

Failure to observe these points cause poor results from spraying, while proper attention given them should insure an apple crop free from worm injury.

In many instances we have secured excellent results with only one thorough spraying applied when the blossoms fall, and for ordinary purposes this spraying will be sufficient to insure from 90 to 95 per cent. good apples.

PROTECT YOUR HOGS AGAINST CHOLERA LOSS.

S. S. BUCKLEY,
Maryland Experiment Station.

With the coming of warmer weather there is increased danger of attacks of hog cholera.

This disease is the greatest menace to profitable hog raising in Maryland. The losses from it have been estimated to be about three hundred thousand dollars in Maryland annually.

This disease is the greatest menace to profitable hog raising in Maryland. The losses from it have been estimated to be about three hundred thousand dollars in Maryland annually.

PROTECTED AGAINST HOG CHOLERA.

Symptoms: The animals appear dull and inclined to lie quietly in the bedding. Several affected animals will lie huddled together. The eyes are at first dull and droopy. Later they become watery and discharges dry up, leaving the lids more or less gummy and glued together. As the disease progresses they become weak and stagger in walking. The back is arched and the abdomen tucked up. The respirations are short and rapid. The appetite is poor, and thirst, due to fever, is increased. Temperatures vary from 103 to 108 F. The animals may cough and vomit frequently. Loss of flesh is well marked. Red or purple spots or areas, to be seen back of the ears and along the belly, are due to skin hemorrhages. There may be constipation or diarrhoea. The discharges may be thin and show the presence of blood. Evacuations are painful. In some individuals and in some herds the symptoms may be well marked and characteristic, while in others they are scarcely noticeable.

Hogs and pens should be kept in the best possible condition. Avoid placing newly purchased hogs in the pens with others for at least thirty days. Do not allow hogs to graze where they will be exposed to other hogs or to graze at all near railroads over which hogs are shipped. Report any cases of sickness among hogs in your neighborhood, giving as complete a description as possible of the symptoms to the Experiment Station, College Park, Maryland.

One of the most interesting papers at the recent annual Farmers' Convention held in Montgomery County was on what a boy did with his sheep. The father said, "My youngster began with sheep when he was eight years old. He has three ewes now, and his income last week was something over $25. There are plenty of other ways of keeping a boy on the farm and giving him lasting interest in farm life." Indeed there are. Are you going to be on your job—start your boys and girls in business for themselves on the home farm—now? You can't do anything better! —From The Maryland Grange Messenger.

Hupmobile

CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Farmer

The average farmer judges the average man by his capacity for hard work—his productiveness.

And the qualities he admires in a man he admires—and finds—in a Hupmobile.

He likes the strong pull of the long-stroke motor.

He has proved that the Hupmobile will stand hard knocks and rough going. It is always ready for service.

He knows that it is as nearly trouble-proof as a motor can be.

He knows that it will ask him next to nothing for its board and keep. Repair expense is almost zero.

He needs no technical knowledge to make such simple adjustments as the Hupmobile may require.

Hupmobile history can be summed up as one good car after another—each season a bigger value.

He figures that mighty few motor cars can show so clean a record.

His own experience is backed up by the experience of farmer friends and neighbors. They are all Hupmobile boosters.

So he keeps on buying one Hupmobile after another—always getting a high second-hand price when he sells—always getting a better Hupmobile when he buys.

The Hupmobile case is safe in his hands. Ask him about Hupmobile; and see the cars at our showrooms.

Constable Craver's blood hounds have the credit for finding the three men who broke into the railroad station at Elk Garden and they have "confessed up."

The farmers of this vicinity are busy with their spring work and those who have gardens are at work. Last fall people of this place and near by took several prizes at the fair. This year we will increase the number of exhibits.

We are pleased to see the effort being made by the Republican to create an interest in sheep raising and potato culture. Proper attention to these two items would boost Garrett county as nothing else can do.

We miners read in the daily papers last week that President Wilson said that General Prosperity is here. We have looked for it until our headaches and have not even seen the imprint of its footstep, but have noticed that mine No. 20 has closed up. Some of the miners who had employment, now travel four miles to mine 14 for work and four miles back home. This is prosperity for shoe makers, but hungry stomach s for miners unemployed.

It is certainly very gratifying to notice the large number of back-yard fences, and out-lying sheds and houses through the community being whitewashed, and cleaned up generally.

LENDING TO GOD
GOOD INTEREST PAID

Opposed to Church Begging, Pastor Lauds Charity.

Church Support Not Charity—Missions Different—Charity a Privilege. Its Godlikeness—Wise and Unwise Charity—Charity's Reward, Present and Future—Generosity Is Godlikeness.

August 30.—Pastor C. T. Russell, widely known through his Photo-Drama of Creation, which is being seen by thousands everywhere—widely known, also, by his sermons in hundreds of newspapers, by his books and by his weekly Bible Studies, preached today from the text, "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He repay him again."—Prov. 19:17.

The Pastor surmised that because he has preached for thirty-eight years without having ever taken up a collection or appealed for money in connection with his work, some may have reached the erroneous conclusion that he is opposed to charities. Nothing could be further from the truth. During his ministry many thousand dollars have passed through his hands—voluntary gifts from grateful souls, for the spread of the Glad Tidings of great joy. Moreover, it is his conviction that no one could be an acceptable Christian unless he possessed the spirit of charity, benevolence.

From the speaker's viewpoint, missionary enterprises might properly be considered charities—but not so Church enterprises. The Church, he claimed, is not a missionary society for the world's benefit, but an arrangement for the benefit of its members. Hence each member of this brotherhood should consider himself in duty bound to co-operate to the extent of his ability in providing for the necessary expenses connected with the meeting-place—light, janitorage, etc.—the blessings and comforts of which he enjoys.

The Pastor considers it wrong for a congregation to aspire to an expensive auditorium and general establishment beyond their means, and then to go outside to solicit money from the world, the flesh and the Devil. He declared that God never authorized such proceedings; for as surely as it would be offensive to any right-minded person to have money solicited in his name, so must it be displeasing to the Almighty to have begging done in His name without His authority.

Apparent Loss a Real Gain.

Should any protest that if solicitations, collections, pew rents, fairs, festivals, etc., were abandoned, all churches would be closed, except those beneficially endowed, the speaker replied that if this were the case, nevertheless the Church would gain respect and influence with the world which would more than compensate. If one-half of the churches were to disorganize, doubtless the other half, rightly supported in accordance with the Divine precepts and the example of Jesus and His Apostles, would accomplish more good than would twice the number under present conditions. As it is, they have considerable of the world's scorn.

To illustrate this conviction, the Pastor cited the fact that the Divine blessing has attended his own work. He admitted that the money passing through his hands is really as nothing compared with the large sum spent annually by the various denominations; and that the International Bible Students Association owns no valuable real estate and boasts of no large bank account. They use actively and economically in God's service whatever money comes voluntarily to them.

God blesses the work; unsolicited donations increase annually; and the activities incidental to the use of these funds now extend to all parts of the earth, preaching the Message of God's Love and opening eyes of understanding long blinded by creeds, philosophies and misunderstandings of God's Word.

Generosity Is Godlikeness.

In declaring generosity to be Godlikeness the Pastor would not be misunderstood to mean that gifts could purchase Divine favor and relationship. There is only one way into God's family—renouncement of sin, turning to righteousness, acceptance of Christ's redemptive work and full consecration to do God's will, even unto death. Only such spirit-begotten ones are Scripturally acknowledged as God's children. All others are called aliens, strangers to God and His promises.

But there are noble-minded souls who have not entered this narrow way and therefore are not children of God, but who naturally possess some of man's original Godlikeness. In practising charity these are blessed in their own hearts and lives. While not under the provisions for the Church, nevertheless these are being benefited by their generous course in contributing to the relief of suffering, for the maintenance of widows, orphans, hospitals, etc. Under Messiah's Kingdom, when the world shall enter upon trial for life or death everlasting, these noble souls will be several steps in advance of others who have failed to develop this quality of benevolence, charity.

Boost Garrett County.

Why do you continue to reside in Garrett county?

Why do you want to see the county prosper?

Why do you want to see bumper crops?

Why do you want to see local industries humming?

Why do you want to see everybody working, and earning money?

Why do you want to see new blood come in, new works go up, new mouths to feed, and plenty of money for the feeding?

Why do you want to see the schools continued, the churches supported, and public improvements inaugurated from year to year?

Why do you want to see a thriving, growing, prosperous, happy community, anyway?

Why do you want to see all of these things?

Isn't it, as a matter of fact, because they contribute to YOUR OWN PROSPERITY?

And if that IS TRUE, just be honest with yourself and ask yourself a few more "whys."

For instance:

Why don't you keep your money at home?

Why do you send away for goods when you know you can buy them just as economically at home?

Why do you send your money away for the enrichment of outsiders when you know it contributes just that much toward the improvement of your own community, of YOURSELF?

Why do you send your money to some city millionaire, where it goes to swell his enormous bank account, or to buy a thousand dollar coat for wife, or a new affinity for himself?

Why do you send your money away and deprive our local churches and other worthy institutions of support, when you know at least a portion of that money goes to swell the rampant vice of a big city?

Why do you seek to throttle the prosperity of your own home by sending your hard earned dollars away to strangers who consider you but "another sucker hooked?"

Why decrease the circulation of money at home, and thereby depreciate the value of YOUR OWN PROSPERITY?

Why write your name in history as a knocker, a killer, a destroyer, as a local blight?

Why kick yourself down hill, anyway?

The blindest man on earth is the fellow who robs himself, who destroys his own community, who seeks to cover our fair countryside with cobwebs of commercial stagnation.

How is YOUR sight, brother?

VOLUME 40. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1915. NUMBER 9

NEXT WEEK WILL BE "CLEAN-UP WEEK"

Merchants Have Entered Into the Spirit and Offer Goods At Cost.

Merchants of Oakland have entered into the spirit of "Clean-Up Week" and some of them have made an offer to sell at cost various articles necessary to bring about a sanitary condition in the homes and about the premises of Oakland's residents.

The "dump pile," which was inaugurated some years ago by the Civic Club, has been very much augmented in size during the past two weeks. Let the good work go on. Householders, give Oakland such a spring cleaning as it never had before.

Some back yards are nearing perfection and some of the alleys are suffering their own burden of refuse as well as that of the adjoining back yards.

The town ordinances make the occupants of the property responsible for the care of the adjacent alley.

Next week will be "Clean-Up Week," beginning on Monday morning and ending Saturday evening. Everybody seems imbued with the spirit and if it should be lasting the change in the appearance of Oakland will be wonderful.

For the occasion Mr. James P. Treacy has consented to sell lime and white wash brushes at cost. Take advantage of the offer and use both liberally about your premises.

Messrs. J. M. Davis & Sons will give a special price during the week on articles used in cleaning and beautifying both inside and outside.

Messrs. D. E. Bolden and Arthur Townshend make the same offer, and remnants of wall paper may be had at greatly reduced prices, thus making it possible for everyone to have clean and wholesome premises.

Bud Hedline, forman in the Kendall Lumber Co's., lumber yard at Shaffer, W. Va., was in town Monday.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS

Weekly Gleanings From The Oakland High School.

Professor H. A. Loraditch gave us a very interesting talk on "Improved Agricultural Pursuits" last Thursday.

Some of the visitors at the Yorkist society programme last Friday were: Mrs. Benj. Sincell, Mrs. O. A. Bremer, Mrs. Louis Bush, Mrs. J. B. Cheuvront, Misses Ellen and Julia Kerins and Supt. Rathbun.

We are glad to note that some of our citizens were so interested in our play at Terra Alta as to accompany us. We appreciate this very much.

The Manual Training department is doing fine work this year. The seniors especially are turning out some fine furniture, such as arm chairs, umbrella racks, magazine holders, library tables, etc. A recent addition to our equipment has enabled us to do more efficient work.

Macbeth a la Mode was played very successfully at Terra Alta last Friday evening. Our audience was fine, considering the size of the hall, and we earned eighteen dollars as our share. After the expenses were paid we had $5.43 which will be placed in the bank with the High School improvement fund.

Miss Daisy Hanna, our commercial teacher, has won some distinction as a member of the "Order of Gregg Artists," an order comprised of writers of the Gregg System of Shorthand. Submitting some test work, among much gathered from all sections of the country, for comparison and competitive examination, Miss Hanna will enjoy having her work on exhibition at the Panama Exposition at San Francisco, among the elaborate display of the Gregg Publishing Company.

We recently contributed to the Oakland grammar school extension fund as follows: First year class, $1.44; second year class, 28 cents; and the fourth year class eighty cents.

Arrangements are being made for a concert to be given by the O. H. S. Glee Club at Accident on Friday, May 7.

INTERSTATE ROAD TO BE IMPROVED

Meyersdale and Salisbury to Have Good Outlet To National Pike.

(Meyersdale Republican.)

Acting on a suggestion made by W. T. Hoblitzell some time before he started for California, Dr. E. H. Miller and other public spirited citizens of Salisbury are taking steps to improve the road running due south from Salisbury to the National Pike near the Stone House.

The Elk Lick township supervisors have promised to put the road in first-class condition as far as the state line. The Garrett county end of it is very rough and the Garrett county commissioners say they lack the necessary funds to place the road in good condition. They have promised, however, to make an appropriation commensurate with any amount that may be raised by private subscription to grade the road and make it a part of the good roads system of Garrett county.

Nearly all of the farmers along the route have offered to donate labor and teams and the Salisbury men are raising a fund in which they ask the Meyersdale automobile owners to co-operate. It is proposed to raise at least $500, which with the labor and teams contributed and what the Garrett county commissioners will approppiate, ought to make the road gilt-edge all the way to the pike.

A mass meeting is soon to be held at the Stone House at which at least one of the Garrett county commissioners will be present and an organization will be formed to prosecute the work. It is proposed to elect three or more road-masters at the meeting to supervise the work. The Elk Lick township supervisors will loan their road machinery to build the new road.

This will he a great improvement and a convenience to the automobile men of both Somerset and Garrett counties. The road runs through beautiful woods the entire distance and is a very scenic and delightful drive in the summer time. It will make a handy connection with the good roads system of Garrett county and the rebuilt National Pike for delightful tours both east and west.

THE GARRETT COUNTY FAIR.

Aviator Luckey with his 100 Horse-power Hydro-Aeroplane Engaged

The Fair Association has been fortunate enough to book an engagement with William S. Luckey, the famous, daring and most successful aviator in the United States.

Luckey's sensation flying, such as racing with automobiles and motor-cycles; war manoeuvers, such as aerial bomb dropping, flying to Deer Park and other nearby towns, delivering advertising matter from his airship; the dip of death, the ocean wave, the spiral glide, will thrill the tens of thousands who will witness his daring feats.

He delighted the crowds at the Cumberland fair last fall. In one of his flights he was in the air 45 minutes. He flew from Cumberland to Lonaconing, over the mountains 3000 feet above sea level. He has covered 60 miles in less than an hour.

Daringly dipping from a high altitude to within a few feet of the earth, then shooting back again to the air—making all sorts of curves and thrills, he astonishes all who witness his daring feats.

It is certainly a great feat that the people of Garrett county are to enjoy during the coming fair. We are reading about the parts the air ships are taking in the foreign war, soon we are to see something of the work done by the aviators of Europe.

Another attractive feature of the fair will be the Garrett county exhibit of the minerals, clays, manufactured articles, and photographic views of the county being gathered by the Garrett County Board of Trade.

At this early date the success of the fair is assured for from all parts of the county come the cheering word, "We will be at the fair," or "We will capture prizes this year." The number of exhibits will far exceed those of 1915. Every department will be full of interest and will show a marked improvement over former years.

At this seeding time prepare for your exhibit. Begin making your plans for prize winning produce. Get interested, and interest others. Let the slogan be, "Meet me at the fair, September 29, 30 and October 1st."

WALTER E. THAYER.

Particulars of Accidental Death of Former Oaklander.

From the columns of the Carlsbad (N. Mex.) Current, of the 23rd inst. the following account of the death of Mr. Walter E. Thayer, former Oaklander, and brother of Mr. Fred A. Thayer, president of the First National bank here, is taken:

The friends of the Thayer family and especially those of W. E. Thayer were pained and shocked Wednesday afternoon when Ralph, son of Mr. Thayer, rode into town and made known to all who knew him that his father had been accidently shot and killed at his home in Dark Canon.

The facts as stated by Ralph are as follows:

Wednesday morning about 6:30 Mr. Thayer started out horseback for his pasture to feed some old, poor cows. Ralph and "Punk" Ward started to hunt saddle horses. A young man named Columbus Bogetti went to work in the field hauling away brush that had been pruned off the orchard. About 8 o'clock Bogetti heard a shot but as there had been considerable shooting at hawks and other varmints around the ranch he paid no attention to it. About 8:30 or nine he went to the house for a drink of water there being no water in the ditch the flood having washed away the flume. After getting a drink he looked down toward the corral and noticed a saddle on the ground and near it what appeared to be Mr. Thayer stretched out. He went down and upon examination found that Mr. Thayer was dead. He at once saddled a horse and went to hunt for Ralph having first covered the body with a blanket. Ralph and Punk came in shortly, or at about 10:00 and found Les Davis who had come in and he started to Queen to notify the people while he started for Carlsbad. He managed to ride to Carlsbad in four hours or less arriving here at 2 p. m., changing horses six times on the road. He changed at the house, then at Hess ranch with Bogetti, then met Mr. Hamilton who had a horse leading behind a wagon, then with Snooks Gordon at the windmill, then he met Ross Middleton who unharnessed a work team and rode one giving Ralph the other and went to John Cantrell's at the Byrne place where they changed and came to town. Ralph stated that his father was riding a horse that was very mean and much of a fool about a gun and that the winchester that had been in a scabbard was lying about four feet from his father's body. The shot from the winchester entered the left nipple and came out under the right shoulder blade, showing that Mr. Thayer must have grabbed for the gun in some way either while the horse was pitching or after it was thrown out of the scabbard and the gun was discharged the bullet striking as stated.

The inquest, which was held by E. R. Lyon the justice of the peace of the Queen precinct, was to the effect that the deceased came to his death by a bullet from a 30-30 winchester accidentally fired by himself while unsaddling his horse or pulling his gun away.

Editorially the Current contained the following concerning Mr. Thayer showing the esteem in which he was held by the people of Carlsbad:

The death of Walter Edward Thayer takes away a man of more than ordinary accomplishment, a man that may be counted among the good and great, one of the most tender hearted and with feelings as acute as the most refined of ladies of high education and good breeding. His whole life was devoted with untiring energy to the comfort of his friends and family to which he was the most willing protector and if such a thing might be said, a slave to their every desire. None, except his close friends, know how many feel as if a brother had gone, a brother upon whom they could depend in every emergency, either for good advice or financial aid. He was a friend of Carlsbad and we have heard him say when it was proposed to cut him into another county that Carlsbad and Carlsbad people were more to him than any other people or any other town and that his every effort would be used to prevent placing him in a county of which Carlsbad was not the county seat.

He was a friend of this paper having never missed a copy for nearly twenty three years, and though a Republican he always said he admired the Current for its newsy matter and frank manners.

The little cemetery near his home contains the remains of many friends and it has been known that at times, when lumber to make coffins was scarce, he has taken boards from the side of his house to construct a coffin. None, not even the most abject and poor stranger who came along the road was ever turned away without plenty to eat and a good bed upon which to lie. As many as from seventy-five to two hundred people have been fed at a meal at funerals and other gatherings while "Walt" as he was familiarly known, worked with a will to make every one feel at home.

He was the first up in the morning and the last to bed for he always seen to everything and the last act of his life was to feed and care for several poor old cows he had found that needed care. Eddy county has no greater man and could well afford to loose a hundred of ordinary men so far as the good of the people is concerned than Walter Edward Thayer.

The Current is in mourning today, not only for "Walt" but for its other good friends, Mrs. Fuller and Robert Ezell.

Mr. Zack Hendrickson has rented his farm adjoining Oakland to a party from Keyser who will take charge of the property tomorrow. Mr. Hendrickson and daughter Miss Bess will reside in Oakland.

Dr. Copeland, of Kitzmiller, and Mr. Upton Cuppett Make Announcements

In today's Republican will be found the political announcements of Dr. Copeland, of Kitzmiller, and Mr. Upton Cuppett, of Mountain Lake Park.

Dr. Copelrnd is a candidate for the nomination for the House of Delegates on the Republican ticket. He is one of the leading citizens of Kitzmiller, having served a term as Mayor of that thrifty town and takes a keen interest in everything appertaining to good local government. Dr. Copeland is highly educated as a general practictioner, commanding the respect and confidence of a large number of people in his community.

Mr. Upton Cuppett, son of Judge Thomas Cuppett, of Mountain Lake Park, is a candidate for the nomination for Sheriff on the Republican ticket. Mr. Cuppett is a farmer and has been a life-long resident of Garrett county. He is well known in many parts of Garrett as an industrious, hard working man and should he be nominated and elected there is no doubt that he will give satisfaction as a public officer.

The Home Town Citizen.

There is a man in this town, known to us all, who is just about our ideal of a good citizen. He is making his money here, he is raising and educating his family here, and he expects to live and die here. When he has any money to spend he first looks carefully over the advertisements in this paper. If he finds what he wants he goes there and gives that merchant the first opportunity. In everything he gives the home merchant the preference. He believes in his home town and because he does believe in it he grasps every possible means of advancing its interests by keeping his money in circulation at home.—Preston Republican.

TRIP FROM OAKLAND TO UTAH

A Glimpse at Mormonism and of Salt Lake City.

SECOND LETTER

Salt Lake City is called Zion by the Mormons. It is the headquarters of that peculiar organization, which has been a dark blot upon this American nation.

Here is located the Endoument House, in which, in other days, were performed the polygamus marriages, so numerous among that people. How many wives a man had, depended upon the man. It is said that in early days President Brigham Young had a wife in every town he visited. It is known that he had more than nineteen wives.

For his children he had his own school house and teacher. We have been asked how could a man support so many wives? That was not the real question. It was, How many wives are needed to best support the man? It was cheaper to marry a wife than hire a hand for the house or farm.

The Great Mormon Tabernacle is in Salt Lake City, with a seating capacity of a thousand or more, a great organ and a choir of over one hundred voices. The meetings are held in this building on Sunday afternoons only, and is attended by Mormons from all over the city.

There are many churches located in different parts of the city. Services are held in these churches morning and evening.

Here also is the temple in which are located the business offices of the organization. It is not used for church services. The above three buildings are located on a large plot of ground, centrally located and they cost millions of dollars.

Here also is located the tithing house and church store. The members of this organization must pay one tenth of their earnings, from whatever source, to the church. The tenth pair of socks knit, the tenth pound of butter made, the tenth bushel of potatoes raised, etc., must be given in kind, or the value in money to the cause.

They have many peculiar doctrines besides polygamy. For instance, "Baptism for the dead." To illustrate a Mormon and his wife were reading English history and were much interested. Mr. Mormon said to Mrs. Mormon, "I believe I will be baptised for the dead king and thus save him for eternity." She replied, "If you do so, I will be baptised for the queen and save her." They baptise by immersion.

The Methodist, Episcopalions, Baptist Presbyterians and Catholic congregations have church buildings in Salt Lake City, and maintain regular church services and Sunday schools. Utah is a state where a Jew is a Gentile, for its population is known as Mormon and Gentile. Where many a saint is a sinner and many a sinner is a saint, for all Mormans are called, in their organizations, saints, and all who are not Mormons, are sinner.s

Salt Lake City is a beautiful city, with extra wide streets, lined with shade trees. There are many handsome residences and splendid business houses. Just up above the city is Fort Douglas, in charge of Uncle Sam's army, ready at all times for business.

The country around Salt Lake City is very productive and some of the finest fruit grown in the United States, is produced here. Irrigation everywhere, which insures good crops.

Salt Lake, the largest body of salt water in the United States is only a short ride from the city, on it are several popular bathing beaches, one of which we visited, on the National Decoration day, and climed to the top of the mountain, and seated on the divide, had one foot amidst the May flowers and the other foot in a snow bank. In August we climed up to the top of one of the peaks of the Wasatch mountains and in a ravine stood on an extensive snow bed and for a time engaged in a snow ball battle with the friend who accompanied me on the trip.

From these tall peaks 7000 to 8000 feet above sea level, one has a magnificent view of the great fertile Utah valley and several large towns and villages, for miles and miles.

One or two large Indian reservations are located in Utah, therefore everywhere you go you meet the "red men of the forest," with the squaws and pappose. While in Utah I made a trip to the Ft. Hall Indian reservation, in charge of a gentleman from Baltimore City and spent several days with him. The tribes in this reservation were Shooshones and Bannocks. The U. S. Government had a public school on the reservation and a teacher or two, who instructed the young Indians boys and girls in the English language. A good idea of the Indian was formed by seeing him in his wigwam, native custom and daily life. They are great riders and runners, full of fun, but naturally lazy, but when mad devils and dangerous.

Frisco, Bingham city and Park City are great mining camps, producing large quantities of silver ore. I visited the first two. Found the miners good natured and cheerful. When I was there they had seven days in the week, but no Sunday. Everything was running wide open.

GRANTSVILLE.

Miss Carrie Gingerich was taken to the Western Maryland hospital at Cumberland for an operation for appendictis.

A. F. Hetrick was a Midland and Frostburg visitor.

At the Methodist church a class of five probationers was confirmed, composed of the following young people: Misses Ida and Esther Engle, Edna Bender and Evelyn Beachy and Allen Bender. An excellent sermon was delivered by the pastor.

Misses Christina Winterberg, Ethel Broadwater and Edna Bender were recent Cumberland visitors.

Mrs. Irene Hayes and son Emerson, visited with her sister, Mrs. J. C. Grady, of Midland, Md.

H. A. Schafer, Emons Younkin, Lawrence Bittinger, and Eugene Baker were Cumberland visitors, making the trip on motor cycles. Mr. Baker's wheel met with an accident, throwing Mr. Schafer, who was with him, and inflicting several minor injuries from which he has recovered.

A very delightful surprise party was given to Irma Swauger, on the occasion of her tenth birthday. Her mother, Mrs. Albert Swauger, provided the refreshments which were most delicious. The little boys and girls present were: Esther Zehner, Majorie Bonig, Viola and Evelyn Swauger, Nina Younkin, Grace Hershberger, Margaret Getty, Mary Miller, Frank and William Getty, Harry and Raymond Bender and Henry Bonig. Irma received some very beautiful presents.

The closing of the public schools in Grantsville and vicinity was a very pleasant and enjoyable occasion. Most of the rural teachers gave a treat, with little prizes for those who stood best in classes. The three teachers in the village school had very attractive booklets prepared for their different schools, containing the roster of pupils, with appropriate quotations on the different pages, and further embellished with portraits of their respective teachers, which added greatly to the beauty and value of the souvenir. Prof. and Mrs. Welch will remain in town during the summer, as will also Miss Miller. Mr. Enlow returned to his home near Friendsville.

Mrs. F. G. Carney, of Garrett, is visiting her son, Dr. J. A. Carney.

We are all home folks in and about Grantsville. We believe in enjoying life and making everybody else enjoy it. Family reunions, birthday gatherings and surprises to invalids occur every once in a while, the latest was the family reunion at the home of Mrs. Sophia Winterburg, in honor of her 77th birthday. The children who were all present, except one son, Martin, and Mrs. Tom Wiley of Bittinger, who was unfortunately detained, included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Winterburg, Henry Winterberg and son, and Mrs. Rush Montgomery, all of Cumberland; Miss Christina and William and son at home. Besides the children and grandchildren there were the following other relatives present. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bill, Mrs. Sophia Bonig and daughter, Miss Minnie, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Bonig, Mr. and Mrs. J. Zehner and children. A most bountiful dinner was prepared by Miss Christina for all the guests, who enjoyed the repast and the felicitious occasion to the utmost. Mrs. Winterberg, who is the oldest lady in town, is remarkably active and does her round of household duties with pleasure each day. She has the distinction of living in the oldest house in town—one over a hundred years old and in geod condition. Many called to congratulate Mrs. Winterburg upon attaining her three score and seventeen years in good health of mind and body, and numerous cards were sent in honor of the event.

NORTH GLADE

We are enjoying fine spring weather with the blessings of peace; while turbulent storms rage in many places, and the desolation of war prevails over a large part of the world. Millions of lives are being sacrificed and billions of dollars in property destroyed.

High cost of living and exorbitant taxes are causing much complaint among our people. War speculation, and iniquitous legislation, is justly censured for most of these hardships.

Judge Harvey and Geo. W. Moon were business visitors at Oakland Tuesday of this week.

Willis Green has been having a great deal of sickness in his family lately, we are sorry to note.

We were sorry to have Prof. Sterling move from our community at the expiration of his school here.

P. F. Mellinger is moving his family back to North Glade. Frank knows he can't better himself.

Lloyd Winters has rented the Abernathy property and is arranging to move thereon.

Citizens of Garrett county enjoyed a little bit of home rule in school matters on the 21 inst.

This is a step in the right direction. H. C. Hersman, Geo. H. Beckman and Stephen Rhodes were elected trustees for our school.

Rev. Marvin, of the Hoosier state, preached in the Lutheran chapel 18 inst.

Rev. McAmic preaches for us in the Methodist church Thursday evening of this week.

A fine new organ will be placed in the M. E. church shortly.

Our Sunday school was recently reorganized with the following officers: Geo. W. Moon, sup't; C. T. Rhodes, ass't; Earl Harvey, sec; Miss Ethel Harvey, treas; Miss Gertrude Hersman, librarian and Miss Nina O'Brien organist. The present active teachers are C. T. Rhodes, H. C. Hersman, Mrs. Wm. Junkins and Mrs. Gilpin. All are cordially invited to attend and help make it a success.

Killed But Not Dead.

The United States Department of Agriculture has announced that the foot-and-mouth live stock scourge has been eradicated, but that more animals inevitably will be stricken because all possible means of conveying the infection have not been destroyed. However, all infected animals known to the department have been killed and buried at the time the report was made, more than 124,000 between October and the end of March. The financial loss to the industry has been enormous. The government has spent in the neighborhood of three million dollars to stamp out the plague and reimburse owners fifty per cent. of the value of the animals slaughtered, the states in most cases paying the other fifty per cent., and it is estimated that the value of the animals killed approximated six million dollars. It is now believed that if new cases are promptly reported, future spread of the disease can be wholly prevented.

National Bank Conditions.

Loans and discounts of the 7,599 national banks reporting to the Comptroller of the Currency on his last call, March 4, amounted to $6,499,964,605, an increase over December 31 of $152,328,094, and an increase over the call a year previous of about $142,000,000. Demand deposits amounted to $5,149,801,825, a decrease over the amount reported on the call a year ago of $492,425,831 and over that of December 31 of about $25,000,000. Over drafts which the Comptroller has notified banks he will not tolerate, amounted to $7,046,534. Total resources of the banks was given at $11,566,846,004.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson V.—Second Quarter, For May 2, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xix, 1-12. Memory Verses, 4, 5—Golden Text, Prov. xxix, 25—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The work of the devil is not a pleasont meditation, but it is necessary that we should know our great adversary so as to successfully resist him. The topic of the lesson today is Saul trying to kill David, and ever since Cain killed Abel the devil has been very busy killing people. He is spoken of in Heb. ii, 14, as having the power of death; but, although he has been permitted to follow his occupation so long, the time will come when he shall be sent to the lake of fire forever and there shall be no more death on this earth (Rev. xx, 10; xxi, 4; I Cor. xv, 26). Meantime it is the believer's privilege to be delivered from fear of death and from all bondage in connection therewith (Matt. x, 28; Heb. ii, 15). All envy and jealousy and strife are also of the devil and should not be tolerated in a believer (Jas. iii, 14-16; Eph. iv, 30, 31).

Although chapter xix or a part of it is our lesson chapter, we must look at xviii for the connection. The first four verses of chapter xviii are thrillingly beautiful in their assurance and manifestation of the love of Jonathan and David, but we shall come to that topic in our next lesson. After David's victory over Goliath Saul set him over the men of war, and he was accepted in the sight of all the people, and the women sang his praises, magnifying him much more than Saul (xviii, 5-7). This made Saul angry and jealous, and twice he tried to kill David with a javelin, but each time David escaped (xviii, 8-11). While God may allow His saints to be sorely tried, persecuted and even slain, no real evil can befall them, for in the resurrection they shall be as manifestly without injury as were Daniel's friends when they came out of the furnace or Daniel himself when he came out of the lion's den.

Because the Lord was manifestly with David and he behaved himself wisely (or prospered, xviii, 5, 14, margin) Saul became afraid of him, removed him from being head of the army and made him captain over a thousand. But all Israel and Judah loved David (xviii, 12-16). The rest of chapter xviii tells how Saul sought to get rid of him by subtlety; but, failing in that scheme, he became David's continual enemy. Chapter xix opens with a command to Jonathan and to all the servants that they should kill David, but Jonathan advised him to hide a little while until he could talk with his father. The result of this interview was that Saul swore to Jonathan that David should not be slain, so Jonathan brought him back, and he was in Saul's presence as in times past (xix, 1-7). So far so good, but a man liable to give way to an evil spirit at any moment cannot be trusted. How sadly suggestive the opening words of verse 8, "And there was war again!" So it has been, and so it shall be until the devil is removed from the earth and the air, and the whole age in which we are now living is described by our Lord as a time of wars and rumors of wars, famines, pestilences and earthquakes (Matt. xxiv, 6, 7), but the time will come when the nations shall learn war no more, for He who alone is able to do it will make wars to cease unto the end of the earth.

In the war with the Philistines David was victorious again and slew them with a great slaughter, and the Lord wrought another great salvation for all Israel (verses 5, 8). But there was war again in Saul's heart and home, for the evil spirit was yielded to, envy and anger had control, and the javelin almost did its deadly work with David (verses 9, 10). Again the Lord was his shield and deliverer, and the weapon did not prosper (Isa. liv, 17). As some one has said, the devil is very persistent, and so David had not much peace. Now he seeks to kill David in his own house, and his wife, Michal, proves to be his human deliverer, helping him to make his escape through a window and putting an image in his bed, for when she said to the messengers that he was sick Saul then sent to bring him on his bed. Saul was so angry when he found how his daughter had deceived him that he spake of killing her (verses 11-17).

What fearful control of Saul the devil did obtain! And it is so still that if the Spirit of God is resisted the adversary comes in with great power. If people will not receive the truth God allows them to receive a lie (II Thess. ii, 10-12). David, seeing himself so persistently persecuted, fled to his friend Samuel at his home in Ramah, and they both went and dwelt in Naioth. Three times Saul sent to take him there, but each time the Spirit of God hindered and even took hold of Saul himself as he went after him (verses 18-24). We have a right to sing from the heart: "If God be for us who can be against us?" "The Lord is my light and my salvation. Whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life. Of whom shall I be afraid?" (Rom. viii, 31; Ps. xxvii, 1.)

There is great comfort also in Isa liv, 17. "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper, and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn." See also Isa. l, 7, 10, and li, 12, 13, with Heb. ii, 14, 15; I John iii, 8.

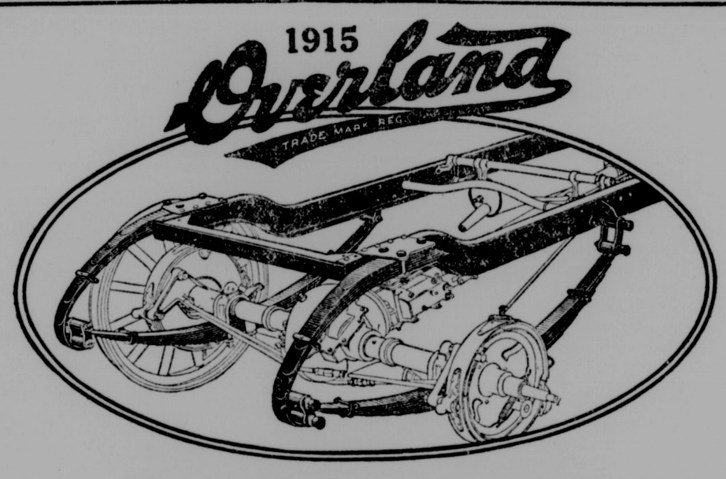
1915 Overland



Real Riding Comfort

NEW underslung rear springs make the Overland one of the easiest and most comfortable riding cars in the world.

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

The Overland swivel seat gives absolutely free movement of the springs, prevents binding and reduces possibility of breakage.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The Refuge of Lies.

SECOND LETTER.

Some of these false refuges are brought to our notice in the 28th chap. of Isa. Some will not hear. They are called scornful men. They treat the word of God as if it was of no consequence. If they can get beyond its sound they think it will be well with them. They would treat it as Jehoiakim did the roll of the Prophet Jeremiah, cut it up and burn it. They treat it with silent contempt. Will such a course delay the punishment, or turn aside the wrath? Jehudi's reckless pen-knife is in a thousand hands today and it is whittling away. They read a passage and say, I don't believe that, so it is cast aside. They read another and say, I can't understand that and away it goes.

They come in contact with a doctrine they do not like and out comes the knife. They cannot understand the divinity of Christ so they will not believe it, they don't understand the atonement, or Christ's substitution, or vicarious sufferings, or how the innocent could suffer for the guilty, just as if Christ did not voluntarily take our place, or the great doctrine of regeneration, and so they continue in sin just because they can't comprehend it. Here is a doctrine that condemns self indulgence and the knife is the convenient resort. But of what avail is that! It is the ant trying to overthrow the mountain. It is the puny arm of flesh trying to blot out the stars of heaven.

Burn it if you will, O Scornful Man, but the word of the Lord will endure for ever. Heed the lesson from the disbelief of the Antideluvians; from the scornful men of Sodom, and from the impotent rage of the Jews. Not a jot or tittle of that law shall fail to be fulfilled.

Lie number two is, we have made a covenant with death and with hell are we in agreement. They live as if death had agreed not to come nigh them, at least not until they are old and want to leave the world. The fall of others makes no impression on them.

They live as if death were a great way off, or as if they were immortal. O, they say, time enough yet. Miserable delusion. This Will-o'-the-wisp is leading multitudes farther and deeper into the morass of impenitence. Yes, we'll have a chance to repent beyond the grave, though God's Bell is constantly ringing over our heads and sounding out the signal, now is the day of salvation.

The devil says tomorrow and they believe him. Fearful delusion because even delayed death can't ward off impending wrath. It makes it doubly certain and severe. Repentance delayed increases the burden of wrath, but decreases the chances of averting it.

Delusion third is Secrecy. Isa. 29:15. They say, who seeth us? and who knows us? Their works are in the dark. Evidently they think that if they can hide their actions from men, they can from God also; or they console themselves that inasmuch as the Lord does not punish them at once that he does not know. It is as if a man shut his eyes upon the light and then supposed it did not shine. They care not for God's house, they hate the Bible and scorn religious conversation. If ministers would not preach hell, and urge the invitations of the gospel, it would be better. The love of God in Christ is to him only the unfolding of Divine wrath. To shut out the light is to sit in darkness; to spurn the warning is to rush to destruction; to refuse the remedy is to court death.

The Lord says, woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord. Woe to the rebellious children, that take counsel but not of me; and that cover with a covering but not of my spirit that they add sin to sin.

A fourth refuge is open avowal of error. They glory in their skepticism. They think they will fare as well as Christians. They believe a lie, defy God and say, "Let Him speed and hasten his work that we may see it," and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come that we may know it. The author of Oracles of Reason was honest when his dying daughter asked him whether she should believe him or her Christian mother. He replied, "Believe your mother." In the honest hour of their lives they show the real estimate which they put upon their refuge of lies, even when they profess to rest upon them.

They make for themselves a bed but it is shorter than that a man can stretch himself in. No man can enjoy comfortable rest in a bed that is too short for him. He comes forth in the morning weary, stiff and aching. That's the kind of rest the hope of the hypocrite brings the soul. Let him try to penetrate the future with his thoughts and his bed is too short. His subterfuges are for the present only. They are without support and exposed. His creed is too short. It does not allow him to think of God, eternity, judgment, death, sin or its consequences. He draws himself up in his short bed and tries to cover his shivering soul in the narrow clothes of his miserable refuge, his self righteousness and gives himself over to fearful dreams. With doors and windows securely barred we give ourselves to rest with a feeling of security or cast aside the cares and anxieties and turmoils of life for quiet rest. But what bolts are strong enough to keep out from the sinner's couch the lashings of conscience, the spectres of remorse and the dread of death and judgment to come. Safe! he is sleeping over a volcano. How sweet the sleep of a healthy Christian! What pleasure can the sinner have in an honest contemplation of his future prospects? Has he any joy in looking into eternity when the Hope of the hypocrite shall perish. "He that believeth not shall not see life." The rest of such a bed is that of the night mare. He wakes, he tosses and tries to cover himself in his narrow covering.

They rest on the short bed of hope and try to cover themselves with the narrow covering of the reasons for this hopes. But they cover themselves with violence "with confusion and shame and the mischief of their lips. They try to excuse one sin by pulling another over it, but they only expose the third." "Woe to them that cover with a covering, but not My spirit, saith the Lord." "Their web shall not become a garment, neither shall they cover themselves with their works."

Gather up all the reasons ever advanced for not becoming a christian and they may be placed under this head. "A bed that is too short and covering that is too narrow. They are the apologies of a wicked heart for a wrong course of life. "Woe to them that make clean the outside of the cup and platter, who garnish the sepulchers, but inwardly are full of rottenness." A ship on ocean was struck by an iceberg. All night the watchman sang out, "all's well" but the stroke had made a large hole in the side of the vessel and she was gradually sinking. So il sings to the soul, "all's well." Be honest, pay your debts, be upright, live a moral life and all will be well. Heed not the voice of the siren, but examine your chart, take your bearings frequently for the storm is gathering and you will find the bed too short to stretch yourself in, and the covering too narrow to shelter you from the wrath of the lamb.

Refuges of lies shall be swept away.

JOHANNES.

BITTINGER.

We have enjoyed a full week of perfect spring weather and farmers have been busy.

Perry H. Broadwater purchased a new horse, buggy and harness last week, and means to enjoy the good roads.

Mr. and Mrs. John Walburn and little son, of Jennings, were Sunday visitors to this place.

Deputy Treasurer B. H. Wiley, and his young friend Donald Maffett, of Oakland, spent Sunday at Mr. Wiley's home here.

Mrs. Fannie Baker left here on Tuesday of last week for her new home in Delaware.

Mrs. David Miller, of near Deer Park, recently visited her daughters at this place.

Mr. Shoupe of Cumberland, a representative of the J. B. Williams, Co., was a pleasant caller here one day last week.

DEER PARK

Miss Elizabeth Walter of Oakland, spent Sunday in town.

We have been enjoying prime beef from Savedge's market, equal to the best Chicago cuts, yet Garrett county grown and fed at Senator Speicher's farm.

The past week the farmers were busy putting in their oats crop. Some of the farmers are getting ready for corn planting.

Last Saturday was an ideal summer day, and Sunday was another.

The Truesdale farm is becoming one of the attractive places on the B. & O. It is rapidly becoming a model farm.

Deer Park will be represented in the Garrett county Board of Trade. This is a move in the right direction. May it succeed as it deserves to succeed.

The Inspired Preacher.

The preacher was a young man and nervous. He was making an eloquent plea for the home life, and was decanting eloquently on the evils of the club, telling his congregation that married men in particular should spend their evenings at home with their wives and children. "Think, my hearers," said he, "of a poor neglected wife, all alone in the great dreary house, rocking the cradle of her sleeping babe with one foot and wiping away the tears with the other."—From an unidentified clipping.

BLOOMNGTON

There is talk of a jitney bus from here to Piedmont.

Rev. A. R. Snedegar, pastor of the M. E. Church, has returned from Baltimore where he has been attending conference. During his stay he also attended the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, and had the honor of being elected Grand Chaplain of that body.

Mr. J. H. Miller has sold his general store to Stump & Kauffman. The new firm took possession Monday.

The board walk from the depot to the Methodist church is in a dangerous condition.

The mines in West Virginia, across the State Line from here, are working two days a week.

The apple trees are in blossom and the oaks are in leaf. Today is a genuine summer day.

Sunday evening Rev. Sneddegar went to Westernport and delivered a sermon before the Odd Fellow's of that city.

Mr. George Warnick is confined to his bed because of external and internal injuries received in the recent accident he passed through. It was a marvelous escape from death. He was driving a two horse team in a spring wagon, on the road to Westernport. The entire outfit went over an embankment 40 or 50 feet. A horse valued at $500 was so badly injured that he had to be killed. The Mineral county authorities ought to be heavily fined for permitting such dangerous roads to exist.

The B. & O. R. R. Company have agreed to improve the switch conditions here.

Mr. C. G. Kight was a business visitor here Saturday.

Miss Margaret Duckworth and Mrs. Erwin Fazenbaker, of Aron's Run, were guests of Mrs. George Warnick last week.

Mr. Joe Moran, of this place, met with a serious accident last week. He was struck by a Western Maryland train at West Virginia Junction and had an arm and leg taken off, and his skull fractured. He was taken to the Western Maryland hospital at Cumberland.

Mrs. Sarah Long of Iowa, nee Miss Kight, formely of Piedmont, enroute to Baltimore is spending a few days with her sister Mrs. Fannie Mullen, of this place. Mrs. Long is accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Bessie Wallace and her children.

Mr. G. C. Pattison has returned from a business trip to Eastern cities.

The D. of A. held a very enthusiastic meeting on Tuesday evening. Mr. Charles Warnick was introduced to the goat and took a ride that he says he will never forget. Mrs. Warnick, his wife, has been a member for some time and very faithful as an officer in the discharge of her duties. She was anxious that her husbaud should not miss anything in the ceremony and he believes that he got all that was coming to him. After the conclusion of the business of the evening refreshments were served.

ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Speicher motored to Oakland Monday.

We are sorry to announce the death of the venerable Peter Bowser, on the 13th of this month. He was nearly 80 years of age, and was well beloved by all who knew him. He was one of the pioneers of Garrett county, having been born near here.

The farmers of this section are only about half-through with their oats sowing. The usual crop will be put in.

Newton Geiss is putting up a garage on the Reis hotel grounds.

Senater Ravenscroft has added an addition to his house.

T. C. Deihl is putting up a big porch in front of his house and store, preparing to enjoy the benefits of out door life. Others ought to follow his example.

The village was full of automobiles Sunday, proving the value of good roads and Garrett county's progressiveness.

Large congregations greeted the preachers, in both churches, Sunday.

There are about 30 men, 8 teams and the steam shovel at work completing the gap in the State road.

Leonard Shartzer is going to move his barn back from the State road, about ten rods. Swatzentruber has the contract.

Any one wanting a nice quiet place to spend the summer, will find it at Accident. Good hotels, the best roads, and splendid people are here.

We had several forest fires in this vicinity, requiring earnest work to prevent damage.

Rev. Zimmerman, of this place, left for York, Pa., Monday.

THREE Million-dollar Presidents come high, but we must have them.

THE service of 70,000 persons are required to take the census of the United States.

THERE are 3,083,674 Jews in the United States, according to the last estimate.

THE United States now owns 8,000 islands supporting a populntion of 10,000,000.

ON account of the European war the sale of cotton by the United States to Foreign countries the past year has fallen off $255,000,000.

WHO says that President Wilson is not performing the duties of his office, when he was on hand to throw out the first ball of the season for the Washington team?

AMERICAN tourists are going to spend $250,000,000 at home this year that formerly went to foreign travel, and yet many railroads and hotels are afraid to advertise.

MANY families will celebrate clean up and paint up week by painting the front porch chairs, but few will observe it by painting the garbage barrel that is so visible in the back yard.

THIS is the hour when every loyal son and daughter of Garrett county should buy at home. Not only buy at home, but pay the little bill he ows the home merchant. He needs the money to meet demands upon him.

THE Court of Appeals at Annapolis, has decided that divorces obtained in another State, by persons who visited there for the purprse of securing a divorce, will not be recognized by the courts of Maryland. This is hard on those who loved and lost and sought Reno divorces.

NEXT winter there will be the greatest scarcity of foodstuffs in Europe that has been known since the great famine nearly a thousand years ago. Such a condition in that important part of the world is bound to make provisions expensive in the United States. Garrett county farmers will do well to sow and plant with this thought in view.

THE Court of Appeals, in an opinion rendered last week, upheld the constitutionality of the health laws passed by the last Legislature, which give the State Board of Health the power to provide any town in the State with drinking water, sewerage, etc., when that Board determines that the sanitary conditions of a town demand such procedure.

FROM the port of Baltimore last week there were shipped something more than four millions of bushels of grain, the largest for any one week this year. Wheat gave 199,268 bushels, corn 1,435,070 bushels, oats 2,041,986 bushels, and rye 346,675 bushels. The peculiarity of this great shipment is that certain countries are beginning to make considerable use of corn as a food, and that product is expected to grow from now on in the export trade.

THE contractors working on the state roads in Garrett county are daily beseiged for work by men from almost every where. Monday two men reached Oakland, after a tramp of fifty miles, to find that there was no work for them and to meet other men seeking a job, and no job for them and yet, President Wilson tells us general prosperity is here. True, here and there, in spots, business has livened up somewhat. The saw mills and the coal mines are anxiously "watching and waiting" for some sign of old General Prosperity's arrival. They have been watching and waiting for months. The miner and his family living a week on one and two day's work. The day of the "full dinner pail" is no more.

Subscribe for The Republican.

ON the eleventh floor of the tallest office building in Washington, the Republican Publicity Association has opened offices. The enterprise is unique. Never before in the history of national politics has an independent organization been formed upon so broad and solid a basis to educate the voters of the country in the principles and performances of one party and the mistakes and alleged incapacity of another party. The object of the new organization is thus concisely stated in the preamble to its constitution, which has not until now been made public: American history proves the wisdom of past policices and principles of the Republican party and demonstrates the soundness and superiority of that party's constructive plans. Believing that return to Republican administration in both the legislative and executive branches of the National Government is the shortest road to restoration of permanent prosperity in both government and industry, we hereby associate ourselves together for the purpose of securing a wider publicity for the achievements, policies and principles of the Republican party, hoping thereby to promote the individual and community welfare of all the American people.

FIFTY families from the Canal Zone, Panama, will locate in Charles county, this State. They have for the past seven or eight years been active wage earners. They have purchased 2500 acres of land which will be cut up into 60 or more small farms. Other families may come with them. The locating of fifty families in any community is a valuable asset. It means advance in many ways; increase in population; increase in the actual force of producers, hence a large increase in productions, and in the wealth of the community. Fifty families added to a community means increase in the business done by the local merchants of that neighborhood.

Garrett county needs just such a colonization of industrious workers, men who have saved from their earnings money enough to purchase a home and place themselves in that home.

This, the largest county of the State of Maryland, needs just that class of economical, industrious and saving people to help us develop this county of great and wonderful possibilities. In the hills, in the valleys and under the valleys lie hidden untold wealth, waiting for development.

A rally to the support of the Board of Trade, from all parts of the county will accomplish much. How much no one can estimate.

A MATTER OF EDUCATION

In discouraging Americans from visiting Europe merely for sightseeing purposes, the State Department is performing a valuable service. The department is right in deeming it inadvisable to issue passports to persons who have no other purpose in going to Europe than to witness its horrors and destruction.

It will be far better for Americans to stay at home and see, many of them for the first time, the wonders of their own country. One of the peculiar characteristics of Americans, at least in the eyes of Europeans, is that comparatively few of them are familiar with the scenic marvels of their own home.

This is the chance for Americans to remedy the defect which caused comment in Europe. Bismark once remarked that patriotism stopped short of the stomach. Doubtless that is true, but it should not apply to a question of education.

It is an educational opportunity that has now been given to Americans. The attitude of the State Department makes it fairly certain that few Americans will go to Europe for pleasure purposes.

A trip through the West by men and women will not only benefit the persons making the trip, but will benefit the nation as a whole, bringing about a better understanding and keeping at home millions of dollars that formerly were spent in Europe.

U. S. PENSION TOTAL FALLS OFF.

During the fiscal year from June 30, 1913, to June 30, 1914, the United States paid out $172,417,546 in pensions, Commissioner Saltzgaber in his annual report made public. This compares with $174,171,660 in 1913, the largest amount ever paid out. The commissioner points out that the maximum expenditure has been reached and a decrease may be expected to continue. The grand total of expenditures for pensions from 1866 to and including 1914 was $4,633,511,926.

The number of pensioners of all classes on the rolls for 1914 was 785,239, against 820,272 in 1913. The number of Civil War pensioners was 728,129, compared with 762,439 in 1913. The largest number ever on the rolls was in 1902, when there were 999,466.

PULLING TOGETHER.

Each individual animal of a team may be a strong one; but unless they pull together, indivieual strength counts for nothing. It counts for worse than nothing, for when pulling apart it is worse than if they are weaker. A weaker team that pulls all together counts for more,

As an animal team so it is in man teams. The people of a city must do team work if they are going to make the city count for something worth while. If there is pulling apart there can be little, if any progress. The pulling of one neutralizes that of another, and if there is equal strength, one pulling in this and another in an opposite direction, there must be a standstill.

So of every other organization of mankind. It is so of the churches. A church composed of a membership that is moved by cross purposes, some members holding others at arm's length, that church is not calculated to successfully do the work which churches are expected to do. There must be harmony of purpose and harmony in action. Every one cannot hope to have his own way at all times in all things; there must be a disposition to credit individuals with pure motives until something has been done proving to the contrary.

GARRETT COUNTY BOARD OF TRADE

An Appeal to the Citizens of Garrett County.

The object of the Garrett County Board of Trade are, to acquire and disseminate valuable information and statistics concerning the county of Garrett, in the State of Maryland; to promote the commerce, agriculture, industry and public interest, in as far as possible in all matters of county development; to provide and furnish a place of meeting and generally to do all things deemed best by the members of the Association. Hence its organization is county wide, not local.

The Garrett County Board of Trade has planned to

1. Prepare a Garrett county exhibit to be placed in one of the large rooms in the Assembly Hall, at Mountain Lake Park, during the months of July and August. The exhibit will consist of samples of clay for fire brick, for building brick, drain tile, fire place tiling, etc., sand for glass, coal mined in Garrett county, cement building blocks, cement brick, drain tile made in Garrets county. Photographic views taken in different parts of the county, map of Garrett county.

This exhibit will be moved to Oakland in September, and during the fair will be found in the main building on the fair grounds. By this exhibit Garrett county will be largely advertised and through it capitalists found to develop the mineral resources of the county and establish factories.

2. Hold a Farmer's meeting in Oakland, for one night, during the early part of the first week of court, next June, to be addressed by Field Agents Jones and Alford, who so favorably impressed those present at the meeting at the Board of Trade headquarters April 20th. These gentlemen are practical farmers.

3. Arrange for a series of Farmers' Institutes, to be held in twenty or more different localities of the county, to be addressed by agricultural experts, on subjects relating to the farm and the farmers' home.

4. Conduct a campaign to make Garrett county the seed potato producing county for the state. A market is open to us for Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain seed potatoes. There is no question but that this county can produce as fine seed potatoes as the state of Maine. The Board of Trade will seek a market for the above varieties of potatoes.

The Board of Trade will give a special prize, in addition to any prize offered by the Garrett County Fair Association for the best exhibit of the above variety of potatoes.

5. The board will advertise Garrett county as a summer and health resort, as the mecca for vacationists and tourists. Its good roads, bracing atmosphere, pure, sparkling water and magnificent, picturesque surroundings should attract thousands of people and fill our hotels and boarding houses with guests.

6. Prepare and issue printed matter descriptive of this the largest and most western county of the State of Maryland, its advantages, and its possibilties well illustrated with local views, and judiciously circulating the same.

The following special committees have been appointed: 1. Agriculture; 2. Mercantile Affairs; 3. Municipal affairs. Local committees, of three members have been appointed in each election district of the county, to co-operate with the Board of Directors.

The Board of Trade has established headquarters in the Ravenscroft Block, room 2, first floor, open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., except Sunday. When in Oakland make the headquarters your resting place, to write a letter or meet a friend, or to leave a package until you are ready to return home. You will be welcome at any time. You are invited to become a member of the Garrett County Board of trade and help us Boost Garrett county.

The dues are, members in Oakland and within a mile limit, $1 per quarter; members throughot the county 50 cents per quarter. Address,

L. A. RUDISILL, Sec'y,

Dr. R. B. Ward arrived in Oakland yesterday morning from Maine where he had been stationed for the past two or three months as pastor of the M. E. church at Auburn. Mr. G. C. Martin and family, who removed from Oakland to Wilsonburg, W. Va., early last fall, returned to Oakland last Wednesday and are domiciled in the former residence of Mr. G. S. Hamill on Liberty street. Mr. Martin has re-entered partnership relations with Mr. W. S. Martin, the jeweler. Mr. Martin received a hearty welcome upon his return to Oakland.

If there is one thing the people of Oakland take pride in it is their town. It does not take the stranger very long to find this out. Civic pride is a good thing to possess. It is a good thing to cultivate in children. Just now the evidence of civic pride is more apparent in Oakland than in previous years. This is noted in the interest citizens are taking in beautifying their homes. In all sections of the town the work of "home cleaning" is going on. Lawns and back yards are undergoing wonderful transformation. "Town beautifying" is becoming epidemic. If the good work continues there will be very few "eye sores" to mar the beauty of this little mountain city.

SECOND STREET, OAKLAND

Sunday School, 9.30 o'Clock A. M.

"Train up your child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it," is as true today as when Solomon spoke these words to the Hebrew mothers centuries ago.

Men's Brotherhood Class, 9.30 o'Clock A. M.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER, Brotherhood President.
REV. BREMER, Teacher.

Morning Worship, 10.45 o'Clock.

On Sunday the Pastor will have been with this congregation one year. He desires at this time to give a review of the year's work to his people, in order that each member may have an intelligent understanding of what has been accomplished in this initial year of the present ministry.

Luther League, 6.30 o'Clock P. M.

Lesson Topic, "The Spirit's Call." Leader, ANNIE GLAZE.

Evening Worship, 7.30 o'Clock.

The Prophet cries, "Will a man rob God?" and the answer comes, "They have robbed Me." There are those of us that owe to God a debt of worship, which should be lived in our daily lives and expressed in an especial way on the Lord's Day. How many feel this responsibility? Christ died for all, so all have the responsibility; all owe the same debt. Some never pretend to pay this debt; no, not even a little interest. Some labor faithfully as long as it is convenient, that is, we will say during the winter months, when life at best is a little monotonous, and public gatherings are a diversion, but they find that the worship of God is so exhausting that when nice weather comes they feel so much in need of rest that they take a vacation from May until October, or if the roads stay good, until November. But there are many, many faithful ones, who in their hearts are true to God, who do not become so wearied with the morning worship that the evening becomes a burden, who when they are called to choose between the worship of the Most High God and the delights of a stroll or an evening spin they decide that as for them and "their house they will serve the Lord." These are they whose treasure is where moth and rust and time do not destroy.

—The above was prepared by the pastor and the advestisement is authorized and paid for by one interested in church work.

Hupmobile
CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Head of the House

The chances are he's a hard headed business man.

One of those business men who is supposed to have no sentiment about him.

Ask him about the Hupmobile.

Remember—he pays the bills. He knows just what Hupmobile service is. For he measures it in dollars and cents.

He will probably begin by telling you that he looks upon the Hupmobile as an investment.

And he will probably say it's one of the best investments he has ever made.

He may—if he pays attention to such small sums—pull out a note book and show you how little he has spent on repairs in ten or twelve or eighteen months, or in two or three years.

And then as like as not he'll forget all about business and investment—and just bubble over with Hupmobile enthusiasm.

We will be glad to leave you to him.

If he's the average Hupmobile owner he's a better salesman than we are.

He will tell you intimate things of his Hupmobile experiences that we cannot possibly know—evidence of Hupmobile quality with a capital "E."

And if you talk to two or three of his type—just average Hupmobile owners—there won't be much left for us to say when you come in to see us.

To pay this amount it was ascertained that the taxable property as shown by the Assessment Books, amounts to $11,607,613 00 which at $1.17 on the $100.00 will make the above amount for county purposes $135,809.07.

Deducting $1,038,292.00 for corporations paying direct to the State Treasurer leaves the basis $10,569,321.00 which at 32½ cents on each $100.00 makes $24,173.79 and this added, makes the taxes for State and County purposes $169,982.86.

There were about seventy-five present and a most enjoyable evening was spent, the diversion being music, recitations and old-time plays. It was a time when formality and restraint were laid aside and everybody joined in having a good time. An abundance of tempting refreshments were served.

Street Commissioner Echard is putting the streets and drives in shape for the season.

OUT OF TOWN HAPPENINGS

A Variety of Interesting Paragraphs for Republican Readers.

Carroll county becomes dry on Saturday.

John Askey, of Finzel, had business in Frostburg last week.

Miss Daisy Reitz, of Bond, spent part of last week at Westernport.

Rev. C. W. Good, of Swanton, went to Elk Garden, W. Va., and preached in the Southern Methodist church Sunday.

John Thomas Bittinger and Bessie Ellen Bittinger, both of Jennings, Md., took out a marriage license in Cumberland.

Miss Virginia Rush, of Accident, visited Terra Alta friends, and from Terra Alta went to Cumberland with Miss Fike.

The farmers all over the county had a busy week putting in their oats crop. Wise is that farmer who sows a large acreage.

Mrs. C. Q. Hook and Miss Bertha Rush, of Friendsville, were the guests of their sister, Mrs. Ross Watson, for the past week at Terra Alta.

We would suggest to the farmers of Garrett county that they prepare for a bumper crop of buckwheat this fall. There will be a demand for it.

Mrs. Mollie King, of near Gorman, has just returned from her visit to the Panama exposition, and, of course, is delighted at everything she saw.

Prof. Freeman F. Guard of Selbysport, was a business visitor in Meyersdale, Pa., last Friday and went from there to Pittsburgh. Prof. Guard is one of the most proficent music teachers of Garrett county.

Mrs. Yeast—Have you seen the nonrefillable whisky bottle?

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—Yes, but what I'd rather see is a nonrefillable husband—Yonkers Statesman.

According to the information in dispatches, there is a pleasant prospect in the Blue Ridge and Cumberland Valley region for everything in the way of fruit from strawberries to apples. The dispatch makes special mention of peaches and cherries.

Henry Casey, of Accident, who was taken to a Baltimore hospital some months ago, by Dr. Ravenscroft, for an operation for a non-union of a broken leg resulting from a kick of a horse is getting along nicely. The surgeon found it necessary to plate the bone. Mr. Casey will soon be able to return home.

Prof. J. C. Beahm who was principal of the Salisbury, Pa., schools for two years after having established an enviable reputation as a teacher in Garrett county, and who declined re-election as principal of the Salisbury schools last fall to accept the principalship of the Boswell schools, and has been unanimously chosen by the Boswell school board to continue at the head of the Boswell schools for a period of three years.

Maryland, a State which yearly uses over 40,000,000 feet of lumber more than it produces, can ill afford the forest fires which for the past weeks have been burning over a large area of the mountain land in this section. Forest fires, besides menacing life and property, means much more than a monetary loss in timber consumed. They not only destroy existing forests but the possibility of future forests, they kill the game animals, and render beautiful regions mere desolations.

Our neighbors of Preston county have employed their county agent for another year. The past year demonstrated the value of an expert farmer, backed by the State Agricultural College, to the farmers of the county. It was a big money making investment to employ him. The Preston county farmers who raised seed potatoes for the market sold their crops at 90 cents a bushel and will not be able to supply the demand. Farmers of Garrett county get busy. Plant Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain potatoes.

A little pamphlet written by W. D. Biggers, of Detroit, deserves a wide circulation for its portrayal of the evils that follow in the train of the fly. The indictment is a lengthy one, but it is a true bill. The fly is put in the same class with the mad dog, the snake in the grass and the wild animal roaming at will, for the fly is insidious. He lurks in every corner. He pants his disease germs on your bread. He buries them in your butter. He drowns them in your baby's milk bottle. There is no escape if he once enters your home. The lesson is obvious—put your screens in early. Don't wait until the enemy is legion, but start the battle while there is some chance of winning. The fly must go.

Get the Real Ru-ber-oid

No other roofing has been imitated as much as RU-BER-OID. You may be told that "all prepared roofings are alike" and that other roofings are "just the same as RU-BER-OID" or "just as good and much cheaper." Remember there is only one

Pronounced "RU" as in RUBY

RU-BER-OID ROOFING
COSTS MORE - WEARS LONGER

—and that RU-BER-OID is always spelled with one "B." The genuine—the kind we sell—has the "Ru-ber-oid Man" (shown above) on every roll. If you don't see the Ru-ber-oid Man, the roofing is not RU-BER-OID.

The U. S. Court of Appeals has enjoined imitators from using the word "Rubberoid or any similar name as the trade name or brand" of their roofing.

RU-BER-OID is imitated because it lasts longer than cheaper roofings. RU-BER-OID roofs are still watertight and look well after more than 20 years of service without repairs. No imitation has this record.

RU-BER-OID is made on a base of the highest grade felt, waterproofed with a compound that cannot crack, run, or rot. It contains no coal tar, asphalt, wood fibre, paper or sand.

VOLUME 40. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1915. NUMBER 10

OAKLAND BECAME DRY LAST FRIDAY NIGHT

A Large Crowd in Town On That Day and Much Booze Sold.

Oakland is dry!

There is not a wet spot in Garrett county so far as the law allows it to be wet, nor will there be for at least four years.

Oakland was the last wet spot in the county to become dry and today it is dusty, as on Friday night of last week the saloon men of the town closed their bars after having disposed of their entire stocks of liquors, selling all they had down to the last bottle.

On Friday, in celebration of the event, or probably for the purpose of laying in a little supply for "home consumption," the town was crowded by hundreds from every section of the county and from near-by points in West Virginia and it is estimated that thousands of dollars went into the tills of liquor dealers. With it all, however, there was no disturbance.

The Letter "E."

Some one has advanced the opinion that the letter "e" is the most unfortunate character in the English alphabet, because it is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger, and in hell all ot the time.

But we call his attention to the fact that "e" is never in war and always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no meat, no life, no Heaven. It is the centre of honesty, makes love perfect and without it there would be no editors, devils or news.

Friday Attorney E. R. Jones, took testimony, at Attorney G. S. Hamil's office in the aase of Dr. Drinkwater vs. Alonzo Beckman. James Arnholt, Charles Bramble and Peter Chisholm appeared as witnesses.

OCEAN TO OCEAN HIGHWAY

Millions Have Been and Are Being Spent Upon It.

Under the caption, "History Marks Old Road," last Sunday's New York Times contained the following regarding the old National road:

"When the Government one hundred years ago began the construction of the Cumberland or Old National Road from tidewater to Mississippi River the vehicle for which it was designed was the prairie schooner, and for half a century an unending procession of these ships of the wilderness passed over its dusty turnpike, carrying pioneer families to the ever receding border land.

"From St. Louis, the terminus of the National Road, the prairie schooners passed over Boone's Lick Road to Old Franklin, Mo., from which point they followed the Santa Fe Trail. The first trading trip on the trail was made by William Bicknell and a party of thirty men in 1822. At Santa Fe the older civilization of the Spaniard was encountered and the history of the Grand Canyon Route from Santa Fe to the coast dates back to 1541.

"It is for the consolidation of these ancient roads into a single ocean to ocean highway that the National Old Trails Road Association has been formed. The movement dates from the Good Roads convention of Octo. 5, 1910, but the first National Old Trails Road convention was held April 17, 1912.

"Much has been acomplished since that date. More than $2,000,000 was expended in improving this highway in 1914 and $2,000,000 more have been appropriated for it in 1915. It is anticipated that fully 25,000 automobiles will pass over it on the way to the Panama-Pacific Exposition this year, and a special transconinental tour to the exposition will be made in June under the auspices of the National Highways Association, the National Old Trails Road Association, and the Automobile Club of Southern California.

"The grandchildren of many of the hardy pioneers that passed over the National Old Trails Road, when it was a roughly broken trail through an uninhabited wilderness, now live in populous cities that have sprung up along the route and drive their six cylinder touring cars or luxurious electrics over a portion of the road every day in the year."

A. RAMSAY MAY BE CANDIDATE FOR COMPTROLLER

Allegany County May Put Forth Two Candidates For Office.

The Baltimore Star in its issue of yesterday evening publishes the following political prophecy:

Allegany county may have two candidates for state comptroller. The friends of Andrew Ramsay, of Mt Savage, are grooming him for the Republican nomination for the office, while Hugh McMullen, of Cumberland, a close personal and political friend of Congresaman David J. Lewis, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic comptrollership nomination. He is expected, with Comptroller Harrington, to have the support of Senator John Walter Smith and the old line Democratic organization in the primaries.

Andrew Ramsay is well known throughout the Sixth District, and he has also come before the people of other parts of the state both as a successful business man and as a member of the State Road's Commission. He was appointed to the commission by Governor Goldsborough, and has participated actively in the work of building Maryland's magnificent system of highways. Mr. Ramsay is engaged in the tile and fancy brick manufacturing business, and has an enormous factory at Mount Savage, a short distance from Cumberland.

Through an appointee of Governor Goldsborough, Mr. Ramsay is reported to be strong for the nomination of O. E. Weller as the Republican gubernatorial candidate. The Allegany countian is understood to have canvassed public sentiment throughout the Sixth district and to have found a strong demand in that section for the nomination of Mr. Weller. During the latter's administration roads through Western Maryland have been developed with the result that travel has been made easy in all parts of the district, even in the mountainous sections.

Though he has not participated to any great extent in politics, Mr. Ramsay became known to many Republicans in 1913 when he gave a monster harmony dinner at the Queen City Hotel, in Cumberland. Many prominent party people from all parts of the state attended the affair, which Mr. Ramsay explained, was for the sole purpose of bringing together the two wings of the party who divided in 1912 in the Roosevelt Taft fight. Other harmony dinners followed the Ramsay entertainment.

Western Maryland will probably lay a winning claim to the Republican comptrollership nomination regardless of whether the gubernatored candidate is picked from the First, Second, Third or Fourth congressional districts. Southern Maryland is eliminated from consideration in connection with the gubernatorial nomination, as no candidate is in sight from that section. With Western Maryland given the comptrollership nomination and the gubernatorial candidate named from the Western Shore the Eastern Shore in turn could well lay claim to the attorney generalship nomination.

While Mr. Ramsay's name has not been placed before the party leaders for consideration, his friends believe that when he is brought out he will stand a good chance.

Mr. Nine was born in Monongalia County, West Virginia, in 1832, and remained a citizen of that State until in 1880 when he removed to this county and state and located on a farm near Deer Park. During the Civil war he served as a soldier in the Union ranks and two years ago greatly enjoyed his re-union with his comrades at Gettysburg. For the past two years he has been a resident of Deer Park where he had a host of friends. The funeral was held at the Methodist church in Deer Park on Wednesday morning with Rev. Frank McCamic as the minister, after which interment was made in the Deer Park cemetery. The grandsons of Mr. Nine acted as pall bearers. Mr. Nine left surviving him his widow and the following children: Mrs. Sarah W. Wilson, Mrs. Mary Alice Steward, Mrs. Zura B. Speicher, Mrs. Stella Ralston, and Messrs. Charles E and William T. AUTO AND BUGGY IN MIX-UP

Occupants of Latter Were Painfully Injured When Horse Ran Away.

On Sunday an accident was occasioned by an automobile bearing a West Virginia license tag, and a buggy driven by Joseph Trickett, of near Oakland, who had with him in the buggy Miss Irene Shartzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Shartzer, the accident taking place on the Oakland-Gortner road at a point near the old Thompson farm.

The auto approached the buggy and was being driven at a high rate of speed which frightened the horse driven by Mr. Trickett, the animal bolting and running upon the bank threw the occupants out. Miss Shartzer escaping with a few minor injuries, but Mr. Trickett was not so fortunate. His leg became caught in one of the wheels of the vehicle and he was dragged some distance and bably injured.

Shortly afterward another auto passed the occupants of which picked the injured persons up and took them to the Shartzer home where medical aid was rendered by Dr. McComas.

The Tricket buggy was damaged pretty badly. The parties driving the auto paid no attention to the injured but hurried on their way and are unknown.

TRIP FROM OAKLAND TO UTAH

The Mormon Church—Doctrines—a Visit to The Tabernacle.

The founders of Mormonism gleaned from the Bible those things that would most qnickly appeal to the ignorant and emotional. They have officials many. There are teachers, deacons, elders, bishops, twelve, seventy and one hundred and twenty disciples the Aronic priesthood, the priesthood of Melchesidec, counselors, president etc.

The tabernacle where Sunday afternoon services are held every Lord's day of the year, has the pulpit section arranged in steps, a step for each class of officials. The deacons have the first step, the elders the second, the bishops the next, and so on, until the last, or general platform is reached, which is occupied by the president and his two counselors and back of them is the great organ and a choir of over half a hundred voices.

The first and second steps have, in front of the seats, tables or counters, which are used for placing the plates and silver pitchers used in the communion service. The other steps have a pulpit or reading stand for the use of the speaker of the hour. The communion service is held every Sunday.

Let us attend one of the services. As a Gentile we are escorted to a seat in the section of the tabernacle set apart for Gentiles, we are separated from the Saints, and in a position where our actions can be easily observed.

The hour for preaching has arrived. the various steps are occupied by the proper officials. After singing and prayer, the speaker of the afternoon arises in his place, if a member of the seventy diciples on their step. No Bible is used, the Book of Mormon is a much superior guide. The sermon may be on, "How to successfully grow potatoes;" or, "on Cattle raising," or on some doctrine of the church, such as, tithing, baptism for the dead or how to vote for the best interest of the church.

As soon as the commences his talk the elders break the strips of bread into small pieces, when this work is completed one of the elders raises his hand, as a signal to the speaker, to be silent, then an elder consecrates the bread, this being done, the speaker continues his remarks, and while he is speaking, from a hydrant under the table the elders fill many pitchers with water, when they are filled and placed on the table, the hand is again uplifted, the speaker is quiet until the water is blessed and then resumes his remarks. The deacons start out by twos and go all over the house passing the bread and water to the saints. The speaker is expected to continue his remarks, at least until the people are served. At the conclusion there is singing, prayer and the doxology. The music is good.

Brigham Young, who for so many years was the head of the church, had the block on which the houses his wives lived in and the family school house, fenced in by a high stone wall, with an entrance gate facing the main street. It is true one wife, Amelia, had a "palace" outside this enclosure. This house was built before she would agree to become one of the many wives of this "muchly married man." After Mr. Young's death, this house was bought by the members of one of the Episcopal churches and was used as the residence of their rector.

Imagine, if you can, a man (?) living inside a large enclosure surrounded by a solid wall six or seven feet high with nineteen or more wives and so many children, that it is said he could not recognize them or call them by name.

Imagine, if you can, the time he would have, when he accompanied Mrs. Young to the milliner's to select her nineteen Easter bonnets, or buy shoes for the children of the family, or the parade there would be if the family should decide to take a walk some pleasant evening.

Brigham Young was a shrewd man; a great leader, without fear or regard for law or man, a determined pushing man. In his earlier days he had been a local preacher in the Methodist church which he left to become the giant of Mormonism.

Many interesting stories are told of him. Here is one, One of the missionaries operating in England met a man of some means, but of a limited, education, of a very emotional and excitable nature. The man became greatly interested in the marvelous stories of Zion, (Salt Lake City) and of the powers of the prophet of God, President Young. This man had lost one of his legs, and hobbled around on crutches.

He was told by the missionary that it he were to go to Utah, to Salt Lake City, the Zion of God, and ask His prophet to give him another leg, his prayer would be granted.

He sold his property, joined the company and sailed for Zion and its glories and blessings. He and others safely reached their heaven of rest. In course of time, he reminded the missionary of his promise, who with some feelings of fear and doubt, went to President Young and told the story of the one-legged man. The President made enquiry about the man, his disposition etc. and then said, "Have no fear, bring the man to my office on such a day and hour and we will attend to it. He returned to his recruit much relieved and arranged for the hour.

The man was delighted, excited and expected a miracle. The day came. With the missionary he went to Mr. Young's office was introduced to him, and was exceedingly happy over the prospects before him. The crutches were to be thrown away and he was to walk to and fro as other men walked.

Mr. Young made him feel at home and after a "spiritual" talk asked him if he had carefully and prayerfully considered the subject. He replied that he had. Have you considered that on the day of resurrection, the leg you left in England will return to its proper place, then you will have three legs to go through eternity. Have you thought of that? What it means. Which would be best, most convenient, to spend the few years remaining of this life with one leg, or to spend eternity with three legs."

It is needless to say, that no miracle was needed. The crutches were welcomed, the brother returned home a happier man and the missionary was relieved.

Refuge of Lies.

THIRD LETTER.

O, the false refuges, or as the prophet calls them the refuges of lies! they are legion.

One of them is partial reformation of life. They will give up gross sins as profanity, sottishness and fraud, but that is like cutting down a tree by clipping the ends of the branches. There is no use amputating a hand when the whole body is diseased. You can't purify the stream as long as the fountain is corrupt. You can't get right actions of life from a wicked heart.

A nicely furnished, beautifully constructed and agreeable and rather popular refuge consists in a high regard for morality. Morality is good but it is false to assume that it is enough to pay in regard to outward forms, social duties, propriety of speech or even zeal against vice or infidelity. We may live comfortably in this refuge, for a while, but in the last storm that will sweep over the soul, the refuge of lies will be swept away. Another makes a public profession of religion and thinks that is enough. Who will ask at the judgment whether or not you were a professor of religion? It will be are you a possessor. Have you on your forehead the mark of the Lamb or the Beast? Listen to these pretenders, as they boast of their special generosity and beneficence. They prate about and flatter themselves that they are buying their way into the kingdom, but what do they think of them in the light of Paul's declaration, "though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor and though I give my body to be burned and have not charity it profiteth me nothing." Resting on that he is hiding in a refuge of lies. His charity is Pharisaical, his devotion hypocritical and his pretenses are in God's sight a sham.

Close to this refuge is another equally false and destructive to those who abide in it. It is commodious and affords shelter for many. The dwellers in this pride themselves on their public sectarian spirit, their adherence to party and creed. They are staunch advocates of their principles and are ready to give their bodies in defense of the doctrines as held by their sect. They admire the martyr spirit. Anathemas are hurled against those who dare to oppose them. Their ardor is glowing and like John they say, come, see my zeal. It is good to be zealously affected provided it be not in a bad cause.

Come turn in here, calls another, for surely this refuge is a sure and good one. We hide behind mercy. All will be well at last. Just as if God were not also just and as if mercy did not know "The appointed bound, and turn to vengeance there." Resting on the self confident persuasion that God is good and will not punish the wicked, resting on his clemency they forget his righteousness, purity and truth.

It is a live as you please theory, yet go to heaven when you die? In other words, live in sin yet escape its consequences, reject Christ the only Saviour and be your own. I see that refuge crumbling to pieces before one stroke of the hammer of the divine word, as it declares, without holiness no man can see the Lord.

What a tottering refuge that is into which the devil would entice souls when he tells them they must feel their sins forgiven. If by feel you mean thinking, you are right, for thought is indispensible. But if you mean acute distress you are denying Christ for he never said feeling was essential.

To accept and obey Christ is vital, and these are acts of conscience and will and not matters of emotion. The father of liars, cursing his dupes and lulling them into the sleep of death, offers this refuge "feeling." Does Paul say, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt feel saved?" No, but thou shalt be saved.

Is it possible for one to feel his sins forgiven? Ask that man whose debt was paid by his friend. "Do you feel your debt is paid? No he replies, I don't feel it, I know it from this receipt, but I feel happy because I know it is paid." Just so, my friend, you must first believe in the love of God as revealed at the cross and then you will feel happy because you know you are saved.

Don't bother yourself about feeling, but stick to the old truth that Christ died for you and that he is your surety right on to eternity, and stick to that truth like a limpet to a rock. "Be my feelings what they will Jesus is my Saviour still." We like to embark in the vessel of our own choice but the fare is expensive. Jonah paid expensive fare though he took first class passage. It was a dead loss for he never got to Tarsbish. He paid away his credit as God's servant and made a strong draft on his conscience.

God sent his officer a mighty gale, which well nigh shivered the vessel to pieces before the culprit was arrested. He didn't pay his fare to the bottom of the sea, but there was no hope for him. He went overboard, though he was miraculously preserved. He ran away from duty, and lost his money, reputation, credit, the approval of conscience and of God, and he would have lost his life but for the mercy of the Lord. He was reaping as he sowed. His experience on that trip was his fare for sinning.

Some of you may be making the same mistake. No path seems so easy as that of sinful inclination. One is absorbed in making money, but he pays for it in daily anxiety and nightly worry and minus the risk of being swallowed up by the shark coveteousness. It grows as the years increase. An old miser at 80 staggered into Wall street, New York, when a friend asked him how he felt. I feel better, stocks are up. Gold may be a good servant, but its a hard master.

If we do not make it a blessing to otherrs it will ruin our souls. The love of money drew Lot to the valley of sorrow, and his fare for the trip was loss family, good name, weaith—yes everything. It converted Gehazi into a knave, but he payed for his meanness in leprosy.

It was one of the two sins that cost Judas his life at the end of a suicide's rope.

BLOOMNGTON

Magistrate Rudisill, of Mt. Lake Park, and Attorney G. Semmes Hamill, of Oakland, paid our town a visit on Saturday last on legal business connected with the pension claim of Mrs. Charles Barnard, the latter having been adjudged mentally incapable of taking care of herself and a commission is about to be appointed to look after her interests.

Tuesday was an extremely warm day, the thermometer registered 97 in the shade in this locality. Seven head of beef cattle purchased in the neighborhood of Bittinger, by Mr. Amic of Luke, while being driven to the latter place were overcome by the heat and exhaustion between Bloomington and the farm of Mr. Joseph Myers at top of the mountain and three of the heaviest steers succumbed and died along the road.

Prof. F. E. Rathbun of Oakland, has been selected toastmaster and orator at the banquet following the Ascension Day services of Antioch Commandry, Knights Templars of Cumberland, in the M. E. church of Piedmont, on the occasion of the visit of the Commandery to the Tri-Towns, on May 13th.

Messrs. Harry Coffman and Jacob Stump, of Bloomington, have purchased all the stock of the general store of Mr. John Miller of this place and took possession of the property on May 1st. The location of the store will not be changed.

The dancing season at Beryl was opened up in the pavillion at that place on last Monday evening. The attendance was not as large as previous first nights. We understand the proceeds will go to the Beryl base ball team in buying new uniforms and equipment.

Satueday was pay day at the Davis Coal & Coke Co's mines at Beryl and the Bloomington Coal Co. and the Pattison mines of Bloomington.

Mr. Clarence Miller, formerly with the John Miller store in this place, has gone into business for himself and opened a delicatessen shop in the front room of his residence near the post office.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Guests at the Mountain Lake Hotel will notice many delightful changes. Paper hangers, painters and plumbers have been busy. Mr. Dunnington and his assistants have been doing things in and about the hotel which will delight their guests and add to the enjoyment of the visitors to this mountain summit.

There is some talk of a store being opened up in the Park. It is to be hoped that it will not end in talk, and that at least one of the four store rooms will be occupied this season as a grocery store.

The Garrett County Board of Trade will do a great thing for Garrett county if they can return the summer visitors to this county. The advantages to be enjoyed by tourists and vacationists throughout the county ought to bring thousands of people here.

The dates for the Park are: Camp meetiug July 2-11; Missionary Alliance, July 13-18; W. H. M. S. and W. F. M. S. meetings July 23-26; Washington City Epworth League convention, July 26-Aug. 1; Bible Conference, Aug. 1-8; Chautauqua 14-24.

The Park is assuming its charming its charming dress; the grass is bright and green; many of the fruit trees are in blossom, and the old oaks are showing signs of putting on their new dress of green leaves.

Strangers are seen on the streets and a few enquiries for houses have been received.

So far but few cottages have been rented to "city folk," we presume, because of the stringent times.

Mrs. List, the wide-awake manager of the Loch Lynn, is busy at work filling up her house with guests, and at the same time making the hotel attractive and pleasant. It is to be painted on the exterior, and the interior will be made cheerful and comfortable.

Ever since its existence Mountain Lake Park and the territory within one mile of the Park has been dry territory. Now the dryness covers the entire county. We are "de-lighted," as Teddy would say.

Mrs. William White, of Loch Lynn, is quite ill with pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Crane, who have been visiting relatives in Loch Lynn have returned to Clarksburg, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Frame and sons motored to Accident Sunday, in Floyd White's car.

Miss Bessie McDonald of Parsons, W. Va., is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Gough.

Mrs. P. T. Garthright was taken to the Sanitarium in Oakland last Thursday.

Mrs. Fannie Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Bloucher, of Washington, D. C., spent Saturday in the Park.

Mr. Parks and family have moved into Mrs. C. W. Baldwin's E street cottage. Mr. Parks works on the state road.

Mr. and Mrs Power Allen of Cumberland are in the Park for a few days fixing up their summer home, and putting their Baltimore Avenue house in splendid condition for renting.

Mrs. Carl Frame and two sons and Mrs. Bishop, of Fairmont, W. Va., have opened their cottage.

Trailing arbutus has made its appearance.

James Laucherv, while at work at the Mountain Lake hotel fell and cut a large gash on his head. Dr. McComas was called and dressed the wound.

Clyde Shipley, who runs the steam roller on the Gortner road, in some way caught his foot in the machine and broke it.

Mrs. Ida M. Martin, of Washington city, is here to get the lunch stand ready for opening.

Capt. and Mrs. Cochran, of Wheeling, W. Va., moved into the "Maulsby" cottage Monday.

There will be special services in the Methodist church next Sunday. In the morning it will be Mother's hour; subject of Dr. McKain's sermon, "Our Christian Motherhood." At 7:30 Men's Hour with a special sermon. It will be a red letter day in the history of Park Methodism and a day of unusual interest and profit. Do not miss it.

The Misses Hamill, who have so successfully conducted the boarding house on E street, this season will occupy the "Elberon." They anticipate a full house, and will double the capacity for their growing patronage.

Mrs. McLean and family of Wheeling, W. Va., arrived at the Park last Monday, in their automobile.

The municipal election at Loch Lynn Monday resulted as follows. Mayor, Edward O'Donald; councilmen, Enoch Kesner, Hervey Bitner; clerk, Lester Yutzy; treasurer, Warren Rathbun; collector, Charles Martin; baliff, Henry Junkin.

A complete bath room outfit is being put in the Bumgardner house by Plumber Landon.

If you want to rent your cottage for the summer, see L. A. Rudisill, Ravenscroft Building, Oakland. He is preparing to use the city papers for advertising Garrett county as a summer resort and is listing property, for that purpose, from any part of this county.

In many instances RU-BER-OID is still weatherproof after more than 20 years of service. You can buy cheaper roofings—but sooner or later you are bound to find out why they are cheaper.

RU-BER-OID is the long run roofing built for permanence and all-weather-exposure.

CREEK COAL WINS PRAISE AT DISPLAY ON THE COAST

Consolidation Coal Company Shows Mine in Full Blast at Pacific Fair.

There are few more novel and instructive exhibits at the Panama Pacific Exposition now in progress in San Francisco than that of the Consolidation Coal Company of Baltimore. The company under the direction of President Jere H. Wheelwright, has fitted up in the mining exhibits a complete study of the production of soft coal, so that any observer may see at a glance how this work is carried on under ground.

The main exhibits represents the interior of one of the company's mines in the Elkhorn field of Kentucky. This has been reproduced exactly as nature made it. The seams of coal as they appear in the actual mine are depicted, miners with their picks and lights are shown digging the coal and the electric tramway which brings the coal from the mine to the surface appears in full operation.

It is, perhaps, the first time a scene of this kind has ever been attempted so far from the base of operations, and the officials of the company are somewhat proud of the achievement. They have had photographs made of this miniature mine, which will be kept among the company's achives in Baltimore.

Another exhibit is two huge blocks of soft coal—one weighing 1,600 pounds and the other 10,000 pounds. The first illustrates the per capita production of soft coal in this country in the Centennial year—1876—while the other shows to what an extent it has grown up to this time, and represents the present per capita production.

Other exhibits show the various kinds of coal the company mines and the uses for which each is best adapted. These are domestic coal, smithing coal, industrial coal and gas coal.

There are several pamphlets at each of the exhibits showing the quality of the several kinds of coal and explaining the sections from which each comes and why it is best for the special use for which it ought to be applied. Of the coal obtained from the mines of the company in Maryland it says:

"George's Creek Big Vein Cumberland coal is the highest quality smokeless coal produced in the United States. Its high calorfic value, 14,614. B. t. u. per pound, is due to its high percentage of combustible of 92.5 per cent. Where the object is to get the largest amount of heating value into the smallest space, as, for instance, on a battleship destined for a long cruise, this coal has no superior. In fact, this coal has been extensively used by the American and British navies. Its cooking quality makes the use of slack feasible under circumstances where noncoking coal would be wasteful, and its smokeless quality makes it desirable where a higher volatile coking coal would become very objectionable. Its smokeless quality makes it a very popular coal for urban use where smoke prevention is necessary."

RINGLING DAY ALMOST HERE

Big Circus Bound This Way on Five Great Trains Loaded With Wonders.

Children are now on their best behavior in anticipation of a real holiday treat on Saturday May 8, when Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will exhibit in Cumberland, Md. It is expected that this city will send more than its usual number of "sawdust fans" to welcome this popular circus.

Ringling Brothers promise many novelties and innovations and a "bigger and better everything" is the slogan. Preceding the regular circus performance the new spectacle of "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba" will be enacted on the largest stage in the world. This mammoth 1,250-character pageant cost $1,000,000 and the costumes, scenery and stage properties are said to be a revelation in gorgeousness. Among the 385 arenic acts, are scores of equestrians including the Lloyds, famous English riders; the Borsinis, rolling globe artists; the Josephson Gilma troupe; the five highest perch acts ever presented; Big Bingo, the biggest living elephant; five herds of trick elephants; 50 clowns, 20 families of aerialists and a magnificent horse show and speed tournament. The menagerie is larger and more complete than ever and features many animals never before exhibited in America. A free street parade will be given on the morning of show day. Adv.

GRANTSVILLE.

Mrs. John Marbury and children, accompanied by Mr. Harry Dawson drove to Grantsville, Md., in Mr. Maybury's car from Piedmont one day last week.

Grantsville enjoyed a treat Sunday evening when President W. A. Granville, of the Gettysburg, Pa., College, preached a splendid sermon in the Lutheran church.

John McDonald of New York City is staying at the Hotel Victoria.

Mr. and Mrs. George Yommer and daughter of Centerville, Pa., were guests of their brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Yommer of Casselman. Another brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Yommer of Springs, spent Sunday with them, also.

We are glad to report that Mrs. H. P. Miller, of Stone House, a patient in the Western Maryland Hospital, is improving and expects to be home in few days.

Mrs. F. G. Carney of Garrett, Pa., left for that place after having previously spent a week here as the guest of her son Dr. J. A. Carney, who with his wife, is rejoicing over the arrival of a daughter on April 22nd.

The following is an indication of what good roads will do for Garrett county and also that the Garrett County Board of Trade has struck the right idea in advocating Garrett county, as the mecca for vacationists and tourists:

The National Hotel entertained forty supper guests recently, there being crowds from Oakland, Frostburg, Meyersdale and other points. Both the Victoria and Casselman were well filled all day, an automobile party from Cumberland being among the guests at the latter.

The men in the employ of Fogle & Co., are engaged in hauling away dirt in order to level the hill on the pike above the Lutheran church, to bring it uniform with the rest of the street before beginning paving. All teams and automobiles are using the alley while the work is under construction.

The Grand Army Post of Meyersdale is to hold memorial exercises in Grantsville on the first Sunday after memorial day, which will be the 6th of June. W. H. Swauger, who is the only member of the post at this place, has been making necessary arrangements for the event, assisted by other war veterans of this place, all of whom will help to provide entertainment for the visiting veterans.

Dr. Bavard T. Keller, a successful pharmacist at Winchester, Va., has sold his store to a druggist from Staunton, Va., and has returned to his home in Grantsville for several months to recuperate in health before entering business again. Mr. Keller did an excellent business in Winchester, but owing to frequent and severe attacks of rheumatism he felt obliged to quit his work entirely for awhile, at least. Mrs. Keller who had been spending a few days with her son, and Charles who assisted his brother since Christmas, both returned home last week.

Miss Almira Boucher, a State Normal student, who has been suffering from excessive nervousness which compelled her to abandon her studies at Easter, is now slowly improving.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS

Weekly Gleanings From The Oakland High School.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Rathbun and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bender visited Accident last Wednesday in Mr. Rathbun's car.

The Glee Club will give a concert recital at Accident on Saturday evening, May 8. A very entertaining programme full of variety is being prepared and a large audience is expected. The proceeds will be used for the public schools of Accident.

Last Friday evening there was a baseball game played between the O. H. S. and Grammar school teams. The score was 9-9. Another game has been scheduled for the near future.

The Junior chemistry class made an interesting experiment recently. Some confectionery was purchased from one of our local dealers and tested. It was found to be of a very good quality, which speaks well for the proprietor of the store.

The Seniors of the commercial department are learning to use the adding machine this week, using the one in the office of the Board of County School Commissioners.

Misses Julia Rowan, Ada Murphy and Lucille Friend are confined to their home with mumps.

BITTINGER.

A slight frost was noticeable here on Sunday morning, May 2nd, but no damage has been reported.

Rev. J. L. Marvin, of Auburn, Ind., who was recently called as pastor of the Lutheran churches of this charge, arrived here with his family on last Friday and is now comfortably lodged in the parsonage.

G. W. Engle, of Baltimore, spent last Sunday and Monday with his parents at this place.

Daniel Sweitzer, of Mt. Lake Park, spent Sunday and the first days of this week in this village.

Miss Melva Bartley and Mr. Fay Yommer, of Jennings, were Sunday visitors in this neighborhood.

Attorney E. R. Jones, one of the young lawyers of Oakland, was a pleasant caller in this village one day last week.

News reached this village, a few days ago, telling of the death of Mr. Adam Lohr, at his home in Ohio. Mr. Lohr was a native of this place, having gone west when a young man, where he has since resided and become a successful business man.

A. J. Oester is superintending some forestry work along the National Pike this week.

DEER PARK

The coming season at the Deer Park Hotel is expected to be a great one. General manager of hotels, Mr. J. A. Murphy with Master Carpenter Frank A. Taylor and Master Painter E. D. Colgate, have made an inspection of the hotel and cottages and in a few days workmen will be here redecrating the entire interior of the hotel and cottages, bringing them to a degree of elegance and splendor surpassing all past efforts in the way of decorations. All the cottages are leased for the season as early as this date.

Earl Savedge has received a registered I. O. C. pig, from Iowa.

Mrs. Specht sold her team of black horses to Arthur Hinebaugh, of Oakland.

Lorenzo D. Thrasher is adding a new addition and generally overhauling the old W. D. Hoye house.

J. F. Grimes and some friends of Pittsburg were here the first of the week, looking over his farm.

There is not a vacant house in this village.

Ashby & Savedge received three cars of lime from Frederick county. Why not burn lime in Garrett county? The freight bill on lime shipped into this county amounts to a large sum of money.

SWANTON

James Wilt had a valuable horse killed by lightning during the severe electric storm. The flash came and struck the horse, killing him instantly. Mr. Wilt was unharnessing the horse in the stable, when the lightning struck it. Mr. Wilt was severly shocked when the horse fell. Mr. Wilt also fell across the horse: Strange to say there was no damage done to the building, and the owner was not seriously hurt.

Truman Mosser was called to Oakland Friday.

Messrs. Ashby and Stottlemeyer, candidates for for nomination for sheriff, paid our people a visit soliciting votes.

Wade H. Lohr and T. L. Sweitzer went up to the county seat Monday, to look after some business interests.

Constitutional Amendment To Be Voted Upon This Fall, Analyzed.

To the Editor of The Republican.

A further consideration of the Referendum amendment to be submitted to the voters of Maryland this coming Fall, justifies a brief review of some of the deeper principles connected with it. Our form of government and the theory on which it is founded, differ materially from those of practically all prior governments. We do not accept the idea that human government is handed down from superior human beings to inferior ones. We repudiate the idea that there can be a king or an aristocracy wise enough or honest enough to control the lives and fortunes of every day human beings. It is not necessary for us to believe that every man is equal in intelligence, moral qualities or usefulness to the community with every other man. We can believe that they are all endowed with an equal right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Our theory is that being so endowed they all have an equal right whether rich or poor, learned or unlearned, to determine what is good for themselves. We do not surrender this right absolutely even to any legislature, because back of the legislature is the Constitution, which has been created by the vote or possible vote of every citizen in the State. In its formation, we have had the broadest, the most important kind of direct legislation. Usually a constitutional convention, or as to amendments, a legislature initiates the propositions which are put before the people. This is in its way a true initiative, but after being initiated these most important propositions are referred to the people for their action.

The Referendum upon which we are to vote, extends the principle so that when a proposition passes the Legislature, obnoxious to ten thousand voters in this State, that ten thousand may demand that the proposition be submitted to everybody. We, therefore, essentially have no new idea in the Referendum, but an extension of an old idea, and we insist that the people whom we consider competent to vote upon the important questions of a Constitution and constitutional amendments, must be regarded as equally competent and equally interested, in reviewing objectionable acts of a Legislature.

Back of our whole system of government rests a sound principle. A king or an aristocracy can impose upon the people measures which are in their interest and the people have no voice or veto. A legislature may be persuaded by interested parties to pass laws which are not beneficial to the great mass of the people, but peculiarly beneficial to a few. The majority of the people have no interest superior to that of the whole. Lawyers, Doctors or Blacksmiths, or any other special class of the community may by organization or threats, or secret appeals to personal interest, obtain special legislation in their respective interests, but no class is sufficiently strong in our State to impose its selfish interests upon the whole community, when the whole community has a right to vote upon the proposition. It is always easier to cajole or intimidate or befool one hundred and thirty lawmakers than it is to control a majority of 250,000 voters of the State of Maryland.

The Referendum once adopted in Maryland will have a great educational force. Every measure important enough to come before the people will be the subject of discussion. This has been the case particularly in such great Referendum states as Oregon, California and Oklahoma. The people through this debate will learn to know better their own interests.

We have had much over a hundred years of schools, colleges and newspapers. The citizen of today knows more about his rights and duties than did the citizen of one hundred years ago, and yet politically our form of government has remained the same. It is time that through the Refererdum and later through the Initiative, the average citizen should take a more active part in politics, as he is prepared to take a more intelligent part than was taken by the citizens of a century past. You cannot in other words, keep on training men and at the same time deny them a chance to put their training in practice, and this is the fundamental reason perhaps for the great general demand for the Referendum and the Initiative throughout the United States.

Mere voting for officers to fill positions no longer satisfies the people politically. They are beginning to realize that their thoughts and intelligence must directly deal with the great problems of government.

When the intelligent thought of the whole people of the State is directed critically to the measures which are passed by the Legislature, we shall expect government to be more economical, when the whole people have it in their power, as they will through the Referendum, to enforce economy.

I should not be so rash as to say that the people will wisely decide every proposition which may be referred to them, at least the first time. They will gain wisdom by exercising their powers of thought and whether they act wisely or not, they will at least strive as a rule to act in the interest of the immense majority instead of the privileged few.

I shall endeavor on another occasion to refer to the opinion of those best qualified to judge with regard to the practical workings of the Referendum.

THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1915.

PROGRESS was never made without expense.

"OH promise me," is the song of the candidates.

IT is amusing to hear the Democrats talk so knowingly and sympathetically on revenue deficiencies.

A WAR tax and no war, income tax and no incomes, plenty of money and no business. How do you like these democratic times anyway.

ALL postoffices now have application blanks for use of farmers who wish to employ help through the government farm labor employment service.

THE people of the world must be becoming cleaner, for the exports of soap from the United States increased from $2,476,711 in 1904 to $4,664,459 in 1914.

THE Democratic national convention pledged its Presidential candidate to the principle of one term. This is one pledge the Repnblicans will aid them in fulfilling.

THE farms of the United States produced nearly ten billion dollars in 1914. Think of it. Try to comprehend it. These are tremendous figures and show the great value of the farming interests of this country of ours.

IT is to be noticed that there are many more applicants for the Republican Presidential nomination than for the Democratic. This doubtless is due to the fact that the sweetest sugar draws the greater number of flies.

PRESIDENT Wilson should find considerable satisfaction in the organization of the Republican Publicity Association. Since he is a pronounced advocate of "pitiless" publicity, he should welcome publicity from a source that is likely to be of the kind he favors.

YOUR power to vote was given you, not as a means of getting on the winning side, not to voice your personal admiration for some political leader, not to express your prejudices, not to seek selfish ends, but to express your honest convictions regarding the common welfare.

THIS is about the time when the garden fever becomes epidemic and few escape. However, it is a beneficial contagion while it lasts and would add greatly to the general health and happiness if it only lasted longer. Hours in the open with the flowers and plants and the stimulating labor necessary for their growth are so many investments in the bank of longevity where they honor checks on healthfulness funds.

EVERY city, every town in every age has had its "knockers." They originated in the days of the Apostles and they've been on the job ever since. It is noticeable, nevertheless, that the world has progressed in spite of them. The only way to treat a knocker is to ignore him. His only stock in trade is talk which is about as effective as a charge of powder without the shot. The knocker will either explode and burn himself or go to sleep from hearing his own voice. In either event he renders himself harmless to the public.

THE Democratic administration may be sincere in its assertion that the army of unemployed is no larger than usual, but it will at least be forced to admit that some hundreds have had their wages cut. If adoption of such policies be necessary in government affairs as a result of business depression, the administration can scarcely be heard to deny that a similar course must be followed by private enterprise. The indisputable fact is that in practically all industry, wages have been cut or the number of employes reduced.

THE "Buy It Now" policy is a good one, whether the purchase is a pot of paint, a suit of clothes, or a lot to build a house upon. While there has been for a very long time a lack of confidence due to many causes, on the part of big business, there is no reason why if one has the cash and needs any article, that he should take advantage of present prices, which, except possibly in food lines, are apt to increase later on. He is a public benefactor, who, in order to help trade, buys at this juncture. Many purchases made now will do much to restore the confidence of business men generally.

IN DEMOCRATIC MARYLAND.

A pretty serious situation exists in Maryland if the conditions as reported by the chairman of the Industrial Accident Commission obtains throughout the various governmental bureaus. The chairman is alleged to have said, "We can stand off most of the bills, but when are we going to pay our telephone bill?"

Salaries have been held up.

This state has a taxable basis of a billion dollars.

Baltimore is spending a million dollars a month for booze.

The liquor traffic of Baltimore took in $25,000,0000 during the year 1913.

It seems to us that Maryland is in a worse condition than West Virginia, for she has the liquor revenue and still faces a deficit twice as large as that of West Virginia.

IN BLOSSOM TIME.

In field and forest, on the hilltop and down in the valley, Nature is unfolding the glorious miracle of springtime. "Fair as the garden of the Lord," as far as the eye can see, spreads the splendor of the annual resurrection. Where yesterday there was but a faint tinge of green on trees that long had been gaunt and bare, there is today a profusion of white and pink, and exhilarating is the fragrance that is wafted to the nostrils. For in a night the trees burst into blossom and wrought the beautifying transformation of the landscape.

Over the meadows, long dismal with their tufts of dead grass and their barren stretches of earth, there has spread a mantle of living green, in which the morning dewdrops, touched by the rays of the risen sun, sparkle like diamonds. And on all sides the eye is feasted and the heart quickened by the sight of clusters of forget-me-nots, buttercups and other early visitants from the floral kingdom, each adding variety to the colors which Nature provides so lavishly. And from the trees and from the fields come trills and calls and piping notes, for the birds have returned to their former abiding places.

THE DIGNITY OF FARMING.

BY THE COUNTRY PARSON.

I amused myself the other day by carefully reading thru a representative city newspaper and clipping every news item or article which had direct bearing on the farm. No better evidence could be adduced to prove that increasing attention is being given to agriculture by all classes of the American people. The day when the farmer was considered a joke and called a "hayseed" by smart city people has passed. Perhaps the high cost of living had something to do with this change of attitude, but be the reason what it may, the fact remains that the farmer is being treated with much more respect than he was wont to receive.

Aside from the crop and market reports, which, like the dairy and other advertisements interest the city dweller as much as they do the farmer, I found in my issue of the Baltimore "Sun" of a November date, a dozen farm stories. Several of them are worth quoting, in condensed form:

Governor Supports Show.—Governor Goldsborough will issue a general proclamation to the citizens of Maryland in support of Maryland Week. The committee has decided to take flash light pictures each night during Maryland Week of the crowds in attendance, and these pictures will be distributed in store windows at prominent corners.

Corn and Potato Congress.—With exhibits from almost every section of Baltimore county, the annual Corn and Potato Congress at the Agricultural High School at Sparks will be opened this afternoon. Speeches are expected by representatives from the United States Department of Agricultural and the Maryland Agricultural College. The Girls' Flower Club will have an elaborate exhipit of canned goods.

There was a three-quarter column story under the headlines. "Stock Yards Closed. With 7,500 cattle on way, railroad faces big problem. May last only a few days. Two Howard County herds affected, but no new cases of cattle disease found in Baltimore County." The sub-heads of the article ran like this: "Symptoms in Caroline County." "No new cases at Highlandtown." "Pasteurized Milk Recommended." "Doctor Flexner after the germ." "West Virginia puts up bars."

There was a half column story on a movement for the bringing to America of a large number of Belgians for settlement on the vacant farmlands. There was a three-quarter column reprint from Harper's Weekly of a write-up of Mr. Lee Worsham, of Atlanta, Ga., who is called "King Cotton's Right-Hand-Man," in which his successful fight against the boll weevil and the wilt or black rot is described.

There were several stories bearing more or less directly on farming not the least interesting of which was this reprint from the New York "Sun":

"A Six-hour Day.—A prime stroke of genius at the American Federation of Labor convention in Philadelphia was made by the United States Brotherhood of Carpenters, which demanded a six hour day in all trades "upon the ground that the eight hour-day is enervating and excessive." Plenty of folks find any labor enervating and excessive. Even those of us who have to work more than six, more than the sacred eight hours a day, can't but admire the program of the united carpenters. It points to still more radical reductions of the diurnal task to nobler ameliorations of the common lot. Work must be abolished!"

I wonder if these people who insist upon cutting down the hours of labor in all trades gave any thought to the trade of farming without which no other trade could exist. I fear not.

But this is by the way. The point I am trying to make in this: The American farmer is at last beginning to come into his own. The city newspapers are beginning to pay some real attention to him. Since they reflect as well as mould public sentiment, we may look forward to what happened to me in Germany. A man handed me his card giving his name and profession, "J. Miller, Gutsbesitzer." A "Gutsbesitzer" is a farmer who owns his farm. This man was so convinced of the dignity of his profession that he printed "Gutsbesitzer" as a title of honor on his cards, just as engineers, architects and electricians do. All honor to his self-esteem.

Some day I expect to meet a man in this country who will hand me a card with the word "Farmer" printed after his name. There is no reason why he should not do so. Farming is as exacting and honorable a profession as engineering or architecture. Our city newspapers are more and more recognizing this. Is it not high time for the farmer to insist upon receiving the recognition which they seem willing to accord him and his calling?

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Matters Political.

To the Editor of The Republican:

This is the time of the year that always gets on my nerves. When the political bee begins to buzz, I cannot keep still, and as this is one of the most important elections that we have had for years, I think we should begin to get busy. We cannot exercise too much care in selecting our different candidates this fall. We have the best local option law we ever had and we made a hard fight and won out with a handsome majority, and it should be the aim of every temperance man to see that officials are elected that will enforce it to the letter.

It would be a very easy matter to get the law repealed, if we send wet men to the legislature, So do not take any risk in making your selection for the House of Delegates. See that every man has a clean record on the local option law especially. Put the x rays on him and if you discover any moisture there cut him out from your list. There is no excuse for sending any but good clean men, for our county is full of such, and a little care will give us a set of delegates that will make a record that we can point to with pride.

Now it is not my intention to knock or either is it to boost anyone in this article. I mean to confirm my former position of being plain.

A law is only as good as it is enforced. And we have to elect one official this year that has the responsibility upon him to carry out the law, and that is the State's Attorney. And it looks like we shall have to try a new man, as the present incumbent has repeatedly said that he will not be a candidate this year. So in making our choice of a candidate we should take into consideration the past record of the man, see to it that he was a willing worker in getting the large majority for the temperance cause. See that he has the ability to conduct the office and a man that will go after the offenders without fear or favor. With this office in the hands of our friends we can feel practically safe, but there is still another official that is necessary to be the right kind of a man before the chain is solid, and that is the sheriff. We want a man that will be able to see the violators of the law.

If a man turns his back instead of attending to his duties, the law as it stands will not amount to much. Keep his record well before you when you mark your ballot; if there is any dampness there, spot him for there are others who are right.

With good temperance officials at the helm I believe that it can be easily proven that the law will be a great improvement over the present conditions, and will be a great pleasure to all who worked so hard to get rid of the Booze shops in our county, Be careful in your choice, vote only for men who are straight, honest, and who you are sure will work in harmony in the enforcement of the law.

W. B. MILLER.

My Dark-Eyed Mother.

BY SARA ROBERTA GETTY.

Dear mother of mine, tho' the years have been speeding
Since we carried you out to your grave on the hill,
Yet your counsel and guidance today we are needing
And we long for a glimpse of your tender smile still.

The warm April sun in the evening was sinking
As you summoned your children about your sick bed:
How shyly we came! half in awe, little thinking
That ere morning dawned you would be with the dead.

Mother of mine, I still see the deep yearning
In your beautiful eyes as your children drew nigh;
The farewell you spoke in my heart is yet burning;
"Good bye, little girls; oh my children, good bye!"

For the Master your life you had always been spending
You taught us the meaning of Patience and Love.
And now you would leave us, your young life was ending
On earth to continue through ages above.

We carried you out neath the sweet smelling flowers.
The years that have passed have been more than a score.
Yet the prayers that we heard at your knee are still ours,
And the thought of your goodness abides ever more.

Rest, dark-eyed mother! the flowers about you
Are waving their lullabies there where you sleep.
Our lives feel a void to be left here without you,
Yet your memory fresh in each heart we will keep.

The Hustler.

I am the guy called printer's ink;
I put hard times on the blink—
My face is black as Euebus
But I'm a lively, hustling cuss.
I make men rich who once were poor
I'm on the job, I am for sure
I get work for the lab'ring man
And help to fill his dinner can;
I aid girls who must earn their feed
I am the friend of all in need
I sell all things from pins to guns,
In cargoes of ten thousand tons.
I'm on the job both night and day
Away from work I never stay.
I am "All" "O K, and It,"
And I take a vacation—nit.
I serve the small as well as great
(See Business Office for my rate)
I am the guy that brings the dough
Just try me you'll find it so.

Hupmobile

CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Head of the House

The chances are he's a hard headed business man.

One of those busines men who is supposed to have no sentiment about him.

Ask him about the Hupmobile.

Remember—he pays the bills. He knows just what Hupmobile service is. For he measures it in dollars and cents.

He will probably begin by telling you that he looks upon the Hupmobile as an investment.

And he will probably say it's one of the best investments he has ever made.

He may—if he pays attention to such small sums—pull out a note book and show you how little he has spent on epairs in ten or twelve or eighteen months or in two or three years.

And then as like as not he'll forget all about business and investment—and jut bubble over with Hupmobile enthusiasm.

We will be glad to leave you to Im.

If he's the average Hupmobile owner he's a better salesman than we are.

He will tell you intimate things of his Hupmobile experiences that we cannot possibly know—evidence of Hupmobile quality with a capital "E."

And if you talk to two or three of his type—just average Hupmobile owners—there won't be much left for us to say when you come in to see us.

Deducting $1,038,292.00 for corporations paying direct to the State Treasurer leaves the basis $10,569,321.00 which at 32½ cents on each $100.00 makes $34,173.79 and this added, makes the taxes for State and County purposes $169,982.86.

MORE DEMOCRATIC INEFFICIENCY

Blunders of That Party are Classical, Yet Prosaical.

Washington, May 4 1915.—One of the classic blunders of the present administration is now before the Court of Customs Appeals, and a decision is looked for at an early date.

The court is expected to interpret the meaning of the provision in the Underwood Tariff bill proposing to give a five per cent. discount in customs duties on merchandise imported in American vessels. Thus far that clause has failed in its purpose, just as the tariff measure of which it is a part failed to provide adequate revenue.

Enacted October 13, 1913, it failed on its first test, and that test applied, too, by the then Attorney General less than 30 days after the bill was signed.

No sooner had the tariff bill been presented to the Secretary of the Treasury for administration than a doubt arose in his mind as to the validity of the five per cent. discount provision. He appealed for advice to Attorney General McReynolds, who is now on the Supreme Court bench. The provision was pronounced inoperative.

"The five per cent discount to American vessels cannot be given," is the language of the Attorney General quoted by the Secretary, "without impairing the stipulations of existing treaties between the United States and various other powers, and consequently the subsection is inoperative."

Acting on this opinion the Secretary of the Treasury issued an order to customs collectors, instructing them to make no allowance of discount on duties under this provision.

Importers who had relied on the law appealed to the Board of General Appraisers. Their ruling resulted in further confusion, and neither side being satisfied, the case was taken to the Court of Customs Appeals, more than a year after the law had passed.

The Democratic Committee report on the five per cent provision defined it as "a discrimination in favor of American shipping, designed to build up our merchant marine and keep at home millions of dollars now being paid to foreign vessels to carry our products to foreign markets."

Yet although they fully realized the tremendous importance of this measure which they said involved millions of dollars, they lacked the foresight to consult their own Attorney General as to the possibility of enacting it into law. They had a vague idea of what they wanted, adopted a vague method of trying to secure it, and by careless guess work threw the whole matter into the courts.

Furthermore, even if the principle of discrimination had not been questioned by the Attorney General the provision was so clumsily drafted that three different interpretations have been placed upon it. Counsel for the importers claimed one interpretation, government attorneys claimed another, and the Board of General Appraisers furnish a third different from all.

During the debate in Congress on this provision, Republican members repeatedly warned the Democrats that, quite apart from its policy, its phraseology was meaningless and should be corrected to become effective.

It was so much breath wasted. The majority stubbornly refused to accept either caution, suggestion or amendment. The result has been that this very important clause has thus far proven mere useless verbiage, except to cause litigation and expense to all concerned. About the only purpose it has served is to emphasize the fact that the inefficient methods of Democratic legislators have made it impossible for them to put even their own ideas into effect.

Harry Pope of Sutton, recently employed by the J. B. Davis & Sons Lumber Company, met with an accident last week which resulted in a broken leg. The young man is being cared for at the home of his landlady, Mrs. Henry Patton, and is on the road to recovery.

On last Monday night Rev. Frank McCamic sf the Methodist church closed one of the most successful meetings ever held at Bond this county. The meeting lasted for five weeks and sixty professed conversion. Rev. McCamic was assisted by Rev. Tanner throughout the meeting while a number of others were present and assisted on various occasions rendering some splendid aid.

Mrs. Joseph Keefe and family returned to their home, Hillscrest Farm at Grantsville, after spending the winter at Bond where Mr. Keefe conducts the company boarding house. Mrs. Keefe will put Hillscrest Farm in shape to receive summer boarders. She was accompanied home by Mr. Keefe who will spend a week looking after his interests there, then will return to Bond.

VOLUME 40. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1915. NUMBER 11.

CHURCH WILL GET $1694.35.

This Amount Comes From the Estate of Miss Groshon of Frederick.

The first and final account of the executor of the last will and testament of Miss Groshon, of Frederick, who devised the sum of $3,000 to St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church of Oakland, was filed and passed in the Orphans' Court of Frederick county on last Friday.

The statement of the executor showed that the costs of the litigation over the will amounted to the sum of $6,000, which amount came out of the estate and decreased the proportionate shares of the devisees, the amount to the local church being cut from the original sum of $3,000 to that of $1,694 35, which will be in the hands of the church treasurer within the next few days.

Up to sunny Oakland
Came a West Virginia guy,
He came up there to buy his booze
As West Virginia's dry.
But as he passed along the street
His smile changed to a frown,
And this is what he shouted
As he passed on through the town

"It's a long way to Allegany
It's a long way to go.
It's a long way to Allegany
To the only booze I know.
Good-by Oakland Corners
Farewell Bock and Rye.
It's a long, long way to Allegany
But Garrett's gone dry."

CAPT. JAMES A. HAYDEN AND MR. E. C. HARVEY FOR HOUSE

Rev. Samuel A. Miller An Aspirant for Judicial Honors.

Many people throughout Garrett county will be surprised to learn that Capt. James A. Hayden of Mountain Lake Park, the founder of The Republican, is an aspirant for the nomination on the Republican ticket for the House of Delegates, his announcement, along with that of Mr. Elliott C. Harvey, of District No. 8, a member of the last House of Delegates, appearing in this paper today.

Capt. Hayden has been a resident of Garrett county since along in the early seventies, when he came here from Pennsylvania, finding employment as a printer with the old Garrett County Herald, which position he held until 1877 when The Republican was established by him and which he controlled until 1890 when he sold out to the present owner. Since the formation of the Republican party Capt. Hayden has ever been interested in its success and enjoys to the fullest the confidence and respect of every one in the county. Capt. Hayden is a veteran of the Civil War, in which he did effective service for the stars and stripes, and was promoted from the ranks to be captain of his company ere he had reached his twenty-first birthday anniversary. He endured all the hardships common to the soldiers life, participated in numerous important campaigns and battles, and was twice taken prisoner by the enemy, spending thirteen months in Libby Prison. He was first captured at Gaines' Mills and the second time at the battle of the Wilderness. His bravery and distinguished gallantry in the above-named engagements won for him substantial honors from his superiors. Among other engagements in which he participated were those of Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, etc. The people of Garrett county would have a worthy representative at Annapolis in the person of Capt. Hayden.

Mr. Elliott C. Harvey is known as one of the substantial members of the last House. He stood firmly for all good legislation and used his most earnest endeavors to kill all bilis that were of a vicious nature. As a champion of the Speicher Local Option Bill in the House he stood at the front and by his influence with his associate members of that body he succeeded in having the measure passed without amendment. His service to his constituents of Garrett county should commend him to a second term, as their interests will be safe in his hands.

Rev. Samuel A. Miller, a minister of the German Baptist church of Accident, announces his candidacy for the nomination of Judge of the Orphans' Court. Mr. Miller has had considerable experience in settling estates as executor or administrator and is well qualified to perform the duties that will fall to his lot should he be successful at the polls.

FROM OAKLAND TO THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

An Interesting Letter From Senator Speicher.

By ccurtesy of a friend, we are permitted to use the following letter from Senator Speicher, mailed at Emporia, Kansas: We arrived at St. Louis, Mo., 4:20 p. m., Friday. There were automobiles at the station waiting to take us on a sight seeing trip over the city and through its public parks. We enjoyed the ride and the city very much. We had dinner at the famous Planters Hotel. The residental portion of the city is fine. A great number of automobiles were seen on the streets.

We left St. Louis at 9:10 p. m., arriving at Kansas City 8:20 a. m., Saturday morning. A fine breakfast was served in the swell resturant in the union depot. The bill of fare was, grape fruit, ham and scrambled eggs, rolls, spring chickens on toast, potatoes, wheat cakes and syrup and plenty of coffee and good milk.

Our special left Kansas City 9:20 a. m. We traveled through some very fine country, wheat, corn and hay were the principle crops in this section. I was intormed by the official who had charge of our train from Kansas City, Mo., to Emporia, Kansas, that the farmers are all well to do and that there is an automobile to every five families.

The crops look fine. We noticed some farmers planting some corn. Everybody was busy, busy, busy. We reached Emporia, 113 miles from Kansas City, at 12:10 p. m. This was the end of a railroad division, and is a town of 13,000 souls. We were told that out of 500 employees of the A. & T. S. Fee R. R., there has been only one man discharged for drunkenness in the last ten months.

I was informed that it was impossible to get a drink of liquor in the town. No bootlegging at all. I hope the time is not far distant when we can say the same, not only of Oakland, but of the entire State of Maryland.

At 12:15 p. m., we left Emporia, and passed through what is known as the cattle section of Kansas. We are due to arrive at Newton, at 1:40 p. m., a distant of 77 miles. We will take our lunch at that city.

After leaving Newton we strike the great Kansas wheat belt, of which I will give you a description later. We have a very jolly delegation, all seem to be enjoying the trip very much.

Governor Goldsborough is looking exceptionally well and says that he is feeling fine. We are pleased with the special train given us for our journey. So far everything has been all that could be asked for.

BLOOMINGTON

Mr. James Watson, of Keyser, president of the Masteller Coal Co., at Hampshire, entertained the superintendent of his company, Mr. F. H. Tibbets of Hampshire, at dinner at his home in that place on last Saturday. After dinner Mr. Watson's son Martin took the party in an auto trip up New Creek about fourteen miles where a very enjoyable afternoon was spent fishing and inspecting the stock, buildings and growing crops on the Watson farm.

Miss Mary Murphy, a nurse in training at the Latrobe hospital, Latrobe, Pa., who has been visiting relatives in this place for the past few weeks, returned to Latrobe Tuesday morning to resume her duties.

Rumor has it on pretty good authority that work on the Buxton plant will be resumed under contract in a few days and this mine, which suspended improvements last fall, when completed with electric haulage and equipment, will be the only modern and up-to-date plant in this region. The power house, with motors and other necessary machinery, was installed last fall. The mine has two openings of the small seams coal, the 4ft. and the 6ft. practically the same seams that were worked at the original Buxton mine, only opened in a new location about one mile above the mouth of Savage river and opposite the town of Bloomington. The coal will be carried over a tramway finished last fall to be operated by electricity and carried to the old Buxton plane and tipple where it will be delivered as heretofore to the W. M. R. R. This is certainly good news to the mining and business population of Bloomington, Beryl and vicinity. Our people are already elated over the encouraging prospects of a good summer's work.

Rev. Dr. Bacon, of Baltimore, Supt, of the Frederick district of the M. E. church, conducted services and held his first quarterly meeting at the Bloomington appointment on last Sunday evening.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS

Weekly Gleanings From The Oakland High School.

Felix Robinson, one of our sophomores, is absent with an attack of mumps.

Bernard Faherty, a graduate of the '14 class, has opened a tailoring establishment in partnership with Ernest Liller, in the K. of P. building.

Last Thursday the freshmen tennis team defeated the Terra Alta All-Stars by a score of 13-5. Two sets were played: the first set ended with the score of 6-0 in our favor and the second set ended with 15-7 in our favor.

In the near future a monument will be erected in honor of Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star Spangled Banner," at his birthplace, Terra Tubra, Maryland, by the school children of this state. Several of the students recently contributed to this fund to the amount of $1.54, which was sent to the state secretary, W. J. Heaps, 310 W. Hoffman St., Baltimore.

The senior bookkeeeping class, accompanied by their instructor, Miss Hanna, visited Mr. J. W. Hart's store last Wednesday and enjoyed some practical instructions on buying goods, opening new goods, discounting bills, etc. Mr. Hart manifested so much interest in us and gave us such clear explanations that we concluded he would make a very successful teacher.

The following students made not less than 80 per cent. in each study and not less than 95 per cent, in conduct for the eighth month of school: First year class, Eva Falkenstein, Lorena Falkenstine, Mary Drake Naylor, Margaret Sincell, Elizabeth Townshend, Victor Harvey and Edward Scott; second year class, Lillian Helbig, Pauline Jones, Carrie Mann, Mildred Dixon and Winifred Weimer; third year class, Norine Ault, Mabel Falkenstein, Louise Harned, Edward Lewis; fourth year class, Lulu Friend, Bess Hendrickson, Evelyn Helbig, Grace Laffey, Edwana Peddicord, Lena Ravenscroft, Leah Sincell, Harold Conneway, Delbert Davis, Harold Dawson, Robert Garrett, Ross Isenberg, Playford Naylor, Marion Newman, George Queer and John Scott; post graduate, Robert White.

Notice Sons of Veterans.

There will be a meeting of the Sons of Veterans on Wednesday evening of next week, at the hour of eight o'clock, at the First National Bank building, third floor, to make arrangements for the observance of Memorial Day. All members of the organization are urgently requested to be present, as upon this organization rests the honor of carrying out the duty of decorating the graves of the deceased soldiers.

N. R. SANNER, Commander.

West Virginia is going through the same experience we of Garrett county endured. The Leader of Grafton, says: The dog catcher is abroad in the land, having made his annual bow to the public several days ago. Yearly this farce is enacted when along about May 1st great activity is manifested in municipal circles and the death warrants of all dogs running at large without tags are signed and sealed, and for a couple of weeks the temperature runs high, a few dogs are killed and some little coin of the realm collected from willing contributors to the city coffers. But it is a noticeable fact that the great majority of the owners of dogs pay no taxes on them and the great majority of exempted canines escape entrance into the dark deep valley.

GARRETT COUNTY BOARD OF TRADE

A Chat With the Citizens of Garrett County.

The Garrett County Board of Trade intends to, if possible, enthuse the citizens of this great county of Garrett to some action which will unite their efforts to develop every interest in the county. There are great possibilities before us. There are undeveloped resources of inestimable value. There are "Acres of Diamonds" all about us.

The mountains are full of wealth. These mountains ought to be covered with sheep—there is money in the sheep industry. In wool, in dressed mutton for the cities of the valleys.

Garrett County Mountain Mutton is famous all over the country. There is a market for it, waiting on us.

Those who have a practical knowledge and know what they are talking about without fear or contradiction, say that Garrett county is adapted to the cultivation of the best grade of potatoes for seed purposes for Southern Maryland and Virginia.

We have sand of good quality for manufacturing glass. with natural gas right on the spot, to run a glass plant. All we need is the company to put up the plant and get to work.

We have clays for brick, for drain tile, sewer pipe for fire-place tiling. We have fire clay of best quality. We have coal lands, etc., etc.

We have thousands of acres of farm land, and land to open up for farming.

We have a bracing, healthful atmosphere, pure sparkling water and good roads, good schools, which are growing better all the time, churches all over the county, of which we feel proud.

We have no liquor saloons in the county, we have an industrious citizenship, progressive farmers, and enterprising merchants. We are moving to the very front of the Maryland column. WE MUST KEEP MOVING, UP AND ON. WE MUST GET BUSY AND KEEP BUSY.

The past week a number of persons, from different parts of this county, called at the office of the Garrett County Board of Trade, to express their approval of the movement and give it their endorsement.

The plan to make Garrest county a seed producing market for Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain potatoes has been inaugurated. A good beginning has been made. It will grow until carloads of seed potatoes will be shipped from this mountain summit to the Eastern Shore, and Southern Maryland and Virginia.

The Garrett County Board of Trade will agitate this matter right along, through the county papers, and by public meetings in the school houses over the county.

Every merchant, every farmer and every citizen of the county should enroll as a member of the Garrett County Board of Trade. UNITEDLY WE CAN ACCOMPLISH WONDERS.

The Secretary of the Board is busy planning for the best interest of the farmers throughout the county, and we are trying to organize the entire county into a working unit.

The papers throughout the State and adjoining states are speaking about our organization and its possibilities. We are getting on the map. We are already beginning to see results.

We want to advertise Garrett County, as a summer home for vacationists, as a delightful trip, over the county, for tourists, an ideal place for week end automobile parties, a healthful place for invalids, or those who are looking for a quiet, restful place to spent the remainder of life.

We want to increase the sale of Garrett county buckwheat flour to increase the sale, larger crops of buckwheat must be raised. The farmers must raise the buckwheat, the millers grind it and the Board of Trade will undertake to find a market for it.

Co-operation is the idea, co-operation in every department. Everyone pulling together. Everyone working for Garrett county. The farmer, the butcher, the miller, the merchant, the miner, the lumberman, the laborer, the lawyer, the preacher. the teacher, the printer, the men, the women, the boys and the girls, all united to develop a GREATER GARRETT COUNTY.

The Mountain City Band, the Civic Club, the Lawn Tennis Club, the Basket Ball Teams, the Fair Association, the Board of Trade, the Hotel, the Boarding-house keepers, the people in town, in the village, on the farm, by the roadside, everywhere, co-operating. Buying at home, hunting markets for home products, boosting Garrett county, singing its praises and telling its advantages, all united with one object, BOOSTING GARRETT COUNTY, standing by each other.

The Friendsville Brass Band. The Jennings Band, the Dodson Band, the Crellin Band and all other bands "tooting" the same tune—Boosting Garrett County.

When in town call at the head quarters of the Board of Trade. Become a member of the Board. Send yonr name to the secretary and $1 for six months' dues, ($2 it a resipent of Oakland.) Take off your coat, roll up your sleeves, and commence boosting; laugh at the kickers and get busy.

DEMOCRACY'S FAILURE.

Blunders Have Signalized Every Effort of Party In Power.

WASHINGTON, D. C. April 28—A blunder signalized the legislative career of the present administration.

The Democratic tariff bill, first in the articles of Democratic farth, and the one achievement on which naturally they would be expected to expand their most exhaustive study and care, was so clumsily executed that it failed to accomplish the results intended. The failure was due to crude, hasty, unscientific, secret legislative methods.

Designed to furnish sufficient revenue to finance the United States treasury, it has proven absolutely inadequate for that purpose.

In writing the tariff bill the Democrats dimly foresaw a possible reduction in customs receipts, although they did not know how much and did not ascertain the facts. So the income tax provision was incorporated, in the hope that it would make up for any miscalculations in the tariff bill, although the Democrats did not know and did not ascertain the facts.

But what happened when these provisions went into effect?

Customs receipts were millions of dollars below the amount needed from that source, and at the same time collections from the income tax fell many millions below the amount needed from that source. The inevitable result was to leave the treasury without sufficient money for its needs.

The failure was caused by carelessness. Had there been conscientious, open consideration of the revenue bill, sufficient to enable members of Congress to study and understand it, the reduction in revenue could have been properly safegarded. But instead of getting accurate information and adequate estimates, the Democrats guessed at it and they guessed wrong,

The result of this first mistake should have been a warning. But the startling fact remains that the Democrats committed the same kind of an error again. Forced by their headlessness to provide more revenue, they passed a "war tax" in time of peace. Based on a guess instead of an estimate, the war tax did not produce money enough. For months the receipts of the treasury have been daily falling short of expenditures at a rate reaching at times more than a million dollars a day. According to official estimates the deficit will probably amount to one hundred million dollars by July 1, the end of the fiscal year.

No chain is stronger than its weakest link. The fatal weakness that has characterized the work of this administration from its inception two years ago has been its eagerness to propose laws, carelessness in drafting them, haste in committee action action, and stubborn refusal to permit intelligent amendment in either House or Senate after the party brand had been affixed by the all powerful caucus.

Every American citizen has had to help pay for these costly experiments. There will be still more to pay until the errors have been corrected by thoughtful, intelligent legislation.

Later articles will follow, illustrating still further the slovenly habits of legislation that have characterized the Democratic administration.

Vocational School Conferences.

One of the many activities originated and put into operation by the Atlantic Co., N. J., Vocational Board of Education is a series of farmers' and students' conferences. A report of the assistant in charge of vocational schools at Minotola, touching on these conferences, says:

"These conferences have been combined to the mutual benefit of both farmers and students, being held once weekly on seasonal topics, since the suspension of the full time classes. The interest shown by the farmers and students has made the conferences well worth continuing. These conferences consist of round-table talks, questions from the men attending, and as far as possible practical work by a group of those present in performing the opeartions being considered.

"The first conference held on "Making and Use of Lime Sulphur Sprays" was attended by 18. A small amount of concentrated spray was manufactured by a group of men present and tested with the hydrometer to determine the necessary dilution with water for applying to the trees. Then the costs of the work entailed were compared with the cost of the ready-made solutions for sale on the market. The practical use of the spray was thoroly considered. All thru the conference the farmers and student interposed questions of real practical value.

"The second conference was held on "Making Grafting Wax, Grafting, Uses, and Costs." An increase in attendance showed the effect of the previous work, and the desire of the farmers, 27 being present. They entered eagerly into the work in order to secure the practice and training.

"The attendance was composed mostly of Americans and Italians, several of the latter bringing interpreters. One Italian present who showed a very intelligent interest, has had an education in an Italian College."

Grantsville, high in the Alleghenies and on the old National Pike, is becoming a favorite resort for touring parties from Cumberland, Oakland, Frostburg, Meyersdale and other points. On Saturday May 1st, Mrs. Henderson, wife of Judge Robert R. Henderson, of Cumberland, was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Hotel Casselman, given by Mrs. MacDonald, wife of Judge Robert MacDonald, of the Juvenile Court of Allegany county. The occasion was Mrs. Hendersons' birthdav. The other guests were Mrs. Boyd, wife of Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd of the Maryland Court of Appeals, Mrs. DeWarren H. Reynolds, Mrs. Lucius M. Shepherd and Mrs. Anna Whiting Stubblefield. Mrs. Bell, wife of James R. Bell, of Cumberland, division freight agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, entertained at dinner at the Hotel Casselman Frank B. Jenvey, Mrs. W. Ralph Bretz and Miss Fillmore of Cumberland. A motoring party from Cumberland consisting of former State's Attorney Austin A. Wilson and daughter, Miss Elizabeth Wilson, Miss Ruth Butler and Miss Mellinger, were guests of Mrs. Marion Broadwater.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Buckle and children of Bittinger spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Bittinger at this place.

Good roads mean patronage for our hotels, as will be seen from the following: A Massachusetts party of seven, en route for the Panama Exposition, took rooms at the National last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Way from Baltimore are guests at the Victoria Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bender and family and Miss Hazel Younkin were Meyersdale shoppers recently.

Mrs. Richard Younkin and daughter Mable, Miss Grace Fresh, Miss Christina Winterberg and Charles Jenkins, were guests at dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Diefenbach.

Clarence Miller has moved from the cottage of Mrs. Mary Wagner into the house vacated by Stewart Rodamer.

Mrs. Goddard Doerr was taken to the University Hospital at Baltimore for treatment and operation. Her sister, Mrs. J. J. Glotfelty, is taking charge of her little ones during her absence.

Miss Mary Livengood is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Baker of near Grantsville.

Mrs. N. B. Hartman, a representative of the Sherwood Music School is here she will spend some time as Miss Beulah Engle, the teacher, has taken up the Sherwood course.

The Boy Scouts of Frostburg are making preparations for a grand raliy at this place in the near future.

Little Miss Lohr from Spring, Pa., spent several days with her sister, Mrs. Henry Schaefer.

C. H. Bill has added four new rooms to his cottage which formerly was but one story and has now a commodious upper floor. A broad oak stairway has been added, making the reception hall very attractive.

Mrs. J. J. Bender has returned from State Sanatorium, Md., and is continuing treatment at home. Little baby Clyde is now in charge of Miss Brotemarple of Cumberland, Miss Finan having returned home the first of the month. A sun parlor has been erected over the porch for the benefit of the patients during their convalescence.

True As Preaching.

"Every line in a newspaper costs the proprietor something. If it is for the benefit of the individual it should be paid for. If the grocer was asked to contribute groceries to one abundantly able to pay for them, he would refuse. The proprietor of a newspaper must pay for the free advertising if the beneficiary does not, and yet it is one of the hardest to be learned by many, that a newspaper has space in its columns to rent, and must rent them to live. To give away rent for anything less than living rates is as fatal to a newspaper as for a landlord to furnish rent free."

Well, the dollar and a quarter a year pays for part of it—when we get the dollar and a quarter—and the legitimate advertiser pays a lot of it. but there are miles of type, every year, that goes toward charity, one way or another, without anybody ever thinking it might be otherwise—newspapers, and free advertising are very matter-of-fact sort of institutions.

If you want to rent your cottage for the summer, see L. A. Rudisill, Ravenscroft Building, Oakland. He is preparing to use the city papers for advertising Garrett county as a summer resort and is listing property, for that purpose, from any part of this county. Advertisement.

BLOOMINGTON

Sheriff Scott impaneled a jury last Thursday to enquire into the sanity of Mrs. Elmira Bernard. The jury consisted of Mariam Stewart, Wilson Kimmell, Jacob Stump, Amos Davis, J. G. Howard, Adam Elliott, Gil. Miller, George Miller, Edw. E. Warnick, Benton Harshburger, J. L. Clark and W. H. Murphy. After hearing the evidence Mrs. Bernard was declared insane and recommended the appointment of a guardian for Mrs. Bernard.

Mr. George Warnick is able to be up part of the day, but not out of the house. His physician says that he must not go to the store for business before July.

The miners hereabouts will be at work again, very shortly. The miners on the Maryland side are putting in full time.

Mr. Fannie Mullen of this place, is the guest of friends and relatives in Cumberland.

Miss Clara Tibbets, the popular milliner, of Kitzmiller, Md., is spending the week with her mother, Mrs. Minnie Tibbets, of Bloomington. She is accompanied by her cousin, Mrs. William Rowlands of the same place.

Miss Pleasant Sullivan, of Pittsburgh, returned home Tuesday after a very enjoyable visit to her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Raley of near this place.

Mr. L. B. Brydon of the Bloomington Coal Co., Grafton, spent the week-end with relatives in this place.

The Masteller Coal Co. doing business at Hampshire has been closed down most of the week on account of making repairs to their dinkey engine that hauls coal over the 4 ft. tramway.

Mrs. Wm. Bowers, of Westernport, was entertained by Mrs. Charles Brendlin on Saturday.

Mr. Floyd Duckworth a well known citizen of Dist. No. 4 and one of the most substantial farmers of the Michael's settlement, who has been in delicate health for some time past, is reported to have grown worse in the last few days and his condition is regarded as critical.

Mr. Jerry Browning, an employee of the Masteller Coal Co. and a resident of Bloomington, moved his family and household effects to Oakland last week. We understand Mr. Browning will take up farming as a livelihood in the future and will shortly move on a farm near that place.

Mr. Gasper Kight, a prominent young business man of Hancock, Md., spent Thursday with his father Mr. Howard Kight, of Barnum.

Mr. Malcolm McFarlane formerly of Barnum, now connected with the P. R. R. as coal inspector spent the week end with his father, Mr. G. C. McFarlane of Keyser.

A Swaper From Swapville.

Over in Virginia the other day Grandfather Davidson traded a mule for ten gallons of maple syrup and got a pony to boot.

On this deal his grand-son, also a Davidson, plus a lover of dogs, complimented him highly.

But the old man said that while it was a good trade, "it isn't to be compared to the swap of getting that nice buggy for them six blooded dogs of yourn!"

"The mischief you say, grand-pap! What do you want with a buggy?"

"Why, I'm going to give it to a fellow over the river for seven sheep he don't want on account of your dogs!"

Better swap off some worthless Garrett county dogs and keep the sheep industry going.

Real Riding Comfort

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

The Overland swivel seat gives absolutely free movement of the springs, prevents binding and reduces possibility of breakage.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Refuge of Lies.

FOURTH LETTER.

Many a man launches his ship on Zion Gaber, but he pays the fare in the loss of his soul.

Many young people press into the road of sensual indulgence but they pay a terribly high toll for the privilege of traveling that road. He who enters pays his fare in shame, self loathing, remorse, and rottenness of bones. One step may hurl us over the precipice to death. You can't take fire into your bosom and not be burned. You can't follow a course of sin without paying the penalty. The end thereof is death.

Young men press to houses of wonten p'easure bent only on enjoyment. Over the door of every house of infamy and sinful pleasure God's book has written, "This house is the way to hell going down to the chambers of death." Along the highways of self indulgence God has placed toll gates of retribution. You have seen men of all walks of life and of the various trades of life reeling through the streets, while of all their friends, the best loved of all was one called demijohn. They had a through ticket on the devil's fast express, right through to hell.

The way to heaven is wisdom's way, the door thereto is Christ, we can only enter the way to heaven by abandonment of sins and following Him in faith and self denial. Taking up the cross and following Him is the fare. We must pay in this way, but you will land at the gate where you will be admitted into heaven and enjoy perfect happiness and peace forever.

The policy delusion is worth noticing. It is policy in politics, in social life, in business. We must do as others do to get and keep our share of trade.

The policy that will cheat a grocer out of an egg will swipe half his store if it could be done without detection.

The policy that gives short measures and light weights would take all if it could. Policy lies for a penny, makes fair promises but breaks them; sells its Sunday papers that are full of evil, then comes to church like a saint and goes home to plan for Monday's trade.

Policy is a saint in church but a devil outside, if it can make a nickel. Policy robs man and beast of their rights for its own selfish purposes. Its a tyrant at home, a gentleman in company, affable to customers yet bearish to clerks. Policy is dishonest when it pays and honest when it is convenient. If all professing Christians were to act on strictly honest principals they would control the business of the world. O, but you can't carry on business without resorting to the prevailing policy. Others do it, we have to. No one is compelled to sin, and to talk thus is to excuse ourselves in wrong doing. Better let the business go then, for if the worldly policy governs us, then the devil runs the business with a first class prospect of getting the manager in the end.

Can't compete, unless we resort to this policy. False again, in philosophy, history, theory and practice. The church can regulate the commerce of the world if she wants to. So in politics, she can sway the nations and yet not become corrupt.

Let Christians determine to vote for none but honest men and of pure morals, and let it be known that only such will be supported and none but this kind will be nominated. Then people will say, what a good man he is, and parties would no more set up a vile man, a gambler or a demagogin, or a rum soaked autocrat than they would nominate the devil for president.

Here is a refuge into which many children are driven and that too by parents. The child knows it ought to become a Christian and wants to do its duty, but it is met by the chilly and false declaration, you are too young. Then the devil confirms it by crying, yes that is true, wait awhile, you haven't sowed any wild oats yet. Solomon destroyed this refuge of his when he said, "Rejoice O, young man in thy youth and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth and walk in the ways of thy heart and in the sight of thine eyes but know thou that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." Are they too young to die? Then they are not too young to seek and serve Christ. The last pillar of this refuge was knocked down when the wise man said, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." Why give the flower of your life to the devil and the drugs to your Lord.

The can't refuge is a common one. I can't pray, I can't repent, I can't believe, I can't give up sin. Then sin must save you or you perish in it. Johab's sin could not save him, but he cried out in his distress. "They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy." Suppose the end of the age were just at hand and awful judgments were coming upon the world. It does look like that's a fact. It may be nearer than we think when the Lord Christ will come again as king and conqueror.

The prediction that the end of the age would be last October, has been proven false by the facts. The one who affirmed it is then a false prophet, wholly unworthy of confidence. He is an unsafe guide, absolutely untrustworthy.

But the end draweth nigh. Watch for the coming of the Master. Be ready to meet him and you shall be glorified with Him.

JOHANNES.

FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Imperfections of The Income Tax Law Discussed.

Washington, D. C. May 12.—Because of imperfections in the income tax law, numerous amendments will be recommended to the next Congress by the Treasury Department.

Official experts are quietly at work on this statute, preparing a report on the crudities it contains and outlining proper legislative action to correct them. The law is honeycombed with errors.

A striking illustration of this thread of weakness that runs through the whole gamut of Democratic legislation occurs in one of the most vital provisions of the income tax law. It relates to deductions that shall be allowed in computing gross income, a basic element in this system of taxation.

Paragraph B of the law states that "in computing income for the purpose of the normal tax there shall be allowed as deductions" among other things "losses actually sustained during the year incurred in trade" etc. What is the meaning of the words "in trade?" The courts must decide.

The phrase is capable of an infinite variety of interpretations. As construed by the Treasury Department, deductions from gross income for losses "in trade" can be made only in connection with "that which occupies and engages the attention, and labor of anyone for the purpose of livelihood, profit or improvement; that which is his personal concern or interest, employment, occupation but it is not necessary that it should be his sole occupation or employment."

For instance, it is held that if a grocer has invested in real estate, in making his income tax return any real estate profits must be added to gross income but losses from real estate investment must be deducted from gross income.

In every part of the country bitter complaints have been made against this ruling the question is to be taken to the courts for final adjudication, whether the ruling is right or wrong, it is the uncertainty of the statute that reflects upon the intelligence of the political party responsible for it.

Nothing but heedlessness could have permitted it. The tax payer bears the burden of the blunder, for it is a maxim in governmental affairs that every doubt in a law is resolved in favor of the government by the administrative officers.

Errors in the income tax law are too numerous to mention in detail. Witness the fact that in the first few weeks of its operation thousands of applications for refund were made. One of these has just been allowed, and is a fine example of the law's uncertainty:

The Department refunded to one man who had paid $500 as income tax all but $12 of that amount. He had had the help of a revenue officer in making his return, yet so indefinite was the law that for fear of violation he paid the government $500 instead of $12.

Examination of the Department decisions on the income tax law shows a mass of contradictory rulings. Over and over again opinions were reversed and rereversed, because the terms of the law did not admit of clear interpretation.

Every day additional evidence is found that adds to the long list of legislative blunders committed by the Democratic administration. Future Congress and the courts must correct the mistakes, and meanwhile the people must pay for them.

BITTINGER.

The long-suffering farmer was plagued by the army worm last season and this year he is afflicted with a visitation of candidates that over-run the land in droves.

Daniel Orendorf and David Miller, of near Oakland, were Sunday visitors in this village.

C. H. Jennings and son, Paul, were automobiling in this section last Sunday.

One of C. E. Ellithorp's driving horses was considerably injured one day last week by falling on a snag by the road side. The horse was running away when the accident occurred.

Ex-sheriff Albert Lee and Mr. Guy Barrick, of Kitzmiller, who is a candidate for the nomination for sheriff, were brief but pleasant callers in this village last week.

Clarence Bittinger, who recently completed the Commercial course in a Parkersburg business college, was calling on old friends here last Saturday evening.

Alfred Mason, of North Glade, was a business visitor here recently.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

In the Park letter last week we mentioned that Mrs. Fannie Miller was a Park visitor. She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. James Burrell, of Washington, D. C. They were here to look over Hotel Chautauqua, with the view of making a purchase. They returned to Washington very much pleased with the Park as a summer resort and with the hotel. Last Friday Mr. G. A. Burrell, nephew of Mr. James Burrell arrived at the Park, visited Oakland and placed on record in the office of the Clerk E. Z. Tower, the deed for Hotel Chautauqua. Mr. G. W. Burrell is busy going over the building seeing what is necessary for the betterment of the hotel. Saturday he had plumbers at work, and Monday plasterers and others fixing things up. Mr. James Burrell is an experienced hotel man, having conducted the popular Hygene Hotel at Old Point Comfort, Va. He will bring to Hotel Chautauqua an experience that will make the hotel a desirable stopping place for the tourists and vacationists. His nephew, G. A. Burrell, takes hold of things like a veteran and with a get-you-there movement that means business. May he succeed beyond his highest expectations and we believe he will.

Mr. Alexander Zeck is building a stable on his lot. His bungalow is one of the handsomest in the Park, with a magnificent outlook and a glorious sun set view.

Allenhurst is open for guests.

Miss Sarah Harris, of Virginia, arrived here the latter part of last week, and is getting her delightfully located house ready for guests.

Miss Jennie Smith and Miss Carrie Morrison registered at the Romney cottage last Friday.

Mrs. F. P. Arnold is putting the Arnold cottage in tip-top condition, and will be open for guests on the 15th. Mrs. Arnold anticipates a full house.

H. M. Arnold was a week end visitor at Clarksburg, W. Va.

The services last Sabbath in the Methodist church were well attended and full of interest. Dr. McKains sermon in the morning was greatly enjoyed. It was one of the best the Doctor has preached in the Park. There were many carnations worn. The men wore apple blossoms. At night Miss Jennie Smith was the leading speaker. It seemed like old times to have Miss Jennie with us again.

Why is the Park Summer program like a delayed B. & O. train? Because it is a long time getting here. Like the 4th of July it's coming.

We were glad to read in the Republican last week that Attorney J. C. Renninger would be a candidate for re-election. He is the man we need to enforce the local option law now in force. His experience is what is needed. He has made a splendid record the past year in enforcing the laws of the state.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Kuykendall, came up to the Park from Keyser, W. Va., Friday, and are getting the DeBerry cottage ready for the summer.

The song, "The flowers that bloom in the spring tra la!" should be revised to "The fires that burn in May, ha, ha!"

Edward Smouse, of Fairmont, W. Va., is spending a week in this vicinity.

The remains of Mrs. Bell Rodeheaver, who died at Fairmont Saturday, were brought to this place Monday morning.

Mrs. L. C. Prevost, of Green Springs, W. Va., spent the past week with home folks at the Park.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago will have charge of the Bible Conference at the Park this season. The Institute is advertising the Conference extensively through their magazine which has a circulation of 12,000. James M. Gray, who attended the Park Conference last year, is dean of the educational department of the Institute.

Jack Stevenson was 28 years old Monday, a few of his neighbors found it out and gave him a sock shower Monday night. It was a surprise but a decidedly enjoyable affair. During the evening refreshments were served. Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. McKain, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Friend, C. W. Harvey, H. D. Leighton, Joseph Rathbun and Warren Rathbun.

At a family reunion for Mrs. Margaret Bever at Grafton, W. Va., on the occasion of her eighty-third birthday, a surprise was given the forty or more present when her granddaugter, Miss Margaret Louise Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Bell, of Mountain Lake Park, announced her engagement to John Burton Watkins, of Tunnelton, W. Va. The marriage took place immediately, the ceremony being performed by Rev. A. F. Richardson of the Lutheran church at Grafton. After the conclusion of the family reunion, the newly weds left for a honeymoon trip to the west. They will live at Tunnelton, where the groom has a position with the Merchants Coal Company.

SEE America first: it is safer. For real pleasure and beautiful vistas see Garrett county first.

IN April 1915, the business failures in the country numbered 2,063. In the same month last year they were 1,336. And this is the arriving prosperity proclaimed from the Democratic housetops.

FOR military purposes a United States Army officer has designed an automobile that will carry 14 men, with full equipment and three days' rations, 800 miles on one filling of its fuel tanks.

PRESIDENT Wilson has issued an executive order barring men over 35 years old from taking taking a Civil Service examination to make them eligible for appointment as secretaries and clerks in the diplomotic service.

THE fact of the death of Alfred G. Vanderbilt in the Lusitania disaster being definitely established, interest today centered around the distribution the multimillionaire may have made of his fortune which is estimated at from $70,000,000 to $100,000,000.

THERE are seventeen candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor of Maine, the certainty being that anyone who is nominated as a Republican is sure to be elected. There is no more significant evidence of the changed political conditions in the country than the rush to get on the Republican ticket.

JUSTICE HUGHES, of the Supreme Court, who has been spoken of as the best and strongest candidate for the Republican nomination for President, has made it known that his name must not be considered in that connection. This is regarded as final, as Justice Hughes is not the kind of man to trim words.

A live County Agent rises to emergencies. They have been called "The Government's Agricultural Minute Men," the Departments' most effective advertisement. We consider a county Agent the best piece of welfare insurance a county can buy and the cheapest. And Garrett county ought to have one.

IN his incomparable speech at Gettysburg, President Lincoln appealed to his countrymen to consecrate themselves to the unfinished task that lay before them; that a "goverement of the people, by the people, and for the people, might not perish from the earth." That task is unfinished, and it is the duty of every citizen to carefully study the principles of government, the methods of government and issues as they arise, and then give to his country the benefits of his judgment and his conscience. To this end he should not only express himself at elections but faithfully attend primaries and conventions where candidates are chosen and policies enunciated.

THE STAGGERING COST.

The European statisticians are amusing themselves and terrifying those who will be called on to pay in figuring out the cost of the horrific conflict now going on. The totals arrived at are frightful to contemplate, bevond the conception of ordinary intelligence. The initial estimates put the cost of the war at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 per day. But later estimates, taking into account lost wages, damage to property, etc., but excluding indirect damages, make the total more terrifving. As an example, Mr. Bryce, a member of the British parliament, estimates the cost of war lasting eighteen months at $40,000,000,000, which represents an average cost of $73,000,000 per day. For damage to property he allows $5,000,000,000, while the loss due to unproductive employment of 12,000,000 soldiers he estimanes it at $10,000,000,000, or at an annual rate per man of about $500.

And for what is all this staggering outlay? What do the people expect to get out of it, except to bear the burdens and to suffer? Woe unto those by whom the offense cometh, for in the end they also will have to pay dearly for it. The financial condition that Europe will find itself in if it fights ten months longer and then quits to pay its debt of $40,000,000,000 will be enough to take all thought of fight in the future out of those who have been fighting and those who have not, but who will have to pay for this carnival of destruction of life and property. Think of the bill that is to be settled. The interest alone on the increase of debt will call for $2,000,000,000 a year in taxation. Can the people pay that and the addition necessary to reduce the debt?

THIS week The Republican devotes several columns to items of special interests to the citizens of Garrett county, furnished by officials of the Garrett County Board of Trade and the Garrett County Fair Association.

Both of these organizations have for their object the best interests of Garrett county. The first named association is making an effort to let the Nation know that Garrett county exists, that it is a great summer resort region, that it has homes for industrious and moral people.

Garrett county and its possibilities ought to be made known to the out side world, hence The Republican publishes the articles furnished weekly.

The citizens of the county should back us in this effort to advertise the county, by subscribing for the paper for their family and by mailing it to their friends. We know of no way to better boost the county than to mail this paper to the children away from home.

A WAVERING-WABBLING ADMINISTRATION.

History will probably write vacillation as the chief characteristic of the Wilson administration. While the American people have pictured Wilson in their minds as a man of personal force and grim determination, the indisputable record shows a wavering and wobbling policy never before displayed by a chief executive of the United States.

Woodrow Wilson was elected on a platform which denounced extravagance and pledged him to an economical administration, but in a message to Congress he declared his confidence that the American people are not concerned with the amount of the appropriations if they are getting something for their money.

He made his campaign upon pledges of free tolls for American shipping through the Panama Canal, but he proposed and forced through Congress a measure repealing the free toll provision of the Panama Canal act.

He ran upon a platform which pledged him to protection of the merit system in the civil service, but not within thirty years has there been an administration in which the spoils system has been so freely resorted to as in the administration of which he is the head.

His party came into power upon pledges of fair dealing and protection to American working men, but enacted legislation which forced upon the country its most difficult problem—that of finding work for the unemployed which this administration created.

But it is not merely by a comparison of pre-election pledges and administrative performances that this vacillation is shown. Probably one of the most remarkable instances is found in the President's utterance regarding his Mexican policies. In an authorized interview published in the Saturday Evening Post, May 23, 1914, the President announced it as "his settled policy" that "no personal aggrandizement by American investors, or adventurers, or capitalists, or exploitations of that country will be permitted," but that "legitimate business interests that seek to develop rather than exploit will be encouraged." Also that "a settlement of the agrarian land question by constitutional means—such as that allowed in New Zealand, for example—will be insisted on."

But within eight months after deliberately asserting his intention to interfere in the internal affairs of the Mexican Republic, the President said in his Indianapolis speech, on January 8, 1915, "it is none of my business and it is none of your business how long they take in determining it (their form of government). It is none of my business and it is none of yours how they go about the business. The country is theirs. The government is theirs. The liberty, if they get it, and God speed them in getting it, is theirs. And so far as my influence goes while President nobody shall interfere with them."

This quotation from a speech on January 8, 1915, is from the same man who in the Saturday Evening Post of May 23, 1914, asserted that "every phase of the Mexican situation is based on the condition that those in de facto control of the government must be relieved of that control be relieved of that control before Mexico can realize her manifest destiny."

The quotation is from the same man who at one time placed an embargo on the shipment of arms and ammunition from the United States into Mexico and, in pursuance of his invariably policy, later raised the embargo and permitted the shipment of arms to one fraction or the other in the Mexican revolution.

The vacilliation of the Wilson administration is not only written in the records of the United States, but is recorded in the official correspondence of foreign countries.

U. S. Court Halts Ru-ber-oid Imitators

In a recent opinion, the U. S. Court of Appeals in Chicago holds that the public has long recognized the trade name "Ruberoid" or "Ru-ber-oid" as the trade name of the Standard Paint Co. and as indicating roofing of their manufacture, and it enjoins imitators from using the word "Rubberoid or any similar name as the trade name or brand" of their roofing, as unfair competition in business. There is only one and we sell it. Look for the "Ruber-oid Man" (shown above) on every roll. Imitations of RU-BER-OID may resemble it in appearance, but they will not equal it in durability. We know of many cases where RU-BER-OID Roofing has given more than 20 years of constant service.

RU-BER-OID ROOFING

RU-BER-OID costs more than ordinary prepared roofings, but it is cheaper by the year. When we supply you with RU-BER-OID, made in Gray, Tile Red or Copper Green, we are selling you the most satisfactory roofing that you can buy. Call or write for our prices.

Dr. Moore of this city addressed the Methodist Brotherhood of Kingwood, W. Va., last Thursday evening. Refreshments were served after the lecture. The occasion was a very profitable and enjoyable one.

The Terra Alta Republican of last week tells of the following Garrett countains who visited that city: W. W. Groves, Calvin Frazee, Crellin; Miss Ellen Kerins, of Pleasant Valley; Mr. and Mrs. John Davis and children, Oakland.

Attorney Fred Martin came from Oakland Monday and attended the session of the Circuit Court. Mr. Martin is gradually regaining his strength impaired by long illness and hopes to be entirely well soon—Leader, Grafton, W. Va.

Sarah Hess, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Martin, died Monday evening, May 10th, of whooping cough, aged seven weeks. The remains were taken to Fairmont, W. Va., Wednesday morning for interment, the family returning to-day.

The interior of the banking and directors' rooms of the Garrett National Bank have been handsomely redecorated by Messrs. Hipsley Bros., the artistic painters of Mountain Lake Park. The color scheme in the decorations harmonize and the result is an effect in keeping with the furnishings of the rooms.

HIGH UP IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Is the Summer Resort Region of Garrett County.

Garrett County, located in the Allegany Mountains, nearest the clouds of any county in the State, is delightfully situated for the summer home of the Nation.

Has the most charming roads for team or automobile, amidst picturesque surroundings and beautiful vistas, with pure, sparkling water, bracing atmosphere, high up in the mountains and yet near to business by means of telegraph and telephone, and fast express trains, only six hours from the National Capital. In the mountains and yet with all the conveniences of city life.

Garrett County is the ideal location for health, recuperation, pleasure and comfort, at reasonable charges.

See Garrett County first.

You will be delighted, you will be greatly benefitted in body and in mind.

From the east you travel over the B. & O. Railroad, in chair cars or Pulman sleepers, on solid vestibule trains. The summit of this famous region is reached at Altamont, where is located the large farm and summer home of Col. Truesdale, of Washington, D. C. From Truesdale Heights one has a magnificent view of God's handiwork, the delight of thousands of tourists.

A few miles distant is the famous Deer Park Hotel and its beautiful grounds and cottages, where presidents and statesmen spent their summer vacation. Golf links, splendid drives, delightful paths, good accommodations and cool nights attract a large number of guests from all over the Country.

Four miles further west is Mountain Lake Park, a summer resort region. A park of 800 acres, with 16 miles of drives, with water and sewer system, natural gas, electric lights, a lake of 35 acres, bathing, boating, golf links, lawn tennis courts, bowling alley, cottages for rent, hotels, boarding houses, large Tabernacle, Assembly Hall and public buildings for conventions. Here are held interdenominational camp-meetings, Chautauqua and conventions of all kinds. C. & P. phone, telegraph, etc.

Two and one-half miles west is Oakland, the county-seat of Garrett County, with an altitude of 2,461 feet above sea level, a neat, clean town amidst picturesque surroundings. C. & P. phone, telegraph, 7 fast trains and 4 accommodation trains daily from Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati on the west, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington on the east.

A town of handsome private residences, of neat church edifices, of banks, of large, well kept stores, State high school, grammar school, splendid public buildings, good hotels, natural gas, electric light, water and sewer system, paved streets, well kept liveries of horses and autos. No saloons or bar rooms. A small city of homes, surrounded by a magnificent farming region.

The B. & O. R. R. Co. sell to these resort towns special season tickets, special time round trip tickts, and a week-end round trip ticket from Baltimore and Washington for $5.00. For particulars on this line write L. A. Rudisill, Sec'y of Garrett County Board of Trade, Oakland, Md.

Perhaps you prefer to travel in an automobile. Oakland is the terminus of Maryland's great State road west from Baltimore. Several hours ride from the first named city to the latter city high up in the mountains. For scenic beauty, for pleasure and freedom of care, the ride is one of a life time.

At Cumberland the old historic National pike is struck and you drive over to Grantsville-on-the-pike. From Frostburg to Oakland you are passing through wonderland. In and among the mountains, over a magnificent public thoroughfare.

The first Garrett county town reached is Grantsville-on-the-pike, beautiful for situation, the home of many vacationists. A charming village, of prosperous, happy, good natured people. Good hotels, large stores, churches, County high school, garage, with auto supplies, and all around the village rich, fertile farms, tilled by prosperous farmers. C. & P. phone and W. U. telegraph service.

A daily auto hack from Frostburg to Grantsville. B. & O. to Cumberland, and W. Md. to Frostburg, or street car line, or W. Md. R. R. from Baltimore to Frostburg.

A good place for tourists to rest or for vacationists to spend their summer.

From Grantsville to Accident, over the State road, 14 miles, via Keyser Ridge and the Cove, is a ride never to be forgotten, full of delight, surprises and enjoyment.

The Cove is among the best works of God and man. Charming, delightful, picturesque, worth traveling many miles to see and enjoy.

Accident, 2,395 feet above sea, is located in the midst of a delightful valley, surrounded by splendid farms and the beautiful homes of well-to-do people. An ideal village to spend a vacation,—for quite, restfulness and peaceful days. Good hotel accommodations, churches, county high school, stores, experienced, successful physicians, and a garage. The nervous prostrated man, the overworked official who need to build up his system will find this the ideal spot.

Over the State road, a 20 mile drive, via McHenry, with beautiful vistas and pleasant surroundings, as you travel to Oakland. Here with comfort, pleasure and delight you can spend the balance of your vacation, visiting Altamont, 2,632 feet above the sea; Backbone Mountain, 3,700 feet elevation; Table Rock and Conneway's Tower, 3,700 feet elevation.

Here you may eat one of Conneway's famous mountain dinners, and once in your life, at least enjoy a meal. Eagle Rock, Swallow Falls, Muddy Creek Falls, etc.

Four garages are at your service, all hours, day or night.

Loch Lynn Heights is only 3 miles distant, an incorporated village, an up-to-date all year country town, with churches, public school, stores, doing nearly $100,000 business a year, plaining mill, grist mill, natural gas, water and sewer system, telephone and telegraph service. The popular Loch Lynn hotel is located here. All B. & O. express trains stop here. (Mountain Lake Park station,) during the summer.

Deer Park village is six miles distant, an incorporated country village, churches, school, stores and happy homes.

All over this resort region farms can be purchased, in large or small tracts, or acre or 5 acre lots can be purchased for Summer home sites. The finest drinking water in the land is to be enjoyed on this mountain summit.

Come and investigate and see that, "the half has not been told."

Enthusiastic Meeting Held at Stone House.

Between 75 and 100 citizens of Garrett County, Salisbury and vicinity met at the Stone House Farm and formed an organization for the purpose of relocating a portion and rebuilding the road leading from the National Pike to the Pennsylvania line. The distance to be worked is about two and one-half miles, and is the most direct route from Salisbury to the National Pike. The road is already in fairly good condition from town to the line, from there the plans laid out are to eliminate several steep grades and needless curves, making it much easier for general use than the present road. Commissioner Fike of Garrett County was present and with a number of the citizens went over the entire road and the changes to be made were thoroughly looked into. The decisions reached all agree will make one of the most beautiful drives in this neighborhood.

After going over the route all gathered at the Stone House. The meeting was called to order by Dr. A. M. Lichty, who in a few well chosen words explained the object of the meeting and nominated Mr. Henry P. Miller, superintendent of the Stone House farm, president, Mr. Miller was unanimously elected.

President Miller having taken the chair the officers were elected: Robt. H. Johnston, Secretary; Albert Reitz, Treasurer of the subscription funds; G. J. Gnagey, vice president.

The president, vice president and the three supervisors met and formed the plans and arranged for carrying on the work, which is to be started as promptly and rushed through as quickly as possible.

There is no doubt of the work going ahead promptly with the five men placed in charge by the meeting. The work has been placed in their hands with the understanding that they should make the road and do it as soon as they could. We are well enough acquainted with them to know that they will carry out the desire of the people that placed them in charge of this work.

The cost of this repairing, above the Garrett County funds available, is to be made up by subscription, every dollar given will be a help, therefore we earnestly hope any one who feels inclined to help will not hesitate to send in any amount they feel like giving.

Commissioner Fike stated that he would give all the assistance possible, that there was something like $400 available for the purpose and if possible he would do better. Dr. Lichty reported almost $100 subscribed together with 19 days labor. Mr. Henry Miller, who has charge of the subscription list in Garrett County, reported something over $50 cash and labor.

Moved by A. M. Lichty, seconded by J. C. Lichliter that a vote of thanks be extended to Commissioner Fike for his interest in this road improvement—carried.

The Day of Days

This Live Adventure Story of a Single Day Grips and Holds the Interest From Start to Finish. Opening Chapters Will Appear Soon. Start "The Day of Days" With the First Chapter :: :: :: :: ::

Will Begin in These Columns Serially Next Week

FROM OAKLAND MARYLAND TO SAN FRANCISCO CALIFORNIA

Notes of the Trip From Salt Lake City to the Golden Gate.

Much might be written about the church of the Latter Day Saints and their peculiar un-American and unscriptural teachings, viz:

The Doctrine of Blood Attonment, which was nothing short of legalized murder. If taught today, it is done in the secrecy of the temples entrance into which no outsider is permited.

The doctrine of polygomy which is no longer publicly preached. What transpires in the "Endowment House," only those of the "faith" know.

The doctrine of tithing,—the source from which the revenue of the church is mostly derived. The big tithing ware houses located here and there, were hives of industry. The great stores, conducted by officials of the church, were largely supplied from these warehouses.

There is a great difference between the Mormonism of today and that of years back, as seen by the general public.

The Utah grown potato is the finest flavored tuber grown, because of irrigation and because of irrigation, vegetables of all kinds are abundant, good and low priced.

Salt Lake City is an up-to-date city of over 50,000 souls, and with all the modern conveniences and "doings." The markets are exceptionally fine.

We will bid "good bye" to Zion and its peculiar people and travel westward, for a visit to the Pacific coast, and a few days sojourn in San Francisco, where today the people of the World are flocking to take a look at the Panama exposition. In a little over an hours ride on the Utah Central R. R., through a rich valley, and yet in view of the snow capped mountains we reach Ogden the junction of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific railroads and the Utah Northern railroad. 'Twas near this city that the iron rails from the East and West were united and a gold spike used to commemorate the occasion.

Ogden is the second largest Mormon city in the State. It is a live town—five railroads meet here to exchange passengers and freight.

At Ogden we take the Central Pacific, in one of the splendid Pullman cars we begin the journey for miles along the Great Salt Lake, then through the barren sandy desert of Nevada, the home of prairie dogs and snakes and owls. Occasionally a small herd of antilope are seen. A long, hot dreary ride, until Reno is reached, an oasis in the desert.

What a relief it was to get out of the car and tramp on mother earth again and exchange the sand hills and plains for a few acres of green sod, trees and the largest town on the main line of the railroad in Nevada. Here the railroad company had a neat station building and hotel, with a fountain playing in front.

A dinner was eaten here, never to be forgotten. There was abundance in variety and in quantity. It was enjoyed. Thirty minutes for dinner. Genuine mountain trout, qenison, bear steak, etc. The service was fine. Plenty of time. The cashier at the stand cried out, "Don't be alarmed I will notify you in plenty of time for your train."

There is no question about getting your money's worth. I fancy I can taste that dinner yet. We pay our 75 cents, leave the feasting and step around out doors, until the conductor cries, "all aboard."

From this on until San Francisco is reached we travel through a different county. The tall mountains disappear each mile traveled. Soon California is reached, but little green grass is seen—only where water is plentiful. The grass has a yellow color because of lack of rain. California is the second largest state of the Union. You could hide several states like Maryland in it and have plenty of room to enjoy life. It is a great agricultural state and its fruits are delicious.

En route to San Francisco we see Sacramento, the capital of the state. Great stacks of wheat and barley are piled up along the railroad tracks, awaiting cars for transportation to market. At the close of the second day we pull into the station at San Francisco.

San Francisco is the metropolis of the Pacific coast of the American continent. It has a splendid harbor, and enjoys an extensive trade with China, Japan, Austria, Mexico, South America, Hawii and Alaska.

Great sugar refineries are located in the city and vicinity. We were there in July and found an overcoat a necessity in the early morning. Through the day it was quite warm.

The feeding of the sea lions, in the bay, was an enjovable sight. The ride through the public park was very pleasant and interesting. Of course a visit had to be made to "Chinatown."

Several transcontinental railroads center here. Travelers from all over the world are met in the hotel lobys. On the streets are the little, persevering, industrious Japs, and John Chinnaman and Lee Hop. San Francisco, as a city, is most interesting and enjovable. The state is the paradise of the world. Orange and lemon groves, fig and olives, grapes, plums, peaches and apricots and berries are abundant.

It is a region of great wealth, magnificent colleges and universities. Old Spanish monastaries and buildings are met with in your travels. It is a land of roses. Flowers everywhere. Valuable forests of redwood, great trees and mammouth grape vines.

When it does rain in California, it rains. There is a rainy season—not of gentle showers, but land soakers, gully washers, and stream overflowing rains.

GETTING READY FOR THE FAIR

Enthusiasm Extends All Over Garrett County.

That the Garrett county Fair for September 29, 30 and October, 1st, 1915, will be one of the greatest events in the history of Garrett county there is no doubt. This is a fact. The people of the county are taking hold of the matter with a determination to out-do all former efforts.

Farmers all over the county are planning for exhibits, and for prize winning exhibits at that.

At this early date space for exhibits has been engaged. If we were surprised in the past, a greater surprise awaits us next fall. There will be a larger and greater exhibit in several respects than heretofore.

Experience is a good teacher. We are learning. The past has taught us good lessons. We know how to do things better than we did two years ago.

Each year Garrett county farmers are improving their grade of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. The farms are showing the results of better farming and a higher grade of products is the result.

We have been informed of some fine chickens that will be placed on exhibition by enthusiastic poultrymen. We expect a very interesting poultry exhibit.

The Fair Association management are diligently at work planning for a great occasion. They are taking hold of the program with a zeal that means success. It is to be a Garrett county fair. An effort is being made to get every election district interested.

The fair is being extensively advertised. Great crowds of people will be attracted to Oakland, greater than was ever before seen in town. People from everywhere will be here.

The fair will be a great advertisement of Garrett county, of its resources, and its advantages. Through its exhibits we will show the outside world what we are doing, the advance we are making.

The splendid State road will attract many automobile parties who will take in the fair and enjoy the magnificent ride over and among the picturesque mountains of the county.

Oakland will have better hotel accomodiations this year than heretofore and be better able to handle the crowds.

The wonderful flying machine will attract the people. The aviator who is to be here is one of the very best in the United States.

There will be three wonderful days, full of interest, and enjoyment. Everything is in our favor this year. The months and weeks from now on will be used in making preparations for this great occasion.

Write to your friends in other parts of the United States to come to the fair, work to make fair week a "Home Coming Week."

Hupmobile

CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Woman Who Drives

One woman who drives a Hupmobile, spoke for all others when she said: "I feel when I am driving the Hupmobile as though I were a part of the car—or as though it were a part of me."

She meant, of course, that the Hupmobile responded immediately to every impulse or direction she gave it.

She meant that it is always as easily and completely under her control as her own movements.

She meant that she always feels safe and sure and secure, because she always knows exactly what the Hupmobile will do under any and all circumstances.

A woman knows, for instance, that the Hupmobile motor will not stall—and because it can not, therefore it's safest.

She knows the turning radius of the Hupmobile is remarkably small for a car of its length. That makes it easy to handle.

With a wheelbase of 119 inches, the Hupmobile will circle in a 40-foot street.

The motor is so flexible that she gets along with a minimum of gear shifting.

The steering is so easy that a child can guide the car almost without effort.

The driving seat is made with a scientific regard for her comfort—with a high, restful back, and the seat cushion tilted at precisely the right angle.

She gives no thought to emergencies which might require repairs, because she knows that repairs are so few and far between that they can safely be forgotten.

The Hupmobile is always a source of pleasure to the woman who drives—or the woman who rides.

That's why in every Hupmobile home there's a woman who is a Hupmobile enthusiast.

Let us give the Hupmobile merit-test at your convenience.

Deducting $1,038,292.00 for corporations paying direct to the State Treasurer leaves the basis $10,569,321.00 which at 32½ cents on each $100.00 makes $34,173.79 and this added, makes the taxes for State and County purposes $169,982.86.

HUTTON.

For a few moments, this beautiful May morning, let us gaze upon Nature's vast arena, and contemplate on the hidden beauties that surround us. True, it can be said, the human mind has been the means of achieving most wonderful inventions, but in comparison to the handiwork of Nature does appear as naught.—What mysteries, are enacted season after season, that to us are incomprehensible.—From the chilling blasts of winter and the apparent tomb of death bursts forth a rich mantle of emerald, dotted with myriads of bright heredy and fragrant flowers, that bathe in the subdued rays of the beautiful May sunshine. Nature calls to us, in the murmuring of the breeze, and the echo of each little songster, repeats again, and again the welcome of the glad spring time. Surely we cannot witness this great panorama without becoming enamored with the scene and very soon the city pavements shall be deserted for the pleasure of our country lanes, for the call of Nature shall be awakened in each and every heart, and from her silent works we may glean a more eloquent sermon then can be preached by mortal man. So let us begin at once like the beautiful flowers to lend the fragrance of our good deeds one to another, which shall be wafted back in the memory of other hearts; when as the spring blossoms, we, too, are long lost in oblivion.

Suggestions To Growers of Seed Potatoes.

AN IDEAL SOIL for potatoes is a well drained, deep, loose loam, well supplied with decayed organic matter, to hold moisture and possible plant food. This soil is seldom found, hence many bushels of potatoes are grown on other soil than this. But the nearer the ideal the better the crop.

WHAT SHOULD YOU SELECT? The piece of ground on your farm nearest to the ideal and then bring it still nearer by your treatment of it from NOW until your crop is HARVESTED.

You will not need much land for this crop which, properly handled, should be a profitable one, so let that be the best on your farm. Select rich well-drained soil—a sod which has had a liberal top dressing of manure in the past year or two. Do not apply any manure NOW unless it is WELL ROTTED. A clover sod is best. NEW ground will do. If this piece was not fall plowed plow at ONCE 8 inches (measured with rule) or not more than one inch deeper than previous plowing. Immediately after, harrow and drag, aud drag and harrow, a disc being far preferable for this work to any other harrow, until a thoroughly pulverised seed bed 5 or 6 inches deep has been obtained. Then continue to go over it once each week with harrow, not more than 2 or 3 inches deep, until planting time middle of June.

For the prorer preparation of seed bed, followed by a constant shallow cultivation, means a storing and conserving of the necessary moisture to make a good crop, even a dry season. And no amount of cultivation after planting can make up for neglect in preparing your seed bed. And remember, neither good seed or good land can take the place of WORK.

Well Worth Consideration.

We want our boys and girls to stay in the country, but there must be some interest and incentive beyond drudgery and monotony to make young people love the farm. The boys' and girls' clubs are helping to provide this interest. The boys and girls are made an essential factor in the home and community life. There is competition and compensation in these clubs and they lead the young mind to the wonderfully interesting problems of agriculture and the benefits to be derived from the materials and opportunities at home. The young people respond and do fine work. In South Carolina 4,540 boys enrolled in the corn clubs produced 56,231 bushels of corn at an average of 41 cents a bushel. Valuing the corn at one dollar a bushel and the boys add $33,000 to the crop wealth of the State. The champion produced 148.4 bushels at 9½ cents a bushel. The result of this boy's method and yields has won for his seed corn the name of "Hall's Improved Mortgage Lifter." It is so recognized by the State Department of Agriculture.

One boy of 15 years, living in the State of Idaho, raised 110 bushels of potatoes on an eighth of an acre, 880 bushels to an acre. Miss Helen Durham, of Davis county, Utah, joined a girls' canning club. She had never canned a quart of fruit in her lite. When the club exhibits were made up she had 99 varieties of canned fruits, greens, vegetables, meat, relishes and catsups. She was awarded a medal as State champion. What other girls can do, our girls can outstrip; we have faith in our own boys and girls. Give them a chance.

VOLUME 40. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1915. NUMBER 12

VETERANS WILL HONOR THEIR DECEASED COMRADES

Annual Memorial Service By G. A. R. Post Sunday, May 30th.

Although a great many veterans have answered the "Long Roll" in recent years, the half-score remaining members of Crook Post, G. A. R. assisted by the Sons of Veterans, are making preparations for the annual observance of Memorial Day on Sunday, May 30th.

Last night a meeting of the Sons of Veterans was held at which quite a number of the membership were present and a program was arranged. The members of the G. A. R. will meet in a room of the First National Bank building at two o'clock on May 30th where they will be joined by the children and civic organizations and march from thence to the cemeteries where the graves of the deceased soldiers will be decorated by details of children.

All who have flowers to donate for the purpose are requested to have them at the Bank building early on Sunday so that they may be properly arranged.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Mountain City Band and probably another organization if the proper arrangements can be made.

New Train Schedule in Effect Sunday

On Sunday, May 23, at 12.01 o'clock the new schedule on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will go into effect. There will be practically no change in the running of the regular trains, No. 11, from New York to Chicago, will be placed in service on the new time table. This train will arrive in Oakland at 3 o'clock a. m. Trains Nos. 47 and 48, are exclusively express trains. No. 48 will stop in Oakland to receive and discharge express matter.

The room formerly occupied by R. A. Davis is being put in shape for Gonder's pool room.

THE MOUNTAIN CITY BAND

Oakland's Crack Musical Organization in Shape.

Oakland's Mountain City band is fully organized, and having regular practice. They have secured the service of Prof. McIllwee, of Keyser, W. Va., a real musician and leader. The band boys are doing excellent work and are enthusiastic over the work. They are certainly making enjoyable music and deserve the largest support of every citizen of Oakland. A town the size of Oakland ought to have a first class band and that is what the Mountain City Band intends to be. We have the material for such a band. Let us loyally stand by the band, and thus boost Garrett county as well as Oakland. Next fall when the time for our big Garrett county fair arrives we will have a Garrett county band to furnish the music.

Garrett County Fair.

There are a number of good reasons why Garrett county should hold an annual fair:

1st—It brings the best live stock of the county together and brings the breeders and buyers together.

2nd—It shows who is growing the best grain and produce and helps these growers to sell seed.

3rd—It furnishes a powerful stimulus to the ordinary farmer to improve his live stock and crops.

4th—It tends to unify the county, to bring distant sections together, and to boost our county.

5th—It furnishes an excellent opportunity for advertising. Already most of the counties of Maryland have fairs. Garrett county holds a fair that is a credit to any county. We do not have the horse racing and fakers that go with so many fairs. What we have is an educational exhibit to show ourselves and others the wonderful possibilities of Garrett county.

Remember the dates September 29, 30 and October 1st, 1915.

Gus Hilleary, of near Gorman, was in town Friday.

MR. J. C. RENNINGER FOR STATE'S ATTORNEY

Mr. T. W. Casteel Also Out for Sheriff. Both Announcements Published

Mr. Julius C. Renninger, for eight years past State's Attorney for Garrett County, is again in the field for renomination, his announcement appearing in the columns of this paper today. During Mr. Renninger's two terms as a public official he has rendered excellent service to the people of Garrett county, devoting his time to the duties of his office and in enforcing the criminal laws of the State. He comes before the voters of the county with a record that cannot be successfully assailed and asks for their suffrages. He has been an active Republican and in the local option fight last fall he rendered valiant service in the cause of temperance. He is eminently qualified by service to fill the office he again seeks.

Mr. Truman W. Casteel is the latest aspirant for the office of Sheriff. Two years ago Mr. Casteel was in the field and he received a vote that was both pleasing and gratifying to himself and his large following of friends and supporters. He is one of Garrett county's largest tax payers and a most excellent citizen. Mr. Casteel has stated that if he is nominated and elected he will give the office his closest personal attention and will enforce the criminal laws without fear or favor.

THE DEATH RECORD.

HENRY RIDDER.

Mr. Henry Ridder, aged more than eighty years, died at his home near Mason school house in District No. 8 Monday morning after an illness of rather short duration, and was buried at Red House on Wednesday. The deceased was a member of McNeill's Rangers during the Civil War and as such was actively engaged with his command in all its movements. He was a member of the Red House Lutheran church and a most excellent citizen.

MRS. HANNAH FRAZEE.

Mrs. Hannah Frazee, wife of Mr. Norman Frazee, of Friendsville. The deceased was a daughter of Sylvester Ryland, and was born at Friendsville April 39th, 1850. When quite young she joined the M. E. church, but after her marriage she and her husband joined the Big Crossings Baptist church, of which she remained a faithful member until the time of her death. One daughter, Elmira, who became the wife of Jefferson VanSickle, was born as a result of the union, and who died several years ago. Mrs. Frazee was a woman of great kindness of heart and will not only be missed by her husband but by all who knew her. After services at the Big Crossings church, conducted by the Rev. A. L. Donachy, her body was laid to rest in the little cemetery by the church.

MRS. MARIE H. PEDDICORD.

Mrs. Marie Helbig Peddicord, wife of Mr. Philip T. Peddicord, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Helbig, died at her home adjoining Oakland Wednesday afternoon, May 19th, aged 26 years, one month and one day. The deceased was suddenly taken ill with acute bright's disease on May 13th and never rallied from the attack. She was married on December 27th, 1910, and is survived by her husband and three children, two boys and a baby girl, the latter being aged eight weeks. The funeral will occur on Friday morning at nine o'clock from St. Peter's Catholic church, of which Mrs. Peddicord was a most consistent member. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved young husband and the motherless little ones in this hour of their extreme sadness.

JOHN B. WAUGH.

John B. Waugh, 78 years of age, living at Narrows Park, Cumberland, dropped dead Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock while mowing his lawn. The over-exertion caused a collapse from which he did not rally. Dr. Thomas W. Koon was quickly called, but pronounced life extinct.

Mr. Waugh was one of Cumberland's first mail carriers, having been in the local department for 36 years, and was on duty yesterday.

He was painstaking and conscientious in all his work, and was universally esteemed and respected. He was a nephew of the late Bishop Beverly Waugh, of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Waugh owned a cottage at Mountain Lake Park and for years has been a regular summer visitor at the Park.

LITTLE BABE DIED FROM AWFUL BURNS

Fatal Accident Befel Infant Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Browning

From the columns of the Grafton Sentinel of Tuesday the following account of the death of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester H. Browning is taken:

A very distressing accident occurred last evening which robbed Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Browning, of Christiana street of their greatest treasure, their little 17-months old baby, Helen Louise. The little girl was alone in one of the rooms of the house yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock, in which a gas fire was burning in a grate. A heavy wire screen was fastened in front of the fire to keep the child out of danger. Suddenly her mother, in another part of the house, was startled to hear the child screaming, and rushing to her, found the little figure wrapped in flames. The clothing was practically burned off the child when its mother reached it, and although she wrapped it quickly in clothing which extinguished any further flames or embers, the little baby was beyond the help of human assistance. The child died at one o'clock this morning. The corner of the wire screen was pulled loose and it is thought that this is how the little child came within reach of the cruel tongues of flame.

Mr. and Mrs. Browning came to Grafton from Oakland last summer and are a young couple who have made many friends here. Mr. Browning is a clerk in Lohr & Hendrickson's store. The remains of the little girl will be taken to Oakland Wednesday afternoon on train No. 16 for interment.

Former Oakland Boy Wedded.

Though the wedding occured nearly a month ago, it only became generally known here that George, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bolden, former of Oakland, but now of Charleston, had been married to Miss Hallie Thomas. The wedding occured during the later part of April. The groom is assistant physical director of the Charleston Y. M. C. A., and is, of course, well known in Oakland where he has frequently visited since the Bolden family went to Charleston. The young lady is a member of one of the most prominent families of the Capital City. Mr. Bolden is now in San Francisco, where he is secretary of the West Virginia commission at the Panama-Pacific exposition and Mrs. Bolden will join him there for the remainder of the summer. George and his bride will make Charleston their home.

Removed to New Location.

Mr. E. A. Weimer is now located in the room formerly occupied by Louis Gortner. Before removing from the old stand Mr. Weimer had the new room thoroughly overhauled. It is now one of the most attractive store rooms in the city. It has an entrance from Second street and from Railroad street. It has three large show windows, in which Mr. Weimer will exhibit his line of goods. The public are invited to call and look over the line of goods now on exhibit; the latest styles and best prices given. The goods that please and give satisfaction are on the shelves. Whether you buy or not call and see the new store. You are cordially invited to do so.

Married.

ARONHALT—LATHRUM—Miss Viola Lathrum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lathrum, of near Red House, and Mr. William Aronhalt, son of Mr. James Aronhalt, of near Bayard, W. Va., were married at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday, May 12th, at noon, by the Rev. A. F. Richardson, pastor of the Grafton Lutheran church. The couple are among the best known young people of the county. They will reside at the home of the groom's father near Bayard.

JOHNSTON--GOLDSBOROUGH--The marriage of Miss Julia Goldsborough, daughter of Mrs. R. K. Goldsborough and the late Dr. Edmund K. Goldsborough, to M. Tilghman Johnston, of Easton, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Goldsborough in Washington. The ceremony was witnessed by the two families only and was followed by a reception. The couple came to Oakland yesterday afternoon and are spending their honeymoon at the summur home of Mrs. Goldsborough on Oak street.

John Davis made a trip through the county Wednesday, going as far as Swanton, advertising some special bargains at J. M. Davis & Sons business house.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS

Weekly Gleanings From The Oakland High School.

On Friday evening, May 14, the senior class was delightfully entertained at the home of Professor and Mrs. Bender. The evening was spent in playing different games. Refreshments were served at a late hour and the guests returned to their homes before the dawn of the next day.

Harold Conneway, John Scott and Ross Isenberg, three senior commercial students, performed some stenographic duties at the office of the School Commissioners on Monday.

Prof. Bender and family and Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Dixon motored to Grantsville Sunday.

The Senior class pennants have arrived and are very popular. They are made up in a beautiful design in the class colors, black and gold. The class pins are expected to arrive soon.

A large United States flag has been presented to the Oakland High School by the members of the Fourth Year class. The flag was raised for the first time Tuesday. It will be dedicated during Commencement week at which time a prominent speaker of Oakland will deliver an address.

Prof. C. J. Tilden, of the Civil Engineering Department of Johns Hopkins University, visited the high school last Thursday and gave us an interesting talk on the preparation for the engineering course in that institution. He pointed out that the most important branches necessary for preparation is not in his mind, physics or mathematics as we usually think, but English and drawing. A good mastery of correct English, distinct and clear-cut drawings are necessary to become a successful engineer. Professor Tilden asserted that a great many of our law suits could be avoided if certain plans in question had been more accurate. He spoke of the scholarships offered by the Johns Hopkins University to high school graduates and explained just what each included. His talk was very much appreciated.

Confirmed A Large Class Tuesday Morning After High Mass.

James Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, and the highest Catholic prelate in the United States, visited Oakland this week, having arrived here Monday afternoon and was driven from the station to the residence of Rev. James E. Connell where he remained as the guest of the local priest until yesterday afternoon when he went east, and will confirm a class at Westernport today.

On Tuesday morning at 7.30 o'clock the Cardinal read the first mass. Directly following the High Mass, which was sung at 10.30 by Rev. James E. Connell, the confirmation ceremonies commenced and a class of about fifty was taken into membership of the local church. The large class to be confirmed was augmented by many adults and the scene as well as the service was most impressive.

All the people desiring to witness the ceremony could not gain entrance to the church.

In the sanctuary assisting the Cardinal were the Very Rev. E. J. Wunder, of Cumberland; Rev. T. E. McGuigan, of Washington; Rev. O. H. McDermott, of Clarksburg; Rev. T. E. Gallagher, of Westernport, and Rev. James E. Connell, of the local church.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Mrs. L. T. Yoder of Pittsburgh, was a week end visitor at the Park, a guest at Haydenhurs.

Mrs. Joseph Rathbun, Mrs. Charles Harvey and Mrs. Edward Friend made a trip to Cumberland Friday in Floyd White's car.

Everybody was disgusted last Friday by the action of the water company in raising the prices of the water rate, and required every consumer to use a meter. The new rate is, "meter service $18 per year for smallest meter, and 30 cents extra for each 1000 gallons of water used." There is a fight on hand. The company will meet with bitter opposition in trying to enforce this rate. The public is not responsible for the blunders the company has made, nor for the shortage of the water supply during August each year. Because of this failure of the water supply the Park has suffered much. People refuse to rent cottages, pay a high water tax and then carry water for all purposes. There is a reason for meter rates. It will fail in bringing about the desired results. The public will be heard from. Forbearance will cease to be a virtue. The matter will be taken before the proper State authorities. Some suggest that an injunction should be prayed for. The attention of the Mountain Lake Park Association will be called to this action of the receivers of the water company. They will be forced to do something or see the season of 1915 a failure. It will seriously effect the rental of property, unless the meter rate be considered $1.50 a month. Then the summer citizens would only pay for the two or three months the water will be used, instead of the yearly rate as now required. We will see what we will see.

Miss Rhoda Welch has a position in the Park postoffice. The clerical force is Miss Hellice Rathbun and Miss Rhoda Welch.

Mr. Gene Comerford and family have returned from their visit with friends in Pennsylvania.

The franchise of the Water Company, if they have a franchise, will expire next year.

This ought to be a prosperous season for the hotels and boarding houses of the Park. Foreign travel shut off the people will want to go some where. There is no better place to spend a summer than the Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Stone, of Wheeling, motored to the Park Monday and are at home in their cottage. Mrs. George Tolson arrived Tuesday.

Mrs. Campbell and daughter, Mrs. Graves and daughter, of Oklahoma, opened up their house Monday.

Next Sunday will be observed by the citizens of the Park as Go to Church Day. Special services have been arranged for in the Methodist church, in which everybody is cordially invited to participate.

Dr. McKain has purchased a Maxwell automobile.

Mrs. Edward Chance was called to Grafton, W. Va., Monday by a telegram announcing that the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Browning was seriously burned and its life was threatened. Tuesday morning word was received that the child had died.

All trains will begin stopping here next Monday.

May.

BY SARA ROBERTA GETTY.

Was there ever a month like lovely May,
When the flowers of spring appear?
While the verdant leaves and blossoms gay
Tell us that summer is near.

The birds sing merrily in the tree
Building nests in their leafy homes.
We hear the hum of busy bees
As they go from flower to flower.

The apple blossoms so pink and white
Fill the air with fragrance sweet
And their petals gleam like stars at night
In the grass beneath their feet.

Can we find anything like lovely May
Though over the world we roam?
The fragrant breeze of a warm spring day
Fills our hearts with thoughts of home.

"The Romney" and "Allen-hurst" are open for guests.

Violets carpet whole areas.
The white violets also appear.
Buttercups spangle the fields with pure gold.
The wild geranium may be found occasionally.
Yellow-hearted daisies are bursting into beauty.
Spring beauties, delicately pink, continue to form dainty little communities.
Wild strawberry, snowy white and golden trefoil, appeal along the roadsides.
Charming wild azaleas form rosy groups in splendid woodland haunts.
Blue-curls or self heal is to be seen nestling almost any place and so is the charming wild forget-me-not.
The above may be seen and enjoyed along the National turnpike.

The meeting of the Somerset County Conference of Allegheny Synod of the Lutheran church, was held in the Grantsville church Monday, Tuesday and Wendesday, 17th, 18th and 19th.

FRIENDSVILLE

The business houses of the village would be a credit to a much larger town. The merchants carry a large stock of goods and meet competition without fear.

The report of the First National bank of this village show the financial condition of this section of Garrett county.

We have a State High school, which is doing a good work, as is shown by its graduates.

Our church houses meet the demands of the village and surrounding country.

The streets and homes are lighted by electricity.

We have two hotels, a garage, with auto supplies.

We have a good brass band, several fraternal organizations and a progressive farming community all about us.

The books of the B. & O. R. R. agent show a good business transacted at this station, both incoming and outgoing.

We have a telephone and telegraph connections with the outside world.

We have no State road, but we live in hopes that some day we may be among the elect and be connected with the county seat by at least a good road of some sort, or an air ship passenger and freight service.

The Garrett County Board of Trade is represented by Hon. N. L. Selby, Clarence V. Guard and F. G. Fox as the Local Committee for District No. 2. This connects us with the Garrett County Boosters and puts us in line for the development of this end of the county.

We are lending to District No. 14, George D. Browning, W. W. Savage, et als to develop the lumber, coal and other resources of the undeveloped territory of that district. We are not only boosters but doers of things as well.

We are keeping up with the march of civilization and have a few candidates for offices at the approaching primaries. They are tried and true men and would fill with credit the positions sought after, both to the county and to themselves.

many organizations will send representatives to report on the progress the College and Experiment Station have made during the past year in promoting agricultural development.

There is probably no time of the year when a greater variety of work can be seen in progress at the Agricultural College and Experiment Station. Crops are sufficiently advanced to show the differences which have been brought out by selection, fertilizing, liming, etc. As a result, the farmer who has been told, for instance, that top dressing of grass lands improves the grass yield, can see for himself the difference between the land on which fertilizer has been applied and that which has been left to make a natural growth. He will also see for himself the results of experiments with wheat, winter oats and other cereals, and will leave the College at the end of the day with a better understanding of the work that is being done for him and for his neighbors.

The men in charge of the various departments will be constantly in attendance and will co-operate with the County Agents and other guides who have been selected, to bring the various lines of work to the attention of visitors. There will be an inspection of the dairy barns, the poultry plant, the Experiment Station green houses, and the hog cholera serum laboratories, where the farmer can gain an idea of what is being done to improve live stock conditions on the farm, to test various feeds for poultry and in the investigating of truck and fruit diseases that we have learned to control by scientific methods of spraying. He will also witness the demonstration of the use of hog cholera serum to prevent the spread of that disease, and it is hoped in many ways he will become familiar with the various methods which the Agricultural College uses for bringing information of value to the attention of the country people of the State.

The picnic lunch to be served by the College authorities, will afford a pleasant opportunity for farmers and farm women from all parts of the State to mingle in a social hour and exchange views concerning the work of the Agricultural College and the development of the rural life of their respective neighborhoods. Farmers' Day affords a splendid opportunity for the rural people of the State to get together and become more strongly a unit in the improvement of agricultural conditions in this State. It is expected that every county in the State will send a strong representative delegation to take part in making the day a red letter occasion in the agricultural history of 1915.

RID THE FARM HOUSE OF THE FLY NUISANCE—CLEAN UP.

T. B. SYMONS,
Maryland Agricultural College.

It is most important to kill the early appearing flies and to remove their breeding places. The task of combating the pest in rural districts around farm houses is largely an individual one and its presence in large numbers or to a limited extent will depend upon the sanitary conditions that are maintained around the house and barn.

Since house flies may carry germs of typhoid fever, dysentery, tuberculosis and other diseases, we would do well to observe the following rules:

1. Keep flies from breeding (a) by hauling stable manure out each day and scattering it immediately over the fields, or (b) by putting the manure in a vault or screened room.
2. Keep all outhouses from breeding or contaminating flies.
3. Keep all filth and garbage in closed receptacles.
4. Screen all foods exposed for sale.
5. Do not let flies come in contact with food.
6. Screen all doors and windows, especially those of kitchens and dining rooms.
7. Notify the Health Department at once of a nuisance in your neighborhood.
8. Let all unite in fighting the pest.

More than 10% of all Cement Used in the United States is

250,000 BARRELS 1898

7,064,000 BARRELS 1906

OVER 12,000,000 BARRELS CAPACITY 1915

Consider these facts about the National Cement:

Starting in 1898 with one mill having a yearly capacity of 250,000 barrels of Lehigh Cement, we have grown to the extent of twelve mills located throughout the country for quick distribution to our customers, capable of producing over 12,000,000 barrels annually.

This is the Cement age—in the United States yearly the consumption is ONE BARREL FOR EVERY PERSON—cement is used everywhere—for every conceivable purpose.

Cement has made possible the world's greatest engineering triumphs—canals—dams—irrigation projects—subways, etc. It enters into the construction of our homes—factories—public buildings—garages—streets—roads—sidewalks—bridges—railroads—piers—etc. The farmer uses it for barns—floors—silos—cisterns—water troughs—fence posts—etc.

Cement makes possible fireproof concrete construction and will last forever. Directly or indirectly every person in the United States uses cement. You should know of the adaptability of cement construction.

You should know about Lehigh, and the reasons which make it the National Cement—WHY 10% of all the cement used in the United States is LEHIGH, the remaining nine-tenths being manufactured by over one hundred other companies.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Refuge of Lies.

NUMBER FIVE.

Another false refuge is the "Short Bed," that Isaiah speaks of.

Human nature, proud and self sufficient makes its refuge and hides under falsehoods—false refuges that are like a short bed and narrow covering. That is the kind of a nest they are in who say, there is no God. He may try to persuade himself that it is true but the evidence is so strong, so convincing that few can doubt and fewer still can disbelieve. Only the fool hath said in his heart, there is no God. His neighbor is in a short bed and under a narrow covering who says, there is a God but there is no future.

Death ends all. We go to sleep in death never to waken. Annihilation! No feeling, no consciousness beyond the grave! Futile hope! We must live, we will live, if for no other reason, than to be punished for our sins. You can't blot out the idea of immortality from our natures.

There is a future and we know it. Another says we can't know anything about our future. Well, we ought to know. God means we shall, so he has given opportunities and means. Another claims we don't know the Bible is true. You ought to. You know you have a soul to save and that there is but one Saviour of sinners.

Ignorance is no excuse for we can inform ourselves if we will. Another says, you are all wrong. I am right, we will all be saved. His is the bed of universal salvation. Men want to be happy yet hold on to sin for they love it. They hope for heaven that they may be happy. But the hope of heaven and the practice of sin are incompatible. Sin produces uneasiness and yet men love it and still desire to be happy.

So they persuade themselves that they will be saved. Is it true that all will be saved? No, it is unreasonable. It is against common sense which dictates that the guilty be punished. But do you claim they are punished in this life according to their deserts? If so, then the very guilty must suffer much and all according to their degree of their guilt. The infant has spasms when teething, or screams with pain, or suffers intensely before dying. It is suffering for its sins. When did it sin, or what is its guilt? Here is a poor honest man who has done right and served God as best he could. But he is sorely afflicted, may be deaf, blind, at times his reason is obscured. Your principle makes him a notorious sinner. His neighbor has cheated, lied, defrauded, neither feared God nor regarded man, yet he is prosperous and seems to be happy. Is his prosperity his punishment?

Yet you pity the poor man who you claim is suffering for his sins. That is just and you ought to take God's part. Consistency with your doctrine destroys all sympathy for suffering humanity. Such a principle is contrary to the constitution of our natures. If such a theory is true then Lot's wife who was cut off in the act of disobedience, went right to heaven. If she was punished as much as she deserved she entered heaven when those loathsome and vile Sodomites had gone, or even then going. While poor Lot who vexed his righteous soul at the filthy conversation of the wicked was doomed to continue in this sinful world. And Judas swung to heaven at the end of a rope, and the Spanish pirates who were hung at Boston swung from scaffold the into glory and were embraced by Peter.

If the universal salvation bed is long enough for a man to stretch himself in then heaven is full of thieves and murderers, yes, all the vile of the earth and they enlisted too, irrespective of the atonement of Jesus. They can't sing the song of redeeming love; they can't offer praise to the Lamb that was slain for they suffered for their own sins, satisfied the demands of justice and are their own Saviour. The devil himself would be happy in such a heaven.

We may hide behind the faults of others as if this justified our wrong doings or were any just ground for neglect of duty. Some plead want of time as if religion were not the first concern and the most important of all and as if they had not plenty of time for this purpose.

I am trying to do my best is another delusion urged to by the ones who refuse to do anything for Christ or let Him do anything for them. Hide if you will, in false refuges, God will make judgment the live and the hail shall sweep away the refuges of lies. All refuges into which men flee for safety or peace shall be swept away in the dying hour. When we face our last enemy, the mental vision becomes clear, the moral sense keen and honesty of spirit throws off the mask which is worse than useless. Self righteousness is a worthless defence. A great queen who had Bishops at her bidding and was a defender of the faith felt this when she died in fearful alarm. In the resurrection what of the refuges of lies. There will be but two classes. Only the righteous will have a part in the first resurrection; others will rise up with shame and utter confusion at the destruction of their refuges. Who shall be able to stand before Him and who can face the wrath of the Lamb. The Christian, the one who is united to Christ. Refuges of lies swept away. Awful reality. Hope gone. Doom comes and amidst weeping and gnashing of teeth they go away into everlasting punishment. Amidst the breathless awe of the hosts of heaven, the angels will bind them hand and foot and cast them into the lake of fire.

Pretenses, pleas, stratagems entreaties are wasted for God has swept away the refuges of lies.

Beware of the schemes of satan. There is but one safe refuge—Christ. He is your only hope for He alone can deliver. He is a complete, an all sufficient Saviour. He is offered to all. Whosoever will may come. Him that cometh will not be cast out. This is our refuge. Choose now. The storm is coming which will try every man's works. Do you build on sand or wait till the storm comes then will be the end of all preparation. Be wise, o reader, and prepare now to meet thy God. Sheltered in Jesus you are safe for no one is able to pluck you out of His hand. But the hail shall sweep away the refuges of lies.

FROM OAKLAND TO THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

A Description of the Trip Made By Marylanders.

SECOND LETTER.

We left Newton Kansas, May 8, at 2-30 p. m. The first 112 miles was made in just two hours, without a stop.

The first stop was to take water at Bellpre, Kan. Here we saw our first Indians. This is the center of the wheat and corn belt. The population of this town is 700. There were one and one-fourth million dollars worth of farm products shipped from this town last year. From Newton to Dodge City is as fine country as one would care to see. The farms are large, with very small houses and stables. All the houses are but one story. Here is where you can see as far as "your eye will let you look." Crops are looking very fine, for the time of year. Wheat and corn are the principal crops. We saw quite a number of cattle and mules. I would guess that between the two places mentioned, there are a million or more stacks of straw and it seems that their method of getting rid of it, is to burn it. We saw quite a number of stacks burning while passing through. We also saw quite a number of Jack rabbits in Kansas.

We arrived at Dodge City at 5-50 p. m. Had dinner at one of the famous Harvey restuarants. We left Dodge City at 6-45 and woke up in Mew Mexico. We arrived at Los Vegas, New Mexico at 8 a. m., Sunday morning, where we found breakfast waiting us, which we all enjoyed very much.

Los Vegas is a city 6,398 feet above sea level and right back of there is a mountain peak 14,176 feet high, it is called Baldy Peak. We left Los Vegas at 8-50 a. m. About 22 miles from Los Vegas we passed "Starvation Peak." 9,500 feet high, it is a very small peak and during the Indian troubles, there were about 100 whites driven on top of this peak by the Indians who surrounded them and starved them out. This is the reason it is called Starvation Peak.

The scenery through New Mexico is very fine, but it is a barren country indeed. Here and there you see a small settlement, mostly Mexicans, and nearly all mud huts. We passed through a number of small Mexican villages in which the houses were all built of mud. There are some fine prairie country through here, but not much vegetation.

Before reaching Albuquerque we passed through a real Indian settlement. They have some cows and quite a number of ponies. All day Sunday we could see the white capped mountains in the distance. At Albuquerque the thermometer registered about 75degrees in the shade, and twenty miles distance the mountain peaks are covered with snow and ice. We arrived at Albuquerque at 1-15 p. m., where we had lunch. Left there at 3 p. m., and at 3-20 we crossed the Rio Grande River and passed through another mud village. At 5 p. m., we had a very impressive service, conducted by His Excellency, Governor Goldsborough. The services opened by singing, "Nearer My God to Thee," and closed by singing, "Lead Kindly, Light."

After the services ceased we passed through the Lava beds, where there are thousands of acres covered with lava which flowed from the mountain side during the eruption.

Some time ago a young lady went over this route, she was one of the very inquisitive kind and asked the conductor a great many questions. While passing through the lava beds she said to the conductor that it must have been awful hot when this lava run down the mountain. He replied, yes, indeed, it was so hot they couldn't run a train past it for five days.

At 6-40 p. m., we crossed the continental divide, 7,248 feet above sea level, one side of this divide the water flows to the Pacific Ocean and on the other side to the Atlantic. Passing through this prairie we saw quite a number of pairie dogs. This country is settled by the Mexicans and Indians.

We arrived at Gallup at 7-10 p. m., where we were served dinner, at one of the Harvey restaurants. We left Gallup at 8 p. m., and arrived at the Grand Canyon Monday morning. We had breakfast at the El Tovar hotel.

Quite a number of our party was disappointed in not getting a burrow—to ride down the Brightaugee Trail to the bottom of this Great Caynon. About 15 of our party went down the trail, it is 7 miles down to the bottom.

This Canyon is indescribable, I mean by this no one can form any idea of this sight without seeing it. You can read the discription and study all the geographys you can get and, yet you can form no idea of it.

It is one mile deep, from 4 to 20 miles wide and 217 miles long. The rest of our party who did not go down the trail took the Hermit Trail drive, along the rim of the canyon. At several places the road is not more than 10 feet from the edge of the rocks, where you can look straight down one mile. We had a 15 mile drive, returned at 1:15, took lunch and the afternoon was spent by our party writing letters, sending cards and sight seeing around the Hotel and the Indian Hotel, which is about 100 yards from the El Tovar hotel. The Bright Angel Trail is 7 miles down to the Colorado river, and drops one mile. So you can imagine that it is very steep. This is a delightful day, every one in the party seems to be enjoying the trip.

The Governors eldest son has not been very well for several days, but is improving, and we hope will be in his usual health soon. We will leave here at 8 p. m.

MCHENRY

Boosting Garrett county is all right. It is the proper thing to do. It is worth boosting 365 days in the year. It is a growing county. Go where you will and see this statement proven by new farm houses, farm buildings and new clearings.

We of McHenry want to boost our village. It is not a dead place by any means. There are signs all about us of a healthful growth.

We have a church building used by the Methodists and United Brethren, a public school house and two stores and several dwelling houses.

The farming land surrounding the village shows the results of good farming and tells of prosperous farmers. The homes, barns and outbuildings indicate farming for profit.

From here to Bittinger is much land that ought to be opened up into small farms of 50 or 60 acres and put into cultivation. There are a number of fine farms on this road.

Riding from here to Bittinger one sees many splendid barns, well painted; cheerful and inviting farm houses, and an industrious people.

Bittinger is one of Garrett county's wide awake localities. It has two stores, meeting house, school house and a number of happy homes.

The county roads from McHenry to Bittinger are being improved each year, but we need the State road continued from this place via Bittinger to Grantsville. A goood thing should be passed around.

The farmers are putting in large crops. The orchards are full of blossoms, which promise an abundant fruit year.

Quite a large number of sheep are found all around this village. The crop of lambs is fine. Wool clipping is in progress.

We have the automobile fever. You will find the Ford car everywhere. These cars afford much pleasure to the farmer and his family when the week's work is done. It puts Oakland only 35 minutes away from us.

Mr. Editor, we are not kickers, we are boosters and our people are joining the booster's club.

Merchant Railey took a day off and visited Oakland last Saturday.

SAFE and sane Americanism is the best.

GREAT is peace and America is her prophet.

WE would feel safer if our navy was being renewed instead of reviewed.

STILL, the country has much to be thankful for—Congress is not in session.

THE present extremity is a time when "none is for the party; and all are for the state."

"HOME, sweet home!" More than ever Americans will realize that "there is no place like home."

WHEN some reformers seek good in their town they bandage their eyes. But when they seek secret vice in their town they carry a magnifying glass.

ONE of the Baltimore Democratic contemporaries throws out the question: "Will Wilson run." Well, when he sees the election returns we think he will.

IF the President feels the need of aid in keeping the one-term pledge, he can find plenty of help among the millions of men who are out of other useful occupation.

IT is hard to make some people understand that a kind word and a pat on the back are appreciated more by a live man than a lot of flowers are appreciated by a dead man.

"IT's a great navy we have, isn't it?" said Josephus Daniels to Admiral Fiske. "Yes, it isn't," answered the admiral. And now there is a vacancy in the admiral's job.

NOT an unpathetic incident of the Lusitania outrage is the fact that $100,000 of Belgian relief money, contributed by this country, is in the ship's safe at the bottom of the sea.

PRESIDENT Wilson in his Philadelphia speech to naturalized citizens citizens carried out the idea that while the United States is "many as the billows" it should be "one as the sea."

IN 1904 the United States imported only $4,000,000 worth of meat and dairy products, whereas, in 1914 under Democratic free trade, such imports totaled $52,000,000 and an increased price in meats.

"No man," declares the Springfield (Ohio) News, "can predict what will happen politically in this country next year." Nevertheless and notwithstanding, we are rash enough to prophesy the triumph of the Republican party.

THE President has protested to the German nation. There is no presentation of the position of the United States, but there is an unspelled note of warning as to what will happen if Germany ignores our claim, and the people are with the President.

All the custodian staffs of Federal buildings will lose eight days pay, because of insufficiency of appropriations by Congress, affecting 4,500 employes. This hits a class who can ill afford a loss. But the idea of that extravagant Congress overlooking a bet like this.

THE Spanish government is so much concerned over the scarcity of coal that the cabinet is willing to guarantee the payment of orders placed in the United States by opening a credit in New York to the amount of at least $200,000. This deposit will be maintained as long as necessary.

THAT the State Tax Commission exceeded its authority under the act creating it in appointing two attorneys—State Senator William W. Beck and E. M. Hammond—was decided in an opinion handed down Wednesday by the Maryland Court of Appeals in Annapolis. The commission, in the words of the act was authorized to appoint "an attorney" and the court held that this did not give the authority to appoint two.

THE United States Department of Agriculture has published statistics that show that last year 14,953 car loads of strawberries were shipped and that of this number, 2,312 cars were shipped from California. Its nearest competitor was Tennessee, with 1,571 cars. The report disclosed that the most important commercial strawberry districts are Central California, Tennessee, Maryland, Delaware, Southern Louisiana, North and South Carolina, Virginia and Missouri.

BUSINESS AND POLITICS.

Confidence in Republican success next year is based largely on the belief that business, big and little, is against the democracy, and will improve the opportunity to declare itself at the polls. The depression of the past two years has created a longing for a change.

Business did not elect Mr. Wilson. It was not in favor of his election. But it was powerless in the face of the Republican division. As it could not heal that, it was obliged to accept the result at the polls, which brought in the minority party by a minority vote. The wrangling Republican politicians, and not the bussiness men, were responsible for what took place in November, 1912.

Since then business has had "a time of it." Hence the assertion that at the polls next year business of all kinds and decrees will register itself in favor of a change.—Washington Star.

A PERTINENT INQUIRY.

The Cecil Whig in a letter to the Westchester County Democratic Club on the occasion of its annual dinner in New York city, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo gave a summary of the work of the Wilson administration and, among other things, said that "Prosperity has been restored." Would it not be appropriate to inquire when prosperity was lost? The Democratic administration took charge of the affairs of the United States government at a time when prosperity was at its height. If the adoption of Democratic economic policies in government had the effect of destroying the prosperity which then existed, what possible credit can the Democratic administration claim for "restoring" that which it had already destroyed? Even though it should succeed in bringing the industrial affairs of the United States to the high plane which they formerly occupied, is not the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury an unqalified admission that at least the Democratic party has deprived the American people of a large part of their industrial prosperity for a period of several years. The promise of the Democrats during the 1912 campaign was that the American industry would not be injured. Its plea, after a lapse of two and a half years, that prosperity has been "restored" is an admission that its campaign pledge was violated.

THE "HORRIBLE MESS"

When the raid on the United States Treasury was at its height in the recent spendthrift Congress, Mr. Fitzgerald, the Democratic chairman of the Appropriations Committee, characterized the conditions as "a horrible mess." As indicating the inefficiency of that Congress, an amusing situation confronts the Treasury in the disclosure that the appropriations are $100,000 short of the necessary sum to meet the wages of the janitors, watchmen and scrubwomen of the Federal buildings of the country. That is, this is amusing to everybody except the employes who are affected by this remarkable oversight. And isn't it just too wonderful for anything that the profligate Congress missed this chance of adding a comfortable lump sum to its extravagant record?

It is pitiful, because this error works a hardship on those least able to bear a loss of wages, for that is what the Treasury Department proposes to inflict on them for the omissional sins of Congress. It will be noticed that that body took good care to have no deficiency in the appropriations for the big salaried positions. This deficiency will affect several thousand of the humblest employes in the service, and to get around the dilemma the Treasury Department proposes to lay off the janitors, watchmen and scrubwomen for eight days, four days in this month and four days in June, and everything will go along as merry as usual. But is it possible that no one is to janitor, no one is to watch and no one is to scrub during the hiatus? If there is a finer instance of saving at the spigot and wasting at the bunghole, we should like to hear of it, with accompanying affidavits.

The Board of County School Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, has sent to all of the teachers of the county the announcement of the opening of the Summer Normal School which is to be conducted at Oakland, Maryland, from Monday, June 7th, until Friday, July 23d, the same to be followed by the examination of applicants for teacher's certificates, which examination is to be held Monday and Tuesday, July 26th and 27th.

The school is intended primarily for the instruction and advancement of the teaching force of this county. The Model School which will have in attendance first, second and third grade pupils. It is planned that this Model School shall have about thirty children in it and it is to be taught by Miss Brust, and the teachers who attend the Summer Normal School are to observe Miss Brust's methods of instruction and they themselves shall be called upon to teach under Miss Brust's supervision. This is a most excellent practical method for the advancement of the teachers of Garrett County. During the four remaining weeks of the Summer Normal School, Dr. Arthur H. Harrop will have charge of the Normal School, Dr. Arthur H. Harrop will follow the same general line of instruction that Miss Brust shall have prosecuted, but shall vary from her work somewhat in that he will take up methods of instruction of more advanced pupils, his work including particularly class work in Geometry, English Grammar, United States History and School Management and Psychology.

MISS HULDAH BRUST.

work of the school as outlined in the announcement, will pay especial attention to those branches in which the school authorities of this county feel that there is special need for improvement. This involves better work in reading, writing, grammar and arithmetic. The instructors who have been engaged for the work are: Mr. C. Edward Bender, principal of the Oakland High School; Mr. Hermann A. Ziel, principal of the Kitzmiller High School, and Mr. F. Ross Isenberg, a member of the present graduating class of the Oakland High School. The Academic course of the Summer Normal School will be in charge of these three instructors, Mr. Isenberg specializing in instruction in writing. The Teachers' Training Course is the name of the second division of the school and this involves instruction in methods of teaching and correct government of the school. This course will be in charge.

for the first three weeks of the school, of Miss Huldah Brust, of the primary school, of Frederick, Maryland. Many of the teachers of Garrett county will remember Miss Brust with pleasure, for she was engaged in this county in a somewhat less important capacity two years ago. In connection with Miss Brust's work there will be conducted a

(2) To enable teachers already holding certificates to meet the conditions of the County Department of Public Education for their renewal.

(3) To enable teachers who have not been able otherwise to secure professional training to pursue professional work in edecation.

(4) To enable teachers holding a low grade certificate to work during the vacation for a certificate of higher grade, longer term and larger compensation.

(5) To enable teachers who desire to do so to specialize in any particular subject.

(6) To enable teachers to follow their chosen vocation regularly and at the same time in vacation to prepare themselves more nearly to meet the accepted standards of academic and professional preparation for the grade of work in which they may be engaged.

(7) To liberalize the mind of the teacher, enlarge her conception of the work, magnify its importance and in general to broaden her outlook, inspire her to higher endeavor and to add strength to whatever natural and personal gifts she may possess.

(8) To dispense with the former County Institute for teachers; for under an Act of the General Assembly of 1914 approved summer normal schools may be held in lieu thereof and the one to be conducted at Oakland has, as stated, been approved.

(9) To enable the public schools of the county to be in session one week more, this being possible in view of the fact that there is to be no county institute as heretofore, which has always been reported and counted as a week of school.

(10) To enable the teachers of experience and those who are taking up the work for the first time to acquire a knowledge of subject-matter broader than the curriculum which is to be taught.

This Summer Normal School is a decided step forward for the school system of this county and the results thereof should be manifested by more satisfactory results upon the part of our teachers. The teachers of our county can not attain the highest results unless they have before them as their guiding purpose growth in knowledge and in professional ability. The teacher preserves her learning and mental powers only by incresing them. The true teacher never thinks her education complete, but is always seeking to add to her own knowledge. Growth is the law of her being. We were all put here to grow and we ought to grow.

Instead of proving a physical and mental burden to teachers, the Summer Normal School should on account of change of altitude and work become a profitable means of recreation and relaxation as well as providing an opportunity for increasing the teacher's personal income.

PROLOGUE.

"It breaks the speed limit to smithereens."

That's a candid opinion about this story. There may have been swifter tales, but not recently. It's an aeroplane of a yarn, moving so fast that you lose your breath while you follow it. But you don't need any breath, anyway, because you forget about respiration with your eyes on reading of this kind.

Every man has his day of days. Yours may have come and you may be swimming in the full tide of fortune. If so, read how P. Sybarite found his. If your own ship is still in the offing, you will enjoy learning how the little spunky red headed bookkeeper won a fortune and an heiress, foiled all his enemies and had some of the most amazing adventures ever penned—all in less time than it takes the hour hand to round the clock dial twice.

CHAPTER I.

The Dub.

"SMELL." P. Sybarite mused aloud.

For an instant he was silent in depression. Then with extraordinary vehemence he continued, crescendo, "Stupid-stagnant-sepulchral-sempiternally-sticky smell!"

He paused for both breath and words, pondered with bended head, knitting his brows forbiddingly.

"Stench!" he perorated in a voice tremulous with emotion.

Even that comprehensive monosyllable was far from satisfactory.

"Oh, what's the use?" P. Sybarite despaired. His mother tongue itself seemed poverty stricken, his native wit inadequate.

Perched on the polished seat of a very tall stool, his slender legs fraternizing with its legs in apparently inextricable intimacy, sharp elbows digging into the nickel and ink stained bed of a counting house desk, chin some six inches above the pages of a huge leather covered ledger, hair rumpled and fretful, mouth doleful, eyes disconsolate—he gloomed—

On this, the eve of his thirty-second birthday and likewise the tenth anniversary of his servitude, the appearance of P. Sybarite was elaborately normal—varying, as it did, but slightly from one year's end to the other.

His occupation had fitted his head and shoulders with a deceptive but none the less perennial stoop. His means had endowed him with a single outworn suit of ready made clothing.

The ruddy brown hair thatching his well modeled head, his sanguine coloring, friendly blue eyes and mobile lips suggesting Irish lineage, and his hands which, though thin and clouded with smears of ink, were strong and graceful like the slender feet in his shabby shoes, carried out the suggestion with an added hint of gentle blood.

The place was the counting room in the warehouse of Messrs. Whigham & Wimper, hides and skins.

The warehouse—impregnable lair of the smell, from which it leered smug defiance at the sea sweet atmosphere of the lower city on a sunny April Saturday afternoon—occupied a walled in arch of the Brooklyn bridge, fronting on Frankfort street, New York.

Immured in this retreat, P. Sybarite was very much shut away from all joy of living—alone with his $15 job (which at present nothing pressed), with giant despair and its interlocutor ennui, and with that blatant, brutish, implacable smell of smells.

To all of these, abruptly and with ceremony, Mr. George Bross, shipping clerk, introduced himself, a brawny young man in shirt sleeves, wearing a visorless cap of soiled linen. In one hand he carried an envelope.

"Oh, you"—said George, and checked to enjoy a rude giggle. Presently he controlled his mirth sufficiently to permit of unctuous enunciation of the following cryptic exclamation:

"Oh, you, Perceval!"

P. Sybarite turned pale.

"You little rascal!" continued George, brandishing the envelope. "You're a sly one, you are, always signin' your name 'P. Sybarite' and pretendin' your maiden monaker was 'Pete.' But now we know you. Take off them whiskers—Perceval!"

A really wise mind reader would have called a policeman then and there, for mayhem was the least of the crimes contemplated by P. Sybarite.

"If that letter's for me," he said quietly, "give it here, please."

"Special d'liv'ry—jus' come," announced George. "Oh, you Perceval—Esquire!"

The letter was torn rudely from his grasp.

"Here!" he cried resentfully. "Where's your manners—Perceval!"

Dumb with impotent rage, P. Sybarite climbed back on his stool, while George sat down at his desk and, with a leer, watched the bookkeeper carefully slit the envelope and withdraw its inclosures.

My Dear Perceval—Mother and I had planned to take some friends to the theater tonight and bought a box for the Knickerbocker several weeks ago, but now we have decided to go to Mrs. Hadley-Owen's post Lenten masquerade ball instead, and as none of our friends can use the tickets I thought possibly you might like them. They say Otis Skinner is wonderful. Of course you may not care to sit in a stage box without a dress suit, but perhaps you won't mind. If you do maybe you know somebody else who could go properly dressed. Your affectionate cousin, MAE ALYS.

Drawing to him one of the Whigham & Wimper letterheads, P. Sybarite dipped a pen, considered briefly, and wrote rapidly and freely in a minute hand:

My Dear Mae Alys—Every man has his price. You know mine. Pocketing false pride, I accept your bounty with all the gratitude and humility becoming in a poor relation. And if arrested for appearing in the box without evening clothes I promise solemnly to brazen it out, pretend that I bought the tickets myself or stole them and keep the newspapers ignorant of our kinship. Fear not, trust me and enjoy the masque as much as I mean to enjoy the play.

And if you would do me the greatest of favors, should you ever again find an excuse to write me on any matter, please address me by the initials of my ridiculous first name only. It is, of course, impossible for me to live down the deep damnation of having been born a Sybarite, but the indulgence of my friends can save me the further degradation of being known as a Perceval.

With thanks renewed and profound, I remain, all things considered, remotely yours, P. SYBARITE.

This he sealed and addressed in a stamped envelope; then he slued round on his stool to blink pensively at Mr. Bross.

That gentleman having some time since despaired of any response to his persistent baiting was now preoccupied with a hand mirror and endeavoring to erase the smudge of marking ink from his face with a handkerchief.

"It's no use, George," observed P. Sybarite presently. Try soap and water. I know it's painful, but, believe me, it's the only way. I'm going to shut up shop in just five minutes, and if you don't want to show yourself on the street looking like a difference of opinion between a bull calf and a fountain pen"—

"Gotcha," interrupted George, rising and putting away handkerchief and mirror. "I'll drown myself if you say so. Anythin's better'n letting you talk me to death."

"One thing more."

Splashing vigorously at the stationary wash stand, George looked gloomily over his shoulder and in sepulchral accents uttered the one word:

"Shoot!"

"How would you like to go to the theater tonight?"

"I'd like it so hard," George replied, "that I'm already dated up for an evenin' of intellect'l enjoyment. Me and Sammy Holt's goin' round to Miner's Eight' avenoo and bust up the show."

"I mean a regular show, at a Broadway house."

"Quit your kiddin'," countered Mr. Bross indulgently. "Come along; I got an engagement to walk home and save a nickel, and so've you."

"Wait a minute," insisted P. Sybarite, without moving. "I'm in earnest about this. I offer you a seat in a stage box at the Knickerbocker theater tonight to see Otis Skinner in 'Kismet,' with Miss Prim, Miss Lessing and myself—on one condition."

"Go to it."

"You must promise me to quit calling me Perceval, here or any place else, today and forever! And never tell anybody, either."

George hesitated.

"And what if I keep on?"

"Then I'll make up my theater party without you—and break your neck into the bargain," said P. Sybarite.

"You?" George laughed derisively. "You break my neck? Can the comedy, beau. Why, I could eat you alive, Perceval."

"We're going to settle this question before you leave this warehouse. I won't be called Perceval by you or any other pink eared cross between Balaam's ass and a laughing hyena."

Mr. Bross gaped with resentment.

"You won't, eh?" he said stridently. "I like to know what you're going to do to stop me, Perc"—

P. Sybarite stepped quickly toward him, and George, with a growl, threw out his hands in a manner based upon a somewhat hazy conception of the formula of self defense. Then—

George Bross sat up on the dusty, grimy floor, batted his eyes, ruefully rubbed the back of his head and marveled at the reverberations inside it.

"Say," he ejaculated, with fervid feeling, "did you do that to me?"

"I did," returned P. Sybarite curtly. "Want me to prove it?"

"Plenty, thanks," returned the shipping clerk morosely as he picked himself up and dusted off his clothing. "Gee, you got a wallop like the kick of a mule, Per"—

"Cut that!"

"P. S., I mean," George amended hastily. "Why didn't you ever tell me you was the Big Smoke's sparrin' partner?"

"I'm not and never was, and furthermore I didn't hit you," replied P. Sybarite. "All I did was to let you fall over my foot and bump your head on the floor. Better accept my offer and be friends."

"Never call you Per"—

"Don't say it!"

"Oh, all right—all right," George agreed plaintively. "And if I promise I'm in on that theater party?"

"That's my offer."

"It's hard," George sighed regretfully. "But whatever you say goes. I'll keep your secret."

"Good!" P. Sybarite extended one of his small, delicately modeled hands. "Shake," said he, smiling wistfully.

P. Sybarite and Mr. Bross, with at least every outward semblance of complete amity were presently swinging shoulder to shoulder up the sunny side of lower Broadway.

"Lis'n," George interjected of a sudden. "I wanna know where you picked up all that classy footwork?"

"Oh," returned P. S. carelessly, "I used to spar a bit with the fellows when I was at—ah—when I was younger."

"Huh! You mean when you was at colledge."

"Please yourself," said P. Sybarite wearily.

"Well, you was at colledge once, wasn't you?"

"I was," P. S. admitted with reluctance, "but I never graduated. When I was twenty-one I had to quit to go to work for Whigham & Wimper."

"G'wan!" commented the other. "They ain't been in business twenty years."

"I'm only thirty-one."

"More news for Sweeney. You'll never see forty again. Your people had money, didn't they, once?"

"I've been told so, but if true it only goes to prove there's nothing in the theory of heredity."

"I gotcha," announced Bross, upon prolonged and painful analysis.

"How?" asked P. Sybarite, who had fallen to thinking of other matters.

"I mean, I just dropped to your high sign to mind my own business. All right, P. S. Far be it from me to wanta pry into your past."

He was a man of his word, was George Bross; not for anything would he have gone back on his promise to keep secret that afternoon's titillating discovery; likewise he was a covetous soul, loath to forfeit the promised treat, but one way or another, that day's humiliation must be balanced.

How to compass this desire, frankly puzzled him. It were cowardly to contemplate knocking the block off'n P. Sybarite, the disparity of their statures forbade; moreover, George entertained a vexatious suspicion that P. Sybarite's explanation on his recent downfall had not been altogether disingenuous.

Suddenly it was borne in upon the shipping clerk that in the probable arrangement of the proposed party he would be expected to dance attendance upon Miss Violet Prim, leaving P. Sybarite free to devote himself to Miss Lessing. And he scowled darkly.

"Say, did you do that to me?"

"P. S.'s got his nerve with him," he protested privately, "to cop out the one pippin in the house all for his lonely. It's a wonder he wouldn't slip her a chanct to enjoy herself with summon her own age.

"Not," he admitted ruefully, "that I'd find it healthy to pull any rough stuff with Vi lookin' on."

Then he made an end to envy for the time being, and turned his attention to more pressing concerns. And when, at Thirty-eighth street, the latter made an excuse to part with George, instead of going home in his company, the shipping clerk was too thoroughly disgusted to question the subterfuge.

Turning west, he was presently prompted by that arch comedian Destiny (disguised as thirst) to drop into Clancy's for a shell of beer.

Now, in Clancy's George found a crumpled copy of an evening paper almost afloat on the high tide of the dregs drenched bar. Rescuing the sheet, he smoothed it out and contemplated a two column reproduction in a coarse half tone of a photograph entitled "Marian Blessington."

Slowly the confusion and confounding of P. Sybarite took shape and matured.

He left Clancy's presently, stepping high, with a mind elate, foretasting victory.

Meanwhile, P. Sybarite walked slowly on up Broadway a little way, then doubled on his trail, going softly until a swift and stealthy survey westward from the corner of Thirty-eighth street assured him that George was not skulking to spy upon him. Thus reassured, he mended his pace and held briskly on toward the shopping district.

His hour was fleeting. In twenty minutes it would be 6 o'clock. At 6 sharp Blessington's would close its doors. Distressed, he scurried on, crossed Thirty-fourth street, aimed himself courageously for the wide entrance of the department store, battled manfully through the retreating army of feminine shoppers and gained the ladies' glove counter with a scant fifteen minutes to spare. He found himself before a fair young woman, with a pleasant manner.

She recognized him, with surprise, but none the less with a friendly smile.

"Why, Mr. Sybarite"—

In his hearing her voice was rarest music. He gulped, stammered, "Miss Lessing!" and was stricken dumb by realization of his effrontery.

"Can I do anything for you?"

He breathed in panic, "Gloves"—

"For a lady, Mr. Sybarite?"

He nodded as expressively as any automaton.

"What kind?"

"I—I don't know."

"For day or evening wear?"

He wagged a dismal head. "I don't know."

Amusement touched her eyes and lips so charmingly that he thought of the sea at dawn, rimpled by the morning breeze, gay with the laughter of young sunlight.

"Oh, I see. You wish to make a present. Evening gloves are always acceptable. Does she go often to the theater?"

"I—don't know."

"Well—is she old or young?"

"I—ah—couldn't say."

"Mr. Sybarite!" said the young woman, with decision.

He fixed an apprehensive gaze to hers, which inclined to disapproval, if with reservations.

"Yes, Miss Lessing?"

"Do you really want to buy gloves?"

"No-o."

"Then what under the sun do you want?"

He noticed suddenly that, however impatient her tone, her eyes were still kindly. Eyes of luminous hazel brown they were, wide open and clear beneath dark and delicate brows; eyes that assorted oddly with her hair of pale, dull gold, rendering her prettiness both individual and distinctive.

Somehow he found himself more at ease.

"Please," he begged humbly, "show me some gloves—any kind—it doesn't matter—and pretend you believe I want to buy 'em. I don't really. I—I only want—a—ah—word with you before you go home."

If this were impertinence the girl elected quickly not to resent it. She turned to the shelves behind her, took down a box or two and opened them for his inspection.

"These are very nice," she suggested quietly.

"I think so too." He grinned uneasily. "What I want to say is—will you be my guest at the theater tonight?"

"I'm afraid I don't understand you," she said, replacing the gloves.

"With Miss Prim and George Bross," he amended hastily. "Somebody—a friend—sent me a box for 'Kismet.' I thought possibly you might care to go. It—it would give me great pleasure."

Miss Lessing held up another pair of gloves.

"These are $3.50," she said absently. "Why did you come here to ask me?"

"I—I was afraid you might make some other engagement for the evening."

He couldn't have served his cause more handsomely than by uttering just that transparent evasion. In a thought she understood; at their boarding house he could have found no ready opportunity to ask her save in the presence of others, and he was desperately apprehensive lest she refuse.

After all, he had reason to be; they were only table acquaintances of a few weeks' standing. It was most presumptuous of him to dream that she would accept.

On the other hand, he was (she considered gravely) a decent, manly little body.

"It's so good of you to think of me," she said.

"You mean that you—you will come?" he cried, transported.

"I shall be very glad."

"That's—that's awf'ly good of you," he said huskily. "Now, do please find some way to get rid of me."

Smiling quietly, the girl recovered the glove boxes.

"I'm afraid we haven't what you want in stock," she said in a voice not loud, but clear enough to carry to the ears of her inquisitive colaborers. "We're expecting a fresh shipment in next week—if you could stop in then."

"Thank you very much," said P. Sybarite with uncalled for emotion.

He backed away awkwardly, spoiled the effect altogether by lifting his hat, wheeled and broke for the doors and won his way through them a single instant before they closed.

Hupmobile

CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Engineer

We hope you have in your acquaintance a competent engineer.

We would like you to get his opinion of the Hupmobile.

Engineers constitute a little world of and unto themselves. They are keen critics, but generous ones, when they encounter good work.

And these sharpest of observers say the Hupmobile is good.

In Detroit—where there are many automobile engineers—one hears the highest praise of the Hupmobile.

It would be too much to say that there is not a dissenting voice regarding the Hupmobile among Detroit engineers.

But it would be hard to find one who holds an unfavorable view.

By common consent they have settled on the Hupmobile as one car they can unite in commending.

Now this is not mere sentiment or friendliness.

Reputable engineers will not barter away their professional standing by unmerited praise.

When they approve of the Hupmobile—and especially of its splendid small bore, long stroke motor—that approval means something.

It is an endorsement founded on extraordinary experience and knowledge.

It is a source of pride to us—and a recommendation you can not afford to overlook. Take the engineer's expert opinion along with all the other good things that you hear about the Hupmobile. Let us prove the Hupmobile in a quality test.

Garrett Countians living on the borders of West Virginia and Pennsylvania use banks at Meyersdale, Salisbury and Summerfield, Pa., Lonaconing and Frostburg, Md., Keyser and Piedmont, W. Va.

One thousand feet above sea level on the Maryland and West Virginia State lines is located, the villiage of Bloomington, on the B. & O. Railroad. It is the center of a large coal field. There is a good church building, a public school house, several well kept stores and the homes of an industrious people, located here. Fifteen miles up grade is Altamont, the summit of the Alleganies, 2633 feet above sea level.

Between the two is Swanton, the shipping point for a fertile region, the home of industrious farmers. This village has three church edifices, public school building, three stores, grist mill and blacksmith shop. There is a Farmer's Grange at Swanton.

At Ottaway is located the large plant of the Tioga Tanning Co., Ottaway is a busy little village, surrounded by an industrious farming community.

Other villages not incorporated, located in rich farming sections are Red House, Gortner, McHenry, Hoyes, Sang Run, New Germany, Gorman, Jennings and Bittinger, with church edifices, school buildings, grist mills and stores.

The citizens of these towns and villages are every ready to welcome settlers or prospective settlers who desire to locate in their midst.

Kitzmiller, Bloomington, Maysville, Dodson and Kenton, are the coal mining centers.

The first named is an incorporated village, with a County High school, several church edifices, a National bank, several stores, telegraph and telephone offices, and is on the Western Maryland railroad. There is good farming country all around Kitzmiller.

The vicinity of Jennings is underlaid with coal. Already over $75,000 has been invested in coal rights. There is a 15 foot vein of fire brick clay in the vicinity.

The lumber towns are, Crellin, Bond, Davis, Friendsville, Jennings, where large plants are located. Many small saw mills are located in many parts of the county. Friendsville is an incorporated town on the B. & O. R. R. Has several church houses; State High school, bank, a number of stores, two hotels. Around it are fertile farm lands. Garage open for service. Coal is found in the vicinity of Friendsville.

A large saw mill plant will be established near Oakland in a few weeks in a territory covered with timber and underlaid with coal. A creamery making gilt-edge butter is also located in Oakland.

The Western Maryland railway and the B. & O. railroad afford good shipping facilities for our coal, lumber and produce.

The Maryland State road has its terminus at Oakland.

The new settler in Garrett County will find well-disposed, hospitable and kind neighbors close to him.

He will find himself among law-abiding, religious people, and no saloons, for the sale of intoxicating liquors, but in their stead, neat, inviting church edifices county high schools and good public schools.

The climate is healthful, a bracing atmosphere, pure, delicious water, and an increasing number of State roads, of firstclass make.

All classes of farmers can find locations in Garrett County suitable for the class of agriculture to which they may be accustomed.

Garrett county is the ideal Summer Resort region of the Alleghany mountains. It is the scenic region of Maryland. Here is health, pleasure and happiness.

Garrett County offers to capitalists an opportunity for a safe and profitable investment. Splendid railroad facilities.

Garrett County is the largest, and youngest County of the State, rich in promises for the future, just awaiting development. There are "acres of diamonds;" there are golden opportunities, all within the reach of the economical, industries, and progressive citizens, who want to establish a home, and live in peace and plenty surrounded by the beauties of nature and the comforts and blessings of life.

The man who possesses a few thousand dollars to purchase a farm, is assured of a good future. But also a less favored settler, if he possesses only from $400 to $800, can have a good start in Garrett County and by dint of industry and economy can attain independence and prosperity.

Botanists of wide experience, who have traveled extensively throughout the U. S. and Canada and, who have visited Oakland during the summer months, unite in declaring the Flora of Garrett County equal if not suprassing in variety and beauty, that of any equal area in the United States. This it must be admitted is a strong statement, but a careful comparison after several years of field work and observation along Botanical lines, clearly indicates the truth of the assertion. If this be true, no other county in the state presents a field with so many advantages and opportunities to the flower and plant lover as Garrett. Its varying altitude, rugged hills, open glades, mountain streams and shady dells are all conductive to variety of form and species.

The Garrett County Board of Trade invites correspondence with persons seeking a location for a home, or who are looking for a locality to spend their summer or locate a summer cottage.

It invites correspondence from Storekeepers, who are in the market for potatoes, apples, chickens, eggs, or seed potatoes, or for the famous, gold medal Garrett County buckwheat flour, graham flour or corn meal—something extra fine; or the famous Garrett County mutton, the best in the world.

The Garrett County Board of Trade invites correspondence with the farmers, millers, miners, lumber men and business men of Garrett County on the subject of the best way to develop the resources of Garrett County.

It invites every citizen of Garrett County to become a member of the Board. The dues are to those living outside of Oakland and a mile limit, 50 cents a quarter; to all others $1.00 per quarter. This money will be used to produce a market for Garrett County produce, to attract settlers to the County, to interest Garrett Countians in Garrett County, and to get everybody interested in boosting Garrett County.

The Oakland Republican, $1.25 per year and The Mountain Democrat, $1.00 per year are the county papers, published at Oakland. They are live progressive newspapers.

We now have in Garrett county, all the modern improvements usually enjoyed by older and more favored sections of the country; recent investigations indicate great things in the near future.

A great undertaking, but worthy of our best efforts. Will you be a booster?

Send your name and the first quarter's dues to

ACCIDENT.

We are informed that quite a number of families in the vicinity of Accident are each season canning the vegetables and fruits the family need for the winter and spring season, as well as rhubarb, berries and fruits and find it much cheaper and far better than the goods put up by the factories. It is to be hoped that many of these farmer's wives will send to the fair a good assortment of their canning operations.

We were pleased to read the article of the Garrett County Board of Trade, entitled "High Up in the Mountains," and published in The Republican last week, especially the reference to Accident. This boosting of Garrett county is the proper thing to do. "If we don't do it, who will."

That the Garrett county farmers are not in a better condition is their own fault. The mills in this vicinity have not been able to secure buckwheat enough to grind into flour to meet the demand they have for flour.

Merchant and hucksters from the George's Creek region of Allegany county come into this valley with their two and four horse teams and buy up our produce and pay cash for it.

The completion of the new State road means much for this vicinity. It puts us within an hour's ride of the county seat and a little over an hour's ride to Cumberland.

With our two hotels and a garage we ought to secure some of the auto tourists passing over the new road.

We can see no reason why our County High School should not grow into a State High School. The location cannot be excelled and the improved road system makes it possible for the sons and daughters of farmers in this vicinity to secure a good education close to their homes.

It will be a great day for Garrett county when we have located in the county a Farm Agent, as Allegany and other parts of the State have. This is a move in the right direction. May it succeed.

When we get a good road from Accident to Friendsville, our cup of happiness will be full.

The fruit prospects are splendid. The trees were full of blossoms, more so than for years.

The farmers all around this village have been busy putting in large crops of all kinds, and shearing their sheep.

Politically the Republicans have dealt kindly with Accident. The State Senators for four terms have been two of our citizens. For over eight years one of our citizens held an important Government office at Baltimore. In return our chosen men have rendered faithful and profitable service to the State and to the United States Government. Their record is one we feel proud of.

DEER PARK

Mrs. Lyde Clary, of Deer Park, Md., widow of the late Rev. Wm. Clary, who spent the winter in Florida with a son, is visiting her sisters, Mrs. Edward Bechtol and Mrs. J. W. Hunter, at Berkley Springs, W. Va.

The local committee for the Deer Park district of the Garrett County Board of Trade is Attorney Ray Jones, Mayor Charles Ashby and J. W. Kimmell.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Garrett spent the first part of the week in Cumberland, looking after a law suit he has against the County Commissionnrs. Attorney E. R. Jones represented the Commissioners in the case.

Our farmers are putting in full crops. The fruit outlook is splendid.

The farmers of Deer Park district approve the plan to locate a County Farm Agent in Garrett county. It is a step in the right direction.

The Garrett County Board of Trade is putting out some good reading which will do much towards boosting the county.

The Deer Park Hotel has prospects of the best season in its history. It is a busy place just now. A large force of men are getting things in first class shape. We are looking for a big summer.

Silos are being put up on nearly every farm in this locality. As a result fat cattle will be more plentiful in the future.

Mrs. Dave Walter and little son, of this place, spent Tuesday in Oakland.

Charles Ashby, Pat Garrett and E. H. Smouse had business in Oakland Tuesday.

Mayor Ashby has been busy selling the farmers of Garrett county silos and he has been very successful in his work.

Mark This Man.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
"My trade of late is getting bad,
I'll try another muslin ad."

If such there be, go mark him well;
For him, no bank account shall swell;
No angel watch the golden stair
To welcome home a millionaire,

The man who never asks for trade
In local papers oft displayed,
Cares more for rest than worldly gain
And patronage but gives him pain.

Tread lightly, friends, let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound;
Here let him live in calm repose
Unsought except by men he owes.

And when he dies go plant him deep
That naught may break his dreamless sleep;
Where no rude clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loves so well.

And that the world may know its loss,
Place on his grave a wreath of moss;
And on a stone above, "Here lies
A chump who wouldn't advertise."

HUTTON

In this week's writing, which is my third letter to The Republican, I will endeavor to give a faint description of our very pretty and picturesque villa, situated in the extreme part of Western Maryland on a most charming plateau at an altitude of nearly three thousand feet above sea level. Our climate is a very bracing one. The pure, dry mountain air, which is the elixir of life, is found to be very beneficial to suffers of tuberculosis.

The population of Hutton is about two hundred and fifty people of different nationalities and religious denominations, the oldest residentials being direct descendants of Irish, French and German parents.

Toward the south-eastern part of Hutton flows the serene and placid waters of "Snowy Creek," which adds greatly to the attractiveness of the scenic picture of beauty as it winds it way slowly around the base of a huge mountain cliff where from the summit one may view acres and acres of rich, fertile lands that are the homes of most progressive farmers, and now that the orchards are laden with an abundance of bloom presents indeed a beautiful spectacle.

In the center of town is a large manufacturing concern, known as the plant of the Tioga Tanning Co., while around are clustered a large number of dwelling houses, occupied by the employes.

Two large general stores offer the best of accomodations to their patrons, handling only the highest grade and an unlimited amount of stock.

The Hutton school building to one appears like a blot on a most perfect landscape. The dilapidated condition surely suggests that one more effort be made to impress on the school board the necessity of erecting a more up-to-date and improved bnilding. Perhaps the trustees could use their influence in obtaining this much needed favor.

Last, but not least (passing over the objectional feature of my narrative) the pretty B. & O. station, with its neat appearance stands out bold in relief and assumes the air of "all in all" a beautifully located town, with advantage equal to that of a city suburban.

A number of Hutton girls and boys received confirmation, Tuesday, at St. Peter's church Oakland, his Eminence, Cardinal James Gibbons, of Baltimore, performing the ceremony.

Mr. Frank P. Baker and friend, Miss Edith Collins, of Oakland, spent Sunday here the guests of friends.

Mr. Kelley, of Kelley's livery of Oakland, was a business visitor at Hutton Saturday.

Mr. LeRoy Horton spent Sunday with his family at Cumberland, Md.

Mrs. Jessie Paulie was visiting her sister, Mrs. Agnes Connell, Saturday.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nordeck is being painted and repaired. The improvements will appear very nice when complete.

FINZELL

Several of our aged people are ill as follows:

Edward Finzell 58 years old, ill the past year is in a serious condition.

Jacob Steinley, 59 years old, has been ill for two years.

Mrs. Rachel McKenzie, 62 years old, has been ill for two years.

Harvey Miller is erecting a barn 80x50 feet.

Geo. McKenzie is erecting a barn and house.

Miss Margaret and Lillian Goldsworthy of Frostburg, are spending the week end at Finzell.

Mrs. Henry Finzell who is a patient in the miners hospital at Frostburg, is improving and expects to return home shortly.

A roof goes on last but consider it first. Don't choose quickly. What looks like a saving at first cost may in a few years be a big expense. See our lines and prices.

SWANTON

John D. Ashenfelter is able to be up again.

William T. Good has moved into Mrs. Shank's property.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winters have a new daughter in their home.

William Decker, our village blacksmith, is doing good work and making a lot of friends.

Albert Fitzwater went up to Oakland Saturday.

If Garrett county does not get a large place on the map it will not be the fault of the Garrett County Board of Trade or the Fair Association. They are certainly boosting Garrett county.

We country folk of District No. 1 certainly do enjoy reading their articles.

They are working in the right direction. President Theopolis George of the Swanton garage is "chuck full" of enthusiasm over the outlook for the county.

Our village does not make much showing to the passengers on board the B. & O., but we have three stores, three churches, a school house, just about half big enough for the demands of the village, a grist mill, blacksmith, and all around us some farming country we are not ashamed of. You cannot see it from the railroad, but it is here.

The farmers are buying some fine hogs, sheep and cattle of good registry and are improving their stock.

We have room in this district for settlers on small farms. They will be treated well and made welcome.

Mrs. L. H. Friend has been visiting in Keyser, W. Va., the past several days.

Albert Fitzwater had business in Oakland Saturday.

BLOOMNGTON

Miss Mary Montgomery, Bloomington, has been visiting her grandmother at Luke.

Dr. and Mrs. Howard Kemp visited relatives in Piedmont last week.

The Junior Order United American Mechanics and the P. O. S. of A., presented to the Davis Free School of Piedmont, a very handsome flag. W. Hill had charge of the ceremonies. Rev. A. R. Snedegar pastor of the Methodist church, of this place, delivered the principal address.

George Warnick has been appointed guardian for Mrs. Elmira Bernard, adjudged insane by a jury the past week.

The indications are that the mines in this vicinity will be in operation shortly. This means increased business for our merchants.

GORTNER

It is with sadness we note the death of Myrtle, yonngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Ridder. As she had been ill but a few days with pneumonia, her condition was not thought to be serious, but on Monday she became worse, and death came to relieve the little one of her sufferings. A sad incident connected with the child's death was the death of her grandfather, Mr. Henry Ridder a few hours previous. They were both laid to rest in the cemetery at Red House, Wednesday morning at 10:30.

Carl Smouse, of Fairmont, W. Va., is spending the week with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smouse.

Marylanders at Panama Exposition.

This is Maryland week in San Francisco. Maryland colors predominate, and former Marylanders are lavish with their hospitality and attentions. Governor Goldsborough and the members of his military staff are the center of attraction. With other members of the Maryland party, they are overwhelmed with invitations to social functions. There is not a dull minute in sight for a week.

The first of the series of brilliant receptions was tendered to Governor Goldsborough and other Marylanders in the California Building Tuesday night by President Moore, of the exposition. It was a magnificent affair. The big building was aglow with electric lights. Flowers, palms, dancing and music gave enchantment to the occasion. It began at 9 o'clock, midnight Baltimore time.

The social program will be continued. President Moore will entertain Governor Goldsborough and staff and the Maryland commissioners, Mr. Dudley, the governor's secretary, and Judge T. J. C. Williams, at luncheon in the administration building. At the same time the women's board of the exposition will entertain Mrs. Goldsborough and the ladies of the Maryland party at luncheon.

The Maryland Society of California will tender Governor Goldsborough and other Marylanders a reception later in the week.

Show at Oakland.

With the coming of Sun Brothers World's Progressive Show to Oakland on May 31 parents are promising their children that they will take them to the show without fail. Bachelor uncles and maiden aunts are looking up their nephews and nieces and all are anxious that "the children have a good time."

The Sun Brothers' Shows are now rounding out a quarter of a century of successful amusement endeavor and for the current season have added many entirely new features and big sensational displays. In plain words, the show is newer, brighter and better than ever.

The aggregation will arrive here via special railway service bringing a magnificent rolling stock equipment. The wild beast section and the big free horse fair are also among the prominent attractions with this show.

Memorial Day.

"Our dead are never dead to us, until they are forgotten."

Memorial Day, with all its sweet, sad memories will soon be here, and we will celebrate the day with services fitting the occasion, and with hearts full of gratitude to our Heavenly Father, that, while nearly the whole civilized world is engaged in cruel, brutal warfare, which puts to shame that of savage and uncivilized nations, we are at peace with all mankind.

Memorial Day, May 30th, comes this year on Sunday. Monday, the 31st, has been designated as the legal holiday and services at the cemeteries will be held on that day throughout the country.

Parcel Post Business Increasing.

According to railroad officials on the Baltimore and Ohio and Western Maryland, the growth of the parcel post in recent months has been nothing short of wonderful, and the railroads are having their hands full in caring for the big business. On the Western Maryland it is a daily occurence to have from one to two solid express and mail cars packed to the roof with this parcel post mail and packages, while the Baltimore and Ohio now runs two mail cars on all through trains. The service, so railroad men say, has been steadily increasing since the Postoffice Department began to handle larger packages, and now it has reached such proportions that the trains have to carry additional cars to take care of the business. The handling of larger packages has been an expense to the railroads, and the new mail and express cars now have larger doors.

Body Found Along Track Three Miles West of Town.

Early Tuesday morning word was received at Oakland that a man was lying on the B. & O. railroad, about one mile above Offutt's saw mill site. The crew of a west bound freight train placed the body on the side of the west track. Dr. Henry McComas, Deputy Sheriff DeWitt and Justice Rudisill were taken to the place, and found the man dead. He had been riding between two cars and must have fallen and caught on the brake, and was dragged about 150 feet before he got loose from the train. His clothes were practically torn off him, his legs and arms were broken, a deep cut was made above the knee, and his head had a very bad cut. The body was taken to the station. On his person was found a paper which showed that he was employed by the White Rock Sand Co., at Corinth. The body was buried by the Sand Company.

A SHOCKING TRAGEDY OAKLAND BOY VICTIM

Harold Jackson Drowned In Little Yough Tuesday Afternoon.

A wave of sadness swept over Oakland Tuesday afternoon when the report swiftly passed through the city that Harold, the thirteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Jackson, of Oak street, had been drowned.

About one o'clock Harold and his playmate, Vincent Hesen, went to the Little Yough river for a swim. The place was the swimming pool near the water station east of town. Vincent declined to go into the water and sat down on the river bank to wait until his friend had enjoyed a plunge.

The lad swam or drifted around the bend in the river and was lost sight of. Vincent waited for a time for his friends return, and as he did not come back, he thought Harold had dressed and returned to his home, accordingly he went home but was worried. He talked the matter over with his aunt, who sent him back to the river to make sure of the fact. On his return he found Harold's clothes where he had undressed.

Becoming very much frightened he ran to the home of Mr. Fred Wolf nearby, and told Walter Wolf that he could not see or find Harold. Young Wolf went to the river and began a search for the boy, and soon found the body. The word was quickly put in circulation and Dr. Henry McComas, Dr. Darby and a number of citizens hastened to the scene and an effort was made for resuscitation, but in vain. The body had been in the water too long. It is supposed that the lad had an attack of cramp.

Harold was greatly loved by all who knew him. He was a cheerful, bright boy; had a kind word for everybody. He was very popular with his playmates.

The public deeply sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Jackson in this great loss to their home circle, for Harold was the only child in this happy home. The funeral services will be held in the Methodist church this afternoon. The remains will be taken to Terra Alta for interment on train No. 55 today.

America for Americans.

Washington, May 25—The Americas for Americans with an American wall of inviolability that no European nation shall dare to violate was the slogan sounded today at the Pan-American financial conference by Dr. Santiago Peres Triana delegate from Columbia. In a speech that stirred the conference as it has been moved only by the address by President Wilson, the Columbian delegate pictured the prime minister of a European nation faced with the problem of an overpopulation and restricted territory at home working for the conquest of the untouched field of the western hemisphere.

A. Barton Hepburn, of the Chase National Bank of New York, declared that he was glad to hear a representative of the other America advance the idea that the Monroe Doctrine means America for Americans applied to both.

REPUBLICANS SHOULD TAKE ADVANTAGE OF DEMOCRATIC DIVISION

Neither Lee Nor Harrington Satisfactory to Majority in Baltimore.

The Baltimore American Sunday says:

"If the Republicans can avoid a primary contest this fall and unite upon a candidate for governor who is acceptable to all elements within the party, and then so complete the ticket as to make it personally and geographically perfect, they can make it exceedingly interesting for their opponents. Their chances of winning will be proportionate to the harmony within their ranks. If united they will be in position to give the Democrats the fight of their lives; if divided they might as well abandon the field and save their powder. The opportunity is theirs. Will they take advantage of it?

"During the past week former Senator Jackson, recognized as the state leader, has been sounding the leaders with the view of inducing them to agree to settle upon a candidate. He is still working along this line and he has some hope of success. It is generally known that he inclines to the candidacy of O. E. Weller, chairman of the State Roads Commission, and while he believes him to be the most available man the party could nominate, he would no doubt yield his opinion if a man equally strong and with the same executive acility should be brought forward.

"The main thing is to have a standard-bearer who is not inimical to Baltimore's interests, and who is himself persona grata to the city. There should be no difficulty in inducing such a man to accept the nomination, and if he measures up in every other respect he would have the support not only of Republicans but of those Democrats and independents who are tired of taking any one the far away countries chose to put up.

"Apart from the regular politicians there are comparatively few Baltimoreans who take any stock in either of the two leading Democratic candidates. One is tied up with Washington, and the other with Philadelphia, and neither is concerned about Baltimore's future. The Baltimore city man who sought the nomination was unceremoniously dumped and dumped because he was a city man.

If local pride and sentiment counts for anything, not to speak of self-interest, isn't it reasonable to claim that if the minority party, which has everything to gain and nothing to loose, places at the head of the ticket a man who enjoys the confidence of this community and who may be relied upon to give the city a square deal his chances of election are better than if he came from the extreme ends of the state.

"Because the Democratic organization here has decided to support Senator Lee, it does not necessarily follow he is their choice. They took him because he was less objectionable than the other man.

"Nor are they certain he will give Baltimore fairer treatment than they would have received from Harrington. But they had had an apple out of the other crowd's basket and knew this was sour, so they concluded to take chances on his opponent, hoping they might fare better. Theirs is a gamble pure and simple. They admit there has been no deal, no understanding. They are taking Lee for better or worse.

"Under the circumstances it is incumbent on the Republicans to meet this condition and if they do the same independence and indifference as to party lines so manifested in the municipal election will be demonstrated here this fall. Baltimore city is expected to furnish the majority to the Democratic ticket. This fight, which will be intensely bitter, will play havoc with the vote in the counties. The Democratic majority outside the city last fall was less than 3,000, and if Baltimore county's vote is not considered, the state went Republican. It can readily be seen, therefore, that Baltimore holds the balance of power.

"To insure harmony it would be well for the local elements to get together and so apportion the offices in the city that there can be no cause for complaint. If Senator Jackson can succeed in uniting the party and thus bringing about the unopposed nomination of a candidate who meets every requirement, he will have paved the way to Republican success."

GROVES HEIRS WIN

Court Passes Order In the Maria Groves Estate Case.

Recently an order was signed by the Court in the matter of the estate of the late Mrs. Maria Groves, who died in Oakland more than a year ago without issue and at the time thought to be without heirs, but within the past few months heirs were located who reside in Pennsylvania and a suit in equity was entered with the result that the Gourt decided the case in favor of the latter who will inherit about $3,600. The estate was valued at $5,100 but of this amount nearly $1,500 has been expended in court costs.

The heirs who will participate in the estate are all located in the State of Pennsylvania.

Peace Be Still.

Don't rock the boat—you may sink it;
The warning is sure and plain.
Don't stir up strife and trouble
Think what we have to gain.
Stay out of troubled waters
The call goes out today
From the head of our great nation
To keep distant from the fray.

Don't rock the boat—you may sink it;
Two wrongs cannot make right.
We ask but peace and plenty
While the other nations fight.
Stay out of troubled waters
We must heed that urgent call;
Keep clear from battle's carnage
While other nations fall.

In war, and strife, and plunder
We cannot take a hand;
We have fought our fights and conquered
For peace in freedom's land.
Don't rock the boat it is spoken—
A warning we should heed.
Don't place our land in mourning
By another awful deed.

Again are the waters troubled
Avoid them we can if we will;
Again the Master has commanded
Peace, be still.

The Referendum As It Worked Out In Switzerland.

To the Editor of The Republican.

In this final article with regard to the Referendum, concluding the series you have so kindly published, I desire to refer briefly to some opinions which have been expressed at various times with regard to its workings. I take a few words from a summary relative to its workings in Switzerland:

"Fifty years ago Switzerland was more under the heels of class government than we are today—political turmoil, rioting, civil war, monopoly, aristocracy and oppression—that was the history of a large portion of the Swiss, until within a few decades. Today the country is the freest and most peaceful in the world. What has wrought the change? Simply union and the referendum for justice."

In the Outlook of August 26, 1911, President Wilson, then Governor, said: "For fifteen years, I taught my classes that the Initiative and Referendum would not work. I can prove it now; but the trouble is they do. The immediate thing we have got to do is to resume popular government. We are cleaning house and in order to clean house the one thing we need is a good broom. The Initiative and Referendum are good brooms."

President Roosevelt said in a recent speech:

"I believe in the Initiative and Referendum which should be used not to destroy representative government but to correct it when ever it becomes misrepresentative."

Governor Shafroth, of Colorado, a state possessing a good Initiative and Referendum system, said:

The Initiative and Referendum places the government nearer to the people. That has always been the aim of the framers of all republican forms of government."

In a recent article entitled "The Oregon System at Work," by a member of the Portland, Oregon, bar, a contrast between our present method of electing officers, with the Referendum method of considering measures, is well placed in the following words:

"What a man really represents is known only to him and his maker, and his future conduct in detail under new and untried conditions is past finding out. The educative effect of the discussion of a matter of public interest, generally participated in, with audience for everybody who has anything to say and with everybody who cares to think about it having a voice in the result, followed by a second decision, simply cannot be exaggerated."

He adds that the composite voter whose mind and purpose are portrayed by these votes, appears to be "desirous of improvement of his institution; open to thoughtful advice but adverse to visionary innovations."

I have recited these few authorities which might be infinitely multiplied as tending to prove that in operation the Referendum has vindicated the views expressed in my prior letters.

My hope is not simply that direct popular government shall be applied to state affairs, and that the people of Maryland shall so vote so far as the Referendum is concerned this fall, but that we may so develop the idea that war and danger of war shall be checked and restrained by the necessity of reference to vote of the entire people, before we enter upon hostilities. This development of popular government may be far in the future, but it is a development which we conscientiously and determinedly should labor to obtain.

I thank you for the courtesy you have extended to one who feels a deep interest as a citizen of Maryland in the progressive extension and development of true popular government.

Little Problems of Married Life

By William George Jordan

[Copyright, 1910, by Fleming H. Revell company.]

III.—Plea For More Courtship After Marriage.

Splendid Present Is Bribery.

There are some men who seem to consider that their marriage certificate is a sort of fully paid up policy on marital happiness. They act as if the courtship days were those of paying premiums of compliment, cheerfulness, courtesy, consideration and chivalry and that marriage makes unnecessary all further assessments of lover-like attention. They may later awaken to the realization that the only way to get an absolutely guaranteed insurance on matrimony is to keep on paying premiums. Countless first class marriage policies have lapsed just because of these imprudently suspended payments.

These very men at their clubs often go perilously close to the dead line of boredom in telling you of the marvelous qualities of their wives. They run the chromatic scale of enthusiasm while you wonder in a dreamy way whether the angels in heaven were not modeled after these women.

At home these husbands may keep their adoration and appreciation wrapped round with seven folds of silence, safeguarding their feeling as zealously as though it were a Masonic secret. Were but a small installment of this told at home it might prove a joy, a sweet source of new confidence, courage and inspiration to the wife who is heart hungry for just such words.

It is not fair to have all the sweet roses before marriage and only their memory and thorns afterward. A splendid present to smooth over a misunderstanding or to wipe out an unpleasant memory is altogether of another class. That is not love, it is bribery; it is not tenderness, it is policy; it is like the sacrifices the heathens offer their gods to appease their wrath.

One of the most common causes of the decline of courtship after marriage where it does occur, and there are countless instances to prove that it does not always decline, is the disillusion that often comes after marriage. When the rosy tints of the courtship days grow dimmer there is a tendency for the real poetry to turn into commonplace verse or even into the baldest prose. This cause, if one may be pardoned interpreting Cupid in terms of commercialism, may be called "buying from sample."

In the days before marriage they saw each other at their best; they were on dress parade and unselfishly thinking too much of each other to think much of self. Under the inspiring glow of mutual regard every latent virtue blossomed into full flower, every failing assumed a roseate hue under some loving interpretation, little sacrifices for each other were a joy and a privilege. Then a smile would exile a doubt, a caress smother an argument, a tender word throw a world of worry into eclipse, and a mood of disagreement be but the preface to sweet reconciliation that made them nearer and dearer.

Before marriage little inharmonies became lost in the general effect as moonlight softens and obscures discords that the broad glare of sunlight reveals. Marriage brings sunlight to bear on all things, and often the goods do not seem up to sample. Then must come a time of concession, adjustment and acceptance of conditions with a smiling determination to make the best of each other. Then each must realize that if they would be real married sweethearts they must keep the courtship atmosphere vital and pervading—by the courtship methods. The love that is worth working for and waiting for is worth preserving.

Courtship after marriage is a kind of matrimonial thermostat. It automatically keeps the home atmosphere at the proper temperature. When the heat of a fervid discussion threatens to scorch the respect of the two for each other and hot words of blame and protest make even asbestos in the room conscious of warmth, a smile, a sweet silence or a term of tender endearment may suddenly banish the heat like the radiated influence of a fountain or a cool fragrant breeze from a garden at twilight.

There is danger in the common habit of making light of love in the home, of treating it with a flippant, cheap cynicism. It is hardly worth the smiles it may elicit. It is an insidious habit that grows from innocent breezy banter to cutting sentences that leave scars in memory. It often begins in the springtide of married life in foolish protest against being thought sentimental, as a sort of self protection, and in fear of manifesting affection in public the two may swing to the other extreme.

The husband may tell to his friends assembled at his table, in a whimsical way, that now he is "done for, that he can never dare go out at night, that no one knows what he suffers, etc." The wife may laughingly counsel her friend, in his presence, "never to get married; you do not realize what it means to devote your whole life to humoring a man and giving up your freedom forever."

Neither means the words; each knows it is but blubbering nonsense but sometimes one phrase sticks in memory when the time and atmosphere of the telling are forgotten and it stings and it does not down with argument and it starts a wondering, insistent, rankling doubt as to whether he really meant it after all, and there may be a sigh in her heart and a sob in her throat as the fear comes that there may have been something in it after all; it may have been a truth he sought to hide under the mask of a jest.

When the husband has the feeling, percolating through his consciousness, perhaps never quite formulated into words, that "our courtship and honeymoon were beautiful, of course, while they lasted, but now we must realize that life is serious," he may think that he is growing sensible. He is really a bit mistaken; he is merely relapsing into his selfishness.

His attitude somehow suggests throwing away flowers of sentiment from a vase because they have wilted a little, and with their novelty now grown familiar have lost some of their initial charm. It would be wiser to make the vase ever blooming and redolent of sweetness by filling it with fresh flowers of finer appreciation each new day.

One of our great composers made the hand organ the test of the popularity of each of his new musical creations. "Will it grind?" was his earnest and wistful question. The love worth while is the love that will grind, that has in it such real music that all the monotony and grind of married life cannot kill its sweetness, its inspiration, its melody and harmony.

There are husbands who think they deserve a blue ribbon in the matrimonial race because they run quietly in double harness, make no special disturbance round the house, are loyal and, as the phrase goes, are "good providers." They say: "I give her a good home; she has servants, plenty of money and dress, all the necessities and many of the luxuries. What more does she want?" In sad hours of loneliness and heart hunger, realizing fully all that she has, she knows that the "more" she craves is the man himself, his real companionship, his compliments, his confidence, his tenderness, his loving.

She wants to hear sometimes the very words, "I love you so, dear," and "I need you so," or any of love's synonyms that speak directly, not merely inferentially, through acts. She wants the phrases that sing themselves in memory while the heart listens and is glad. She wants to be told again that she "has the most beautiful hands in all the world;" she wants to have him notice the flower in her hair, to praise the fit of her new gown, to have her opinion occasionally count as an asset in his thinking, not as a liability to be wiped out.

She wants him to be the one to tell her that she is beautiful, for it means more to her than what all the others say—she wants the old courting atmosphere back again. She wants, in a word, recognition of her as a woman, as the woman, not merely the duty and respect paid as a wife.

The husband may remember when fair hands pinned a pink in the lapel of his coat, when there was a note of sweet deference in listening to any expression of his opinions, when the superior business intelligence of the man next door was not boomed on a brisk bull market of contrast, when eyes brightened with joy when he told the story of some ambition that was dear to his heart, when a sofa cushion was tucked in by hands that seemed to smile just at the psychic angle of maximum comfort in an armchair when he felt a bit tired and enjoyed the incense of being humored like an invalid by brevet.

Husbands Enjoy Being Humored.

There are married people who kept sacred for a few years certain anniversary and memorial days in the calendar of their affections, red letter days that in the observance and in the freshening glow of memory have a mellowing, sweetening, vivifying of sentiment. Then as the years go back these anniversaries fade in their identity and blend confusedly together in the perspective like a long row of lampposts up a boulevard. When a man has to figure out on a pad the date of his marriage, or his wife has to have the date of his birthday recalled to her, then the spirit of the old courtship days should be taken from the lavender of memory and aired and dusted.

The past does not die; we kill it and bury it; we can make it live forever in the present, but whichever we do the option is ours and the responsibility is ours. The love, confidence, sympathy, tenderness and consideration that the heart feels, let the lips and life express. Courtship is a vessel of promise that is often wrecked on the shoals of matrimony. Courtship means two mates without a captain; marriage sometimes becomes two captains without a mate.

SOY BEANS WELL SUITED TO MARYLAND.

Excellent Yielders Of Both Hay and Seed—Plant After Corn.

NICHOLAS SCHULTZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

In Maryland the soy beans are just beginning to receive serious consideration as a general farm crop in a few locations. They are well adapted to Maryland climate and soil. They will grow anywhere corn will grow, and like corn, thrive best on rich, loam soils. It is, however, on soils too poor to grow corn profitably that soy beans will bring the greatest net profit. On soils of this character, when inoculated and fertilized with a little inexpensive fertilizer, they will produce nearly as much forage and as much as or more seed when grown on rich land.

Generally speaking, soy beans require the same kind of preparation of the seed bed as corn; and, as in the case of corn, it is better to thoroughly prepare the seed bed before planting, than to have it poorly prepared and depend upon cultivation for getting the soil into proper condition.

Where seed production is the object, soy beans should be planted in rows 24 to 36 inches apart to allow for cultivation. When planted in this manner, one bushel of seed is enough for 2 or 3 acres. The planting may be done with a corn planter or with a wheat drill regulated for planting 2 bushels of oats or cow peas per acre and having the proper number of seed holes closed so as to give rows the desired distance apart. The aim should be to get the plants about 2 inches apart in the row. The cultivation and the implements for doing this are the same as for corn.

For hay production the beans should be sown broadcast at the rate of 1½ bushels per acre, and for this purpose there is no implement better suited than the wheat drill. The seed should never be covered more than 1 inch deep except in very sandy soil, where it may be covered 2 inches.

Soy beans may be planted from any time after corn planting is finished until July 15th, depending, of course, upon the variety, location and for the planted. From June 1st to 20th is the ideal time for planting. For hay and seed it is best to plant the forepart of June to insure good curing weather for the hay and to insure plenty of time for late varieties to mature seed before frost. For late fall hog-pasture and for turning down as a green manure crop they may be planted as late as July 15th, if an early variety is used.

Few Maryland soils are naturally inoculated for soy beans and since these beans will not thrive well, without being inoculated, except on very fertile soil, it is necessary to inoculate whenever planting for the first time. To accomplish this, 2 or 3 hundred pounds of soil taken from a field which has grown them successfully should be broadcasted over the land before seeding the soy beans and harrowed in immediately. Inoculating with artificial cultures has given but little success when the material is applied and the beans allowed to dry for sometime afterward. Much better results are secured when the beans are planted before the inoculating material is dry on the seed.

HOGS SHOULD BE PROTECTED AGAINST ATTACKS OF HOG CHOLERA.

S. S. BUCKLEY,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Hog cholera is highly infectious. After it once gains entrance into a herd, very few if any escape infection, though all may not die. For the outbreaks are not of equal virulence; in some of them all or nearly all of the hogs that are attacked die of the disease, while in others comparatively few of the hogs die, although all may become sick. There is also a difference in the length of time hogs linger with the disease, in some outbreaks the disease is very rapid in developing and runs a very acute course, the animals dying in a few days after they become sick. In other outbreaks the disease runs a chronic course, hogs remaining sick for many weeks, and finally recovering. Even in the acute outbreaks some of the individuals may show this chronic form of the disease. But in these chronic cases where recovery does finally occur the animals are never thrifty. If they were young when they were affected they remain stunted, if they were full grown when attacked they never fatten properly.

It is to be recommended that there should be as little communication as possible between any place where hog cholera is known to exist and all neighboring places.

The disposal of the carcasses of all hogs that have died of hog cholera is also a most important matter. Every hog cholera carcass should be burned or deeply buried, and in the latter case the carcass should be thickly covered with quick lime before the dirt is shoveled in the pit. But burning is the most efficacious and is easy to do.

"Dad, I'm Going to Stay—"

"I decided last night to stay on the farm. I've given up that city notion. Here is a sure future—good land, healthy stock and lasting, money-saving, fireproof CONCRETE buildings. I've got one suggestion, Dad. Let's lay a concrete driveway from the buggy barn to the house. It'll save lots of work and expensive repairing. Let's use the same cement you selected for the buildings—Lehigh Cement."

Thousands of farmers, in every section of the country, have awakened to the economical value of concrete in farm building construction. They recognize the fact that an "expenseproof" farm, with its apparent future of independence and wealth, far offsets the attractions of city life to the younger generation.

Be sure to select Lehigh Cement. Uniform qualities of strength, fineness and color—country-wide distribution made possible by 12 great mills—are reasons which make Lehigh the choice of careful builders, all over, who seek the best results in concrete work.

Tear down these wooden structures that need constant repair that are in daily peril of fire. Replace them with Lehigh Cement Concrete buildings.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The Pyramids.

One of the great wonders of the world are the Pyramids of Egypt. They were built as tombs of the Pharaoh's and are very wonderful in their construction.

The largest of the pyramids of Gizeh was constructed by Cheops. It is 755 feet square and 451 feet high, with a flat space on the top 30 feet square. Some of the immense stones in them were brought a mile or more on an incline plane. It took wonderful skill and untold labor to build them. But what concerns us now especially is the lessons we may learn from these world wonders. They recall Peter's words "Be ye of the same mind? Unity of mind implies unity of sentiment, of intentions and affections.

They impress upon our minds the necessity of union of effort.

Gizeh covers 14 acres is 600 feet high and 10,000 men worked on it. They worked in reliefs each one being relieved every three months.

A weak thread can be easily broken but when you have a lot of them twisted together they make a rope and a number of ropes woven together make a cable strong enough to hoist the mighty stones into place in the pyramid. One soldier can't do much, only his part, but great numbers of them make the irresistible army that sweeps everything before them.

Learn too the influence of one man, Cheops. He conceived the idea and carried it to completion. One mind worked out the plan for the great Brooklyn bridge and he waited patiently in his room, for months before the news came, it is finished. Sir Christopher Wren's monument is the magnificent Cathedral, which is the admiration of travelers.

Wendell Phillips conceived the idea of attacting one of the great political institutions of our country. He began to agitate and point out the evils of the thing. He spoke and wrote against it when he took his life in his hands to do it, but his influence was felt and though it was woven into the texture of our government it had to go. Gough, the Apostle of temperance, started a wave of influence that has been widening and increasing ever since.

We need a fixed purpose. The power of such a purpose is tremendous. The man who knows where he is going has a clear track. Admiral Toga, just before the great Naval battle in which he almost destroyed the Russian fleet, sent a telegram to an associate, "After a thousand varying thoughts" now one fixed purpose, he went to win a signal victory for his nation. When Christ's purpose for us becomes the one fixed purpose of our life, no duty can confront us, that we cannot accomplish.

A third lesson is this. Every stone in the structure is important.

A master mind has conceived a grander feat than building the pyramids. A A more skilful hand than those that accomplished the mammoth task, is building up the grandest institution of earth. He is selecting his material from all parts of the earth and is shaping and polishing them for their proper place in the building. His church. Every believer is a lively stone, fitted for his particular place in the building. The wise Master builder gives to each its proper place and if we recognize this fact we will be happier and more useful. It's a great thing to be used as filling to level up the wall and make it solid. Disobedience to orders wrecked a train and snuffed out scores of precious lives.

Disobedience to the ship-builder's orders, placed a slightly worm eaten timber in the vessel when being built, no body will know it, can't afford to lose that fine timber, so in it went, and the worms kept busy at work weakening that one timber, until it was honeycombed, and under the strain of the great storm it broke, the ship was wrecked with immense loss of property and lives. Greed of gain led to disobedience of orders that were right and just and attached an awful crime upon the guilty man.

Obedience to God's commands is like the water of Horeb. It is life giving and sweet. Disobedience is like the waters of Marah, bitter to the taste and life destroying.

Least I lengthen this too much, let me suggest, until another time. The pyramids are well worth our study.

FROM OAKLAND TO THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

A Description of the Trip Made By Marylanders

We left Grand Canyon, Arizona, 7-30 p. m., Monday. Arrived at Barstow California 8 a. m. next morning. Had breakfast at Castle Del Desierta. This hotel is also managed by Fred Harvey, who has charge of all the hotels and resturants along the SanteFe Road. This is a town of about 800 inhabitants. We left Barstow at 9 a. m., and passed through the great Majove Desert, which is a part of Death Valley. I could not help but think that if some of the Eastern people who have heard so much about California could see this desert and the bare mountains they would think it worse than Garrett county. But, before reaching San Bernardino, we saw some fine farms. It seems where ever they can get water to irrigate they can raise anything they plant.

Before reaching San Bernardino we crossed a river that has no outlet, it flows down in Death Valley, and sinks out of sight. We arrived at San Diego, Cal., at 11:25 a. m., and was met at the depot with automobiles, furnished by the Sante Fe R. R., to take our party a trip to Riverside Redlands, a drive of 68 miles. Here in this little city the thermometor registered about 90 in the shade and you could look to the right or to the left and see the mountain peaks covered with snow and ice, and down in the valley, only a distance of about 9 to 10 miles, they were gathering oranges, Here is where we first saw the fine orange groves, all along the drive the trees were loaded with fruit, some of the orange trees were hanging as full as the apple trees were in Garrett last year, and in some orchards the ground was covered with them, same as the apples in our country.

Mt. Rubidoux is about one mile from Riverside and is a peak 1350 feet high. There is a road that circles this peak to the top, and a crooked one it is too. Yet the automobiles go up and down at perfect ease. This is not a state road and yet it cost $85,000.00 to build it. From the top of this peak we could see all of St. Anna Valley. The Chinese treck farms, and 27000 acres of orange and lemon groves. At the top of this peak is where all denominations go to hold their easter services. Last Easter there were 2352 automobiles here for the services.

On our return from the peak we took lunce at the Glenwood Mission Inn. I have stopped at quite a number of hotels but in all my travels I never saw people come and go as they did here.

After lunch we were taken the trip to Redlands. This was a most delightful drive with palm trees on both sides of the road, from 25 to 30 feet high. In this section there is some alfalfa, oats, barley and a little corn raised. They mow their alfalfa 7 times a year. The yards are all planted full of fruit trees. Right in the little city of Redlands we saw orange trees right up against the house. They could stand on the porch or reach out of the window and pick oranges. I have said nothing about the flowers. Here you see all kinds, and every where you look. We were driven through Sinley Heights Park, which is on top of a small peak, right at the edge of this town. This is a park of trees and flowers of all kinds. While passing through some of the orange groves and flowers, Judge Williams, who was one of our party, said the blossoms smelled so good that it reminded him of going to to a wedding.

On our way we stopped at an orange packing house saw them grade and pack oranges, and picked our first oranges. The orange groves are kept as clean as a garden and watered once a month, from a stream brought in from the mountains. We left San Bernardino at 5-15 for Los Angeles, where the party arrived at 10:30. We passed through "Pasadena," which is 10 miles from Los Angeles and is said to be the finest city in California, here I stopped off and called on the Gnagey sisters, and Dr. E. H. McMillan, formerly from Accident, and whom many of you know. He has been here six years, is now married and has two children. After spending about two hours with him, he took me to Los Angeles in his machine, where I joined our party at Hotel Alexandria. Here we learned that the eldest son of Governor Goldsborough was too ill to proceed farther on the journey, so Mrs. Goldsborough stayed and accompanied him to the hospital. This morning we received word that he was some better.

We left Los Angeles at 12:30 for San Diego where we arrived at 5 a. m., this morning, took breakfast at the U. S. Grant Hotel. Here the Governor and commission were met by the Guards and President of the fair association and escorted to the fair grounds, where the day was spent in looking over the products of California. We were royally entertained at luncheon today by Mr. Davidson, the President of the fair association. We will leave here at 2 a. m., for Los Angeles, where I will write my next letter from.

THAYERVILLE OUT IN FORCE.

A Well Attended Baptist Meeting There Last Sunday.

A very large company of farmers and their families attended the services in the Baptist church at Thayerville last Sunday, listening to a powerful discourse by the Reverend Lewis Jones of Loch Lynn. Mr. Jones had filled the pulpit in the Baptist church at Loch Lynn in the morning, and hastening to Thayerville, arrived in time to officiate at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Previous to Mr. Jones' arrival at the church a service of song was given by an excellent choir, and not only did its members sing with earnestness and enthusiasm, but the congregation as well. Those who remained in their automobiles missed a treat in many ways. The only lady member of the choir presided at the organ, and sang with equal earnestness. The attendance, the choir singing, and the sermon impressed visitors very favorably.

HUTTON

On Sunday, May 30, holy mass will be celebrated by Rev. Father Connell, of Oakland, at 10:30 o'clock in Pendergast hall. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to all.

On May 21, quite a number of Hutton people attended the funeral of Mrs. M. H. Peddicord held from St. Peter's church, Oakland. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the young, bereft husband and relatives.

Mrs. Chris Grusendorf, of "Edge Wood," was visiting friends, at Hutton recently.

A dance was held Thursday evening, by the young people of this place with a number of out-of-town in attendance.

Mrs. T. B. Wiley attended the conference of the Pennsylvania Synod of the Lutheran church which was held at Grantsville last week.

James P. Wiley, who has been seriously ill at his home near here for some time, is much improved at this writing.

An unusually heavy wind and rain storm, with some hail, visited this village last Friday evening.

Columbus Broadwater, of New Germany, passed through here last Sunday afternoon.

Communion services will be held in the Lutheran church in this village next Sunday morning, May 30th, at 10:30 o'clock.

The Deciding Vote.

Theological professors have grown gray in a wild endeavor to adequately explain the apparently inexplicable facts of divine sovereigny and human freedom. And lay minds have grappled unavailingly with the mysteries of election and predestination. Both may find comfort in the way a colored presbyter handled the matter for one of his flock, as told by Rev. William E. Brooks. The latter, though impressed by the sermons of his pastor, had failed to make a profession of the faith he evidently held. The good brother hunt him up one day, and put the matter straight to him.

"Yes, pahson, I'se ready to jine youah church, but I can't settle dis mattah of election."

"De mattah of election? Dat's easy. It's dis way. When you was born the Lord God he cast one vote for you. An' den the debbil he cast one vote for you. That election in youah case am goin' to be decided de way you cast youah vote."

Meat Market.

I have opened a meat market in the Cuppett building at Loch Lynn Heights and solicit a share of the patronage of the public. All kinds of fresh and cured meats constantly on hand. Mr. Charles Martin will have charge of the store.

SUNDAY afternoon Italy declared war against Austria. This means that in a short time Italy will call upon the United States for war supplies. The foodstuff proposition will be one of immense financial value to this country.

PRESIDENT Wilson scored a big point for the national idea when he said that America asks nothing for herself except what she has a right to ask for humanity itself. It is the glory of this country that it has embarked in no wars for conquest or for selfish interests.

THE national wealth is officially estimated at $187,739,000,000, or $1,965 for each man, woman and child in the country. Such are the figures contained in the special bulletin, estimated valuation of National wealth, 1850-1912, which is about to be issued by Director Sam L. Rogers, of the Bureau of the Census Department of Commerce.

AMONG the sayings of "Poor Richard" is this one: "Give me the man who can hold on when others let go; who pushes ahead when others turn back; who stiffens up when others weaken; who advance when others retreat; who knows no such word as can't or "give up"; and I will show you a man who will win in the end, no matter what obstacles confront him.

POSTAL revenues for the first half of the current fiscal year, which ends July 1, show a deficit of practically $6,500,000. Figures issued by the Postoffice Department show the expenses of the establishment increased more than $9,000,000, as against the corresponding period last year, while receipts decreased almost $500,000. This indicates that the past year was not one of prosperity.

THE REPUBLICAN would urge Garrett county farmers to double the acreage sown to buckwheat. There is a growing demand for Garrett County buckwheat flour and this demand will continue to grow, as the public becomes acquainted with the Gold Medal Buckwheat Flour of Garrett county. Is it not time for Garrett county farmers to make every acre double the yield of the past? It means economy of time, it means larger bank accounts and a happier life.

WE are adding new subscribers to the subscription list of The Republican, but we feel that this paper deserves and ought to have a larger circulation. It is trying to advance every interest of Garrett county. Each issue of the paper is an advertisement of Garrett county that should have the widest circulation possible. The Republican has been a Garrett county booster. It will continue to boost Garrett county. Each and every part of the county. The larger our subscription list, the greater work we can do. Help us to help you build up a greater Garrett county. The fair, the Civic clubs, the brass bands, the Garrett County Board of Trade are all doing splendid work in bringing Garrett county into favorable notice. Good results will follow from their work. The Republican is with all these organizations in their work, Circulate The Republican.

DECORATION DAY.

May 30, throughout the United States of America, is observed as Decoration Day, or Memorial Day. It is a National legal holiday. Business is suspended, at least for a time, if not for the day. Appropriate addresses are delivered, patriotic songs are sung, and the remnant of once famous armies march to the "city of the dead," and upon the grave of each comrade is laid a flower or two.

It is a beautiful token of respect manifested toward those who laid down their lives in defence of their country and its flag. It impreses the rising generation with the fact that the Nation does not forget those who die in defense of the flag, and that it is a great honor to be an American. As they look upon the veterans, marching behind the flag and the bands, or the fife and drums, they catch an inspiration that will make them feel that upon them, as the sons and grand sons of veterans, rest the responsibility of protecting the stars and stripes from the enemy of this land of the free and home of the brave.

All honor to these men, who in the sixties, preseaved this great country from dissolution and laid the foundation for a grander, nobler country, whose people should command the respect and admiration of the nations of the whole world.

Rapidly they are being mustered out of service to join their comrades who have fought a good fight and are at rest.

Next Sunday, we of this vicinity, will join the remnant of this victorious army in decorating the graves of the fallen comrades and in our houses of worship and at the family altar thank God that we dwell in a land of peace and plenty, the friends of all mankind and the enemy of no one.

"HUMAN CATTLE."

The following editorial taken from a leading Philadelphia paper is so manifestly unfair and misleading that we cannot let it pass without comment. We feel sure that the vast majority of farm women, loyal co-partners of their husbands, will resent the untruthful presentation of the subject.

"The farmers' wives are not happy. Thousands of them have said so in letters answering the queries of Secretary Houston. In fact, their condition is so nearly unbearable that some of them have even urged the passage of a law compelling their husbands to treat them with as much consideration as the live stock. Tho the stewards of riches, they themselves are kept in poverty; they have no pin money, no entertainment, nothing but days of incessant drudgery. And despite their labors, which often take more time than their husbands', they rarely enjoy the comforts or graces of life, for the profits are always returned to the farm. "Of what use is it," one of them asks, "to buy more land, to raise more corn, to feed more hogs, to buy more land?" Amaryllis, once an individual who could thrill at the mooing of a cow, thus becomes a farm implement, with no more personality than a hoe or a sickle.

"These cases where the farm is run solely for itself, without regard for the human beings on them, may be in the minority, but they are not rare. The countryside is no longer a field of asphode, where every living thing is happy, where lambs are skipping to the tabor, while Phyllis dances quaintly with her Damon, each in fresh new smock. Necessity keeps the farmer at his work, but it is not necessity alone that turns his entire family into a band of helots. The tedium and drudgery that makes the wives complain and drives the fretful children to the city and finally leaves the farm a deserted ruin spring from the missrule of that supposedly docile creature, who now appears as a tyrant—the farmer himself.

"But in its judgment of him the world can easily be too severe. Nearly all Americans still crave the kind of prosperity seen in the reports of boards of trade; they like to see the wheels running, but not the human product. And how can the farmer be singled out and blamed for stepping to the universal music? The same passion, which may be called commercial ambition or simply greed, that has driven him to buy more land for more hogs has persuaded Mr. Grundy and many another manufacturer that it is right to grow rich from the labors of children, or from money that should have been spent in wages. Personalities are not crushed merely on farms. And in a land where living, for all but a few, is only a mechanical operation, it is perhaps a little fastidious to protest against the farmers for discriminating in favor of their live stock."

In all probability there are farmers who are greedy, over-ambitious and therefore hard taskmasters, but this type of human being may be found in every occupation. Wives can be found in every walk of life who, if given the invitation and opportunity, would write as complainingly and as uncharitably as were some of the answers to the Secretary's invitation to farmers' wives. The unfortunate thing is that men in high and influential positions should be so unacquainted with the spirit and integrity of the farm women of this country as to draw such unfair and damaging inference from the letters of a small percentage of the 15,000,000 farm women. We feel that not since Edwin Markham wrote "The Man with the Hoe," has there been drawn so untrue a picture of the farmer. We wish to ask our farm women readers to write us short letters of 500 or 600 words, choosing one of these subjects: "Why I am Happy on the Farm," or "Why I am not Happy on the Farm." Write your real feelings on the matter, writing on one side of the paper only. The writer's name will not be used unless desired.

THE GUBERNATORIAL SITUATION.

The time is rapidly approaching when the gubernatorial situation should earnestly engage the attention of those who are sincerely interested in the State's welfare. While the politicians are playing their various hands in what they regard as simply a political "game," the thoughtful citizen of this State realizes that the time has come when it is of imperative importance that Maryland should secure a Chief Executive of sound business judgment, of some considerable experience in handling public affairs, and of sufficient intellectual acumen and moral courage to grapple man-wise with the enlarging problems and diversified interests of our commonwealth. We are facing some pretty serious problems in this State; we are being called upon to handle some pretty delicate situations. It is a man's job to be Governor of Maryland today—that is to be a Governor that counts. the little schemes of the politicirns seem nothing short of disgusting (might we say traitorous?) when compared with the vital importance of the State's securing a capable and efficient Executive. Indeed, we are prepared to go further and ayer that party loyalty and zeal must take second place in the thought of every good citizen as compared with the determination to do all that in him lies toward securing for the State the best possible Executive. This position seems to us so sound and patriotic that we have no hesitancy in "proclaiming it from the house-top." We want especially to lay it upon the heart of our own party in Maryland. It is not essential that the next Governor of Maryland should be a Republican or Democrat. But it is essential that he should be equipped for the job; and while our fellow Republicans are prospecting for a candidate, let them remember that their high duty to their party, aye their higher duty to their State, demands the nomination of a man whose undoubted fitness would properly command support.

We do not anticipate a primary contest for the Republican nomination. In fact, the very situation of the party in this State makes, in our judgment, such a contest unwise and undesirable. What we rather anticipate is that the sentiment of the party will so evidently crystallize about some possible candidate as to make his nomination assured. Hence our belief that now, right now, is the time to sound no uncertain note; the time to talk straight out and to say flat-footedly that no make-shift nomination will do. This State needs at this time an eminently capable Executive. He need not be gifted with oratory or endowed with brilliant "parts." But he must be capable and courageous, if he is to adequately meet the situation. And he must be that if he is to deserve and receive the support of those citizens who set the welfare of the State above the cry of party loyalty.

Now is the time for us to find out whether the Republican party in this State is, or is not, blessed with the right sort of leadership. If it is, it can, we believe, be at this time of great service both to the State and the party. If it is not, it is not going thereby to injure the State, because it can't. But it can and will make the party an almost negligible quantity in State affairs for years to come.

Postal Savings.

If interested in saving money with interest—that's not intended for a play of words—read the following, which, in part, is given as is posted in the lobby of the postoffice, which allows any one living at any place in the domain of your Uncle Samuel's to open a postal savings account by mail at any office.

Every person in the United States ten years old or over may open an account in a postal savings bank after July 1st, according to an instructive leaflet on the Postal Savings System just issued by Postmaster General Burleson. This important extension of the service will be made possible by permitting persons living in communities so sparsely settled as not to justify the designation of their local post offices as regular postal savings banks to open accounts by mail.

Under the plan adopted by the Postmaster General for opening accounts by mail an intending depositor, residing where there is no regularly designated postal savings bank will apply to his local postmaster, who will see that necessary identification data is prepared and forwarded to a nearby postoffice authorized to accept deposits. The intending depositor will then be given permission to forward his first and sudsequent deposits by money order or registered mail direct to the postmaster at the banking point for which receipts or certificates will be issued. He may withdraw all or any part of his postal savings by mail and on demand, together with any interest that may be due him.

Postal savings receipts have broken all records the past year. During the eight months prior to Arril 1 there was a net gain in deposits of $19,000,000, as against a gain of $8,000,000 for the same months the year before. Thousands of new accounts have been opened and the millions made up largely of hidden savings have been turned back into the channels of trade just at a time when there was pressing demand for every dollar.

The members of Miner's Sunshine Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and the D. of A. of this place, will decorate the graves of the deceased members of the respective orders, interred in the Bloomington grave yard, on next Sunday afternoon. A very interesting program for the occasion has been gotten up by the members of the two orders consisting of speeches, music, etc. Invitations have been sent to the councils of Westernport and of Piedmont and a large turn-out of the members, their friends and the public generally is expected. On account of the desire of a great number of members of both societies to attend services at other places on the regular day, Monday, May 30th, Sunday was selected to give the membership and their friends in this community an opportunity to gratify their desires in this respect.

Mr. Daniel Smouse, of Oakland, formerly in the mercantile business in this place, was a visitor in town on Monday last.

The stork is a happy, good natured dispenser of gladness and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Montgomery, of Franklin, are exceedingly grateful for his recent visit and the addition of a little daughter to their family.

DAY OF DAYS

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Copyright, 1912, by the Frank A. Munsey Co.

CHAPTER II.

A Likely Story.

FROM the squalor, the heat, dirt and turmoil of Eighth avenue, P. Sybarite turned west on Thirty-eighth street to seek his boarding house.

This establishment—between which and the cave of the smell, his existence alternated with the monotony of a pendulum—was situated midway on the block on the north side of the street.

It boasted a front yard fenced off from the sidewalk with a rusty railing; a plot of arid earth scantily tufted with grass, suggesting that stage of baldness which finally precedes complete nudity. Behind this the moat-like area was spanned to the front door by a ragged stoop of brownstone. The house romance took the air upon the stoop.

George Bross was 85 per centum of the house romance. The remainder was Miss Violet Prim. Mr. Bross sat a step or two below Miss Prim, his knees adjacent to his chin, his face, upturned to his charmer, wreathed in a foud and fatuous smile.

Saturday was her day for seeming unusually fair to him; by the following Thursday there would begin to be a barely perceptible shadow round the roots of her golden hair.

Normally good looking in ordinary daylight, she was a radiant beauty across footlights. Her active young person was modeled on generous lines, and, as a rule, clothed in a manner which, if inexpensive, detracted nothing from her conspicuous sightliness.

P. Sybarite approached the gate. At that moment George was announcing in an undertone. "Here's the lollop now. Think I better spring it on him now?" he inquired, in doubt.

"Gee, no!" protested the lady in alarm. "It'd spoil the plant, sure. I'd love to watch you feed it to him, but heaven knows I'd never be able to hold in without bustin'."

P. Sybarite walked into the front yard, and the chorus lady began to crow with delight.

"Well, look who's here! 'Tis old George W. Postscript—as I live! Hitherwards, little one; I would'st speech myself to thee."

Smiling, P. Sybarite approached the pair. He liked Miss Prim for her unaffected high spirits.

"Well?" he asked pleasantly, blinking up at the lady from the foot of the steps. "What is thy will, O Breaker of Hearts?"

"That'll be about all for yours," announced Violet reprovingly. "What's all this about you givin' a box party at the Knickerbocker tonight?"

"It's a fact," affirmed P. Sybarite. "Only I had counted on the pleasure of inviting you myself," he added with a patient glance at George.

"Never mind about that," interposed the lady. "I'm just tickled to death, and I love you a lot more'n I do George, anyway. So that's all right. Only I was afraid for awhile he was connin' me."

Then she jumped up and wheeled about to the door with petticoats professionally awhirl. "Well, if I'm goin' to do a stagger in society tonight, it's me to go doll mayself up to the nines. So long!" She disappeared by way of the vestibule.

"Class to that kid, all right," observed George. "Some stepper, take it from me. But I'm glad it's a box; then I can hide under a chair. I ain't got nothin' to go in but these hand-me-downs." What are you going to wear, anyway?"

"A shave, clean collar and what I stand in. They're all I have."

"Then you got nothin' on me. What's your rush?" as P. Sybarite would have passed on. "Wait a shake. I wanna talk to you. Sit down and have a cig."

There was a hint of serious intention in the manner of the shipping clerk to induce P. Sybarite, after the hesitation of an instant, to accede to his request.

"Well?"

"I dunno how to break it to you," Bross faltered dubiously. "You better brace yourself to lean up against the biggest disappointment ever."

P. Sybarite regarded him with sharp distrust. "You interest me strangely, George. But perhaps you're no more addled than usual. Get it off your chest."

"Well," said George regretfully, "I just wanna put you next to the facts before you ask her. Miss Lessing ain't goin' to go with us tonight."

P. Sybarite looked startled and grieved.

"I'm afraid I don't understand. How do you know Miss Lessing won't go? Did she tell you so?"

"Not what you might call exactly, but she won't, all right," George returned, with confidence. "There ain't one chance in a hundred I'm in wrong."

"In wrong? How?"

"About her being who she is."

P. Sybarite subjected the open, naive countenance of the shipping clerk to a prolonged stare of suspicion.

"No; I ain't crazy in the head neither," George asseverated, with some heat. "I suspicioned something was queer about that girl right along, but now I know it. I don't s'pose you seen the evenin' paper?"

"No"—

"Well, I picked up the Star down to Clancy's. This is it." With an effective flourish George drew the sheet from his coat pocket. "And soon's I seen that," he added, indicating a smudged half tone, "I begun to wise up to that little girl. It's sure some shame about her, all right, all right."

Taking the paper, P. Sybarite examined with perplexity a portrait labeled 'Marian Blessington." Whatever its original aspect, the coarse mesh of the reproducing process had blurred it to a vague presentment of the head and shoulders of almost any young woman with fair hair and regular features, only a certain, almost indefinable individuality in the pose of the head rendered it dimly suggestive of Molly Lessing.

Attached to it was:

Marian Blessington, only daughter of the late Nathaniel Blessington, millionaire founder of the great Blessington chain of department stores. Although much sought after on account of the immense property into control of which she is to come on the twenty-fifth birthday, Miss Blessington contrived to escape matrimony entanglements until last January, when Brian Shaynon, her guardian and executor of the Blessington estate, gave out the announcement of her engagement to his son, Bayard Shaynon.

This engagement was whispered to be distasteful to the young woman, who is noted for her independent and spirited nature, and it is now persistently being rumored that she has demonstrated her disapproval by disappearing mysteriously from the knowledge of her guardian.

It is said that nothing has been known of her whereabouts since about the 1st of March, when she left her home in the Shaynon mansion on Fifth avenue ostensibly for a shopping tour.

This was flatly contradicted this morning by Brian Shaynon, who declared that his ward sailed for Europe Feb. 28 on the Mauretania and has since been in constant communication with her betrothed and his family. He also denied having employed detectives to locate his ward. The sailing list of the Mauretania fails to give the name of Miss Blessington on the date named by Mr. Shaynon.

Refolding the paper, P. Sybarite returned it without comment.

"Ain't you hep yet?" George betrayed some little exasperation, mixed with his disappointment. He slapped the folded paper resoundingly in the palm of his hand. "You ain't dropped to the resemblance between Molly Lessing and Marian Blessington?"

"Between Miss Lessing and that portrait?" asked P. Sybarite.

"Why, they're dead ringers for each other. Any one what can't see that is blind."

"But I'm not blind."

"Well, then you gotta admit they look alike as twins"—

"But I've known twins who didn't look alike."

"Ah, nix on the stallin'!" George insisted, on the verge of losing his temper. "Molly Lessing's the spit'n' image of Marian Blessington—and you know it. What's more—look at their names. Molly for Mary—you make that? Mary and Marian's near enough alike, ain't they? And what's Lessing but Blessington, docked goin' and comin'?"

"Wait a second. If I understand you, George, you're trying to imply that Miss Lessing is identical with Marian Blessington.'

"You said somethin', then, all right. It's plain's daylight. When did Miss Lessing come here? Five weeks ago, to a day—March foist, or close on to it—just when the paper says she did her disappearin' stunt. How you goin' to get around that?"

"You forget that the story is contradicted by the very person that ought to know—Miss Blessington's guardian."

"Well, if she sailed for Europe on the Mauretania, like he says—how's it come her name wasn't on the passenger list?"

"It's quite possible that she may have elected to sail incognita."

George displayed his disgust in a rude, choleric grunt, to see his laborious fabrication, so painfully concocted for the delusion and discomfiture of P. Sybarite, threatening to collapse of sheer intrinsic flimsiness. In desperation he grasped at one final, fugitive hope.

"All right," he said sullenly; "all right. You don't gotta believe me if you don't wanta. Only wait—that's all I ask—wait. You'll see whether I'm right or not when she turns down your invite tonight."

P. Sybarite smiled sunnily. "So that is why you thought she wouldn't go with us, is it?"

"You got me."

"You thought she, if Marian Blessington, must necessarily be such a snob that she wouldn't associate with us poor devils, did you?"

"Wait. You'll see."

"Well, I don't mind telling you you're wrong. I've already asked Miss Lessing, and she has accepted."

George's eyes, protruding, glistened with poignant surprise. After a long pause he ground his cigarette beneath his heel and rose.

"In wrong, as usual," he admitted, with winning simplicity. "I never did guess anything right the first time. Only—you grab this from me—maybe she's willin' to run the risk of bein' seen with us, but that ain't sayin' she's anybody else but Marian Blessington."

"You really think it likely that Miss Blessington, hiding from her guardian and anxious to escape detection, would take a job at the glove counter of her own store, where everybody must know her by sight, where her guardian, Shaynon himself, couldn't fail to see her at least twice a day as he enters and leaves the building?"

"That's just her cuteness. She doped it out that the safest place for her would be the last place he'd look for her."

"And you really think that she, accustomed to every luxury that money can buy, would voluntarily come down to living here at $6 a week and clerking in a department store simply because, according to the papers, she's opposed to a marriage that she can't be forced to contract in a free country like this?"

"P'raps old Shaynon's double crossed her somehow we don't know nothin' about. He ain't above it if all they tell of him's true. Maybe he's got her coin away from her, and she had to go to work for a livin'. Stranger things have happened in this burg, P. S."

It was the turn of P. S. to hesitate in doubt. But he rallied quickly enough.

"All things are possible, George," he admitted with his quizzical grin. "But this time you're mistaken. I'm not arguing with you. I'm telling you, you're hopelessly mistaken. Here she comes now. Don't you breathe a word of this to Miss Lessing."

"Why not?"

"Because I tell you not to—because," said P. Sybarite firmly, "I forbid you."

"You—you forbid me? And what"—

"S-s-s-h!" P. Sybarite warned him sibilantly. "Miss Lessing might hear you. What will happen if you disobey me," he added as the shopgirl turned in at the gateway, lowering his own voice and fixing the shipping clerk with a steely stare, "will be another accident, much resembling that of this afternoon—if you haven't forgotten. Now, mind what I tell you, and be good."

Mr. Bross swelled with resentment; exhibited a distorted and empurpled visage, but kept silence.

Pausing at the foot of the stoop, Miss Lessing looked up at the two young men and smiled.

"Good evening," she said, with a pretty nod for P. Sybarite, and with its fellow for George. "Good evening, Mr. Bross," she added.

Having acknowledged this salutation with that quaint courtesy which somehow seemed to fit him like a garment, P. Sybarite smiled strangely at the shipping clerk.

The latter mumbled something incoherent, glanced wildly toward the young woman and spluttered explosively, all with a blush so deep that its effect was apoplectic. Then, with an inarticulate snort he turned and fled into the house.

Confusion possessed him and with it rage. Stumbling blindly on the first flight of steps, he clawed the atmosphere with fingers that itched for violent revenge.

"I'll get even," he muttered savagely. "I'll get hunk with that boob if it's the last act of my life!"

It was with a suggestion of stealth that he ascended the second flight and paused before the door of the back hall bedroom opened gently for the space of three inches.

"That you, George?" Violet Prim demanded with vivacity.

Reluctantly he stopped, and in a throaty monosyllable admitted his identity.

"Did he fall for it?"

"All over himself. Honest, Vi, it was a scream to watch his eyes pop. You could've clubbed 'em outa his bean without touchin' his beak. I 'most died."

Miss Prim giggled appreciatively.

"You're a wonder, George," she applauded. "It takes you to think 'em out."

"Ah, I don't know," returned her admirer with becoming modesty.

"He's gone on her, all right, ain't he?"

"Crazy about her!"

"Think he'll make a play for her now?"

"You never can tell about P. Hein a queer little stink."

Footsteps became audible on the stairs below.

"Well, so long. See you at dinner," George added in haste. With determination, and a heavy tread, he went on to his room.

When he had shaved (with particular care) and changed his linen (trimming collar and cuffs to a degree of uncommon nicety) and resumed his coat (brushing and hating it simultaneously and with equal ferocity for its very shabbiness), P. Sybarite sought out a pipe old and disreputable enough to be a comfort to any man and sat down by the one window of his room (top floor, hall, back) to smoke and consider the state of the universe while awaiting the dinner gong.

The window commanded an elevated, if nonexhilarating, view of back yards, one and all dank, dismal and littered with the debris of a long, hard winter.

Familiarity, however, had rendered P. Sybarite immune to the miasma of melancholy they exhaled. The trouble in his patient blue eyes, the wrinkles that lined his forehead, owned another cause.

In fact, George had wrought more disastrously upon his temper than P. Sybarite had let him see. Perhaps it was true. Perhaps George had guessed shrewdly. Perhaps Molly Lessing of the glove counter really was one and the same with Marian Blessington of the fabulous fortune.

Old Brian Shaynon was a known devil of infinite astuteness. It would be quite consistent with his character and past performances if, despairing of gaining control of his ward's money by urging her into unwelcome matrimony with his son, he had contrived to overreach her in some manner and so driven her to become self supporting.

Perhaps hardly likely, the hypothesis was none the less quite plausible. A thing had happened within P. Sybarite's knowledge of Brian Shaynon.

Even if George's romance were only true in part, these were wretched circumstances for a girl of gentle birth and rearing to adopt.

It was really a shocking boarding house. P. Sybarite had known it intimately for ten years. Use had made him callous to its shortcomings.

He could remember most vividly how he had loathed it for weeks, months, and years after the tide of evil fortunes had cast him up on its crumbling brownstone stoop (even in that distant day, crumbling).

For an entire decade he had occupied the same chair at the same table in the basement dining room, feasting on beef, mutton, fowl, Irish stew, ham and beans, veal, pork or just hash—according to the designated day of the week.

The very room in which he sat was somehow dear to him. Upon it he wasted a sentiment in a way akin to that with which one regards the grave of a beloved friend. It was, in fact, the tomb of his own youth.

In this narrow room his very self had been extinguished. A man had degenerated into a machine. Everything that caught his eye bore mute witness to this truth.

He was no lonely victim. In his term he had seen many another come in hope, linger in disappointment, leave only to go to a meaner cell in the same stratum of misfortune.

Was this radiant spirit of youth and gentle loveliness (who might, for all one knew to the contrary, be Marian Blessington, after all) to be suffered to become one of that disconsolate crew?

What could be done to prevent it?

Nothing that the wits of P. Sybarite could compass. He was as inefficient as any gnat in any web.

(To be Continued Next Week).

Blue and Gray.

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic in Independence, Mo., have made the interesting suggestion that the Grand Army and the United Confederate Veterans should celebrate Memorial Day together. The suggestion is not a new one; federal and confederate have marched side by side on Memorial Day before this. But the suggestion from Innependence has more of an official and general character than has been the case hitherto.

Missouri was one of the border states in the war. Some of its people went into the Confederate Army, some went into the Union Army, and it was with a struggle that the state was saved for the Union. In Kentucky conditions were much the same; in Kentucky families were divided and son was arrayed against father. In both Missouri and Kentucky it should be easy for that very reason, for blue and gray to join on Memorial Day.

But the suggestion is of interest everywhere. It is of special interest this year. When so many of the nations of the world are fighting each other, it is consoling to discover one country where there is talk of old enemies uniting in a common service.

Hupmobile

CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Hupmobile Dealer

Ask him why he continues to sell the Hupmobile year after year.

He will tell you: "Because the Hupmobile grows better year after year."

He is not afraid to meet any man to whom he has sold a Hupmobile.

His customers last year, are his customers this year.

And better than that—they are his friends, as well as his customers.

They go out of their way to help him make Hupmobile sales.

From twenty-five to fifty per cent of his new buyers, come, he will tell you, from the recommendations of old friends.

He does not hesitate to refer to them—they do not hesitate to endorse the Hupmobile.

Do you know of another car of which this is so widely, so enthusiastically, true?

Where the average man buys one car, the Hupmobile dealer buys scores, or even hundreds.

He pays his money for these cars, the same as you pay for yours.

He had to be sold on the Hupmobile before he would make this investment, the same as you have to be sold.

The Hupmobile dealer, naturally, is prejudiced in favor of the Hupmobile.

But isn't that very prejudice—that extreme enthusiasm—the strongest endorsement you could ask?

If he has held the friendship of his Hupmobile owners through all these years, he will hold your friendship, too.

What is true of Hupmobile dealers generally is true of us. Let us show you the 1915 Hupmobile.

OAKLAND, - MARYLAND.

A GOOD TIME COMING.

September 29, 30, October 1, 1915, a Great Jubilee.

The large fair building has been leased for 1915. The contract is signed. The outside grounds have also been secured.

The Curtis Areo-plane and its renowned aviator are under contract.

Negotiations are being made for other out-door attractions.

The large building in the field will be moved to the street; by this arrangement more space will be secured for attractions.

The athletic field day will be one of the most interesting of outdoor amusements. Something new.

The fair officials are getting busy arranging the plans for the best fair yet held.

Farmers, gardeners, stockmen, orchardmen, are all planning exhibits of their respective products.

The wives of the farmers, the boys and the girls have caught the prize winning fever and are busy,

Enthusiasm prevails. True, it is five months before the fair opens, but now is the time to get seed in to plan for exhibits, to get to work, and from reports received at headquarters from all over the county, we know Garrett countains are going to do something this year and astonish "the natives."

It is a fact, there are some kickers. You find them everywhere, except in the Heavens above. They were there but got pitched out and started a plant of their own and have a hot old time running it. Let them kick. The fair will go right along.

The fair this fall is going to be a regular Garrett County Jubilee.

The outlook for a big fair is 100 per cent. ahead of any former year, at this date.

The interest is growing and will grow right along.

My, what exhibits of rye, barley, wheat, oats and corn there will be!

Potatoes! Well, if what we hear pans out, the potato exhibit is going to be GREAT. It does one's soul good to hear the potato growers tell what they are going to do this year. The exhibits of 1913 and 1914 won't be in it.

Punkins, did you say? Well, there'll be some punkins. Several gardners have told us confidentially, that there will be some punkins, raised on bottled milk and on fertile soil. "Talk about 69 pound or 79 pound punkins! Just wait, until you see my mammoth prize winner."

Garden vegetables of all kinds, in single varieties, in collections, raised by the boys, by the girls, by the old old folks.

Poulty! Don't you hear the roosters crowing? The hens cackling? There will be some chickens—many varieties, beauties. The poultry exhibit will be a show of itself.

The live stock exhibit will be larger and better than here-to-fore. It will prove that Garrett county has got a great big move on herself. In horses, cattle, swine and sheep there will be something fine. Don't forget this assertion. The exhibits will be on the ground to prove it.

The Woman's or Home Department, will be a surprise. It will be from all over Garrett County. There will be competition in jells, jams, preserves, pickles, cakes, pies, bread, etc. The fancy work department, in all its branches, will show what the women of Garrett Connty can do, and are doing.

The booths of business men will be attractive and a great feature of the fair.

There will be three days of sight seeing, enjoyment, fun and pleasure.

There will be many special prizes offered.

The fair of 1915 will be the greatest advertisement Garrett County ever received. Great crowds will be here from outside of Garrett County.

The fame of our potato exhibits of the past will draw potato buyers to the fair, to see and select car load lots of potatoes. Garrett County potatoes are among the very best grown on earth.

Let us get together and make the fair of 1915 a memorable occasion in the history of Garrett County.

Call at the Fair Association office, at James D. Hamill's store, Oakland, and talk the matter over, or see me. I am running over with enthusiasm on the subject and can spare you some.

PRESENT DAY DEMOCRACY VS GOVERNMENTAL EFFICIENCY

Shocking Exhibition Is Made By the Wilson Administration.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 25—(Special Correspondence) The chief aim of the Wilson administration has been the pursuit of the principle enunciated by the premier of the administration, "to find places for deserving Democrats," with reckless disregard for the efficiency of the service.

At the time of his nomination, President Wilson was vice-president of the National Civil Service League. In resigning, as he very properly did on being nominated for President, he stated that it did not indicate any lack of interest in the cause. There was expected from him, therefore, a full performance of what his previous life and professions had promised.

There has, however, been great disappointment in this respect, and a large number of experienced, well trained and efficient officials and employes in the government service, both in and out of the competitive civil service, have been removed or demoted to make places for inexperienced Democrats.

For years deputy collectors of Internal Revenue and deputy United States Marshals had been under the protection of the civil service rules, this policy resulting in building up an efficient and experienced service. In one of the first appropriation bills passed by Congress under this administration, a "rider" was inserted to the effect that deputy collectors of Internal Revenue and office deputy United States Marshals "who may be required to give bond" could be appointed without reference to the civil service regulations. Approximately 550 office deputy marshals and 1900 deputy collectors of Internal Revenue were thus thrown into the spoils system.

Make the cases of United States District Attorneys and United States Marshals. Under the law they are appointed for terms of four years and heretofore these officials have been allowed to serve out their terms without reference to change in the administration. But not so under the Democratic party. As fast as appointments satisfactory to the Democratic bosses in the several states could be determined upon, the resignations of United States Marshals and District Attorneys have been called for, frequently by telegraph, without regard to the length of time remaining for them to serve under their four-year commissions. Any Marshal or District Attorney who called for an explanation was summarily removed. This was done, of course that the administration might as soon as possible have an office-holding class around which to build an organization for the campaign of 1916.

Another illustration of the manner in which efficiency has been ruthlessly sacrificed is found in the Federal Penitentiary service, where, if anywhere, the need for keeping trained and experienced men in the service should be of greater importance than the mere question of finding positions with which to pay political debts.

The former warden of the penitentitary at Leavenworth, Kansas, was the best informed man on prison matters in the United States, having had a number of years of previous experience with state penal and reformatory institutions and as chief of police in one of the largest cities of the country. His resignation was promptly called for by the Wilson administration. Later, his deputy was removed that another political appointment might be made.

The administration then removed the Superintendent of Prisons at Washington, notwithstanding the position was under the protection of the civil service regulations. The incumbent was a man who had grown up with the service and whose successful practical experience in prison and parole work covered a period of many years. This important office was filled, under an Executive order issued by the President waiving the civil service rules, by a contractor and builder of apartment houses in Washington, a man without experience with penal institutions or the handling of criminals.

The penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., was not to escape the search of the office seeker, and the warden of that institution, a man who had served efficiently for many years, was recently removed, and a man herotofore unknown in prison matters was appointed for this important work.

Notwithstanding his former connection with the National Civil Service Reform League, President Wilson has issued more executive orders waiving the civil service rules than any of his predecessors. The records of the Civil Service Commission show that in the two years of his administration he has authorized the appointment of 137 persons under executive orders. President Taft in the first two years of his administration excepted 77 men from taking the examination, just about half as many.

In the Department service at Washington, where merit must prevail if an efficient standard of service is to be maintained, experienced clerks have been reduced that clerks with a Democratic "pull" might be promoted. In some offices efficiency ratings heretofore maintained have been abandoned, and promotions have been made on a political basis.

It is obvious that such a system, based on political favoritism demoralizes the force, and in turn is expensive for the government. Clerks who are known to be Republicans are in daily fear of being reduced or of losing their positions all together. It is impossible that an efficient service can be maintained under such conditions. The Democratic policy in this respect accounts in large measure for the inefficency which goes with the extravagance of this administration.

Frederick J. Addison, agent for a New York business house, having returned after three months touring Great Britain, says in an interview that "even in the midst of the greatest war in history; the manufacturers of England are taking a keen interest in the events bearing on the next National election in this country. They fear that a Republican victory will mean the restoration of a protectiye tariff. The lower duties in the new tariff law opened up a much wider market for the different grades of textile goods and also offered opportnnities for low priced goods that previously had been practically prohibited from the American market by the high duty."

Mr. Addison says he was informed that the value of woolens and worsteds exported from England to this country in November 1913, was greater than for the whole year of 1912. "It was the United States that saved that part of industrial England," he continued. "With the probability, therefore, that the Republicans will make the tariff the issue in the coming National campaign, the Englishmen are not in a jovial frame of mind when contemplating what may happen."

The people of this vicinity were very much surprised to hear the wedding bells that rang here recently. The contracting parties were Roy M. Greene of this place and Miss Martha Miller of Pittsburgh. Mr. Greene left on the afternoon train Saturday, May 1st, and went to Pittsburgh and spent Sunday with Miss Miller. On Monday they hied away to Cumberland where they were made man and wife, returning to the groom's home Tuesday. They were surprised the same evening by a happy band of nearly fifty serenaders which furnished them with the best music that they could afford, (consisting of games, sleighbells, cow bells, circular saws, and horns) for about an hour. The bride and groom then presented themselves and received the congratulations of the crowd. Their many friends of this place wish them a long and prosperous married life.—Republican, Myersdale.

It is gratifying to read in the Republican the many cheering words about Garrett county and its development. Such ought to be published. They are an inspiration for others to take hold and do something.

Our Preston county, West Virginia, neighbors are very much pleased with their experiment in having a County Farm Agent located in their county and consider it a profitable investment. Garrett county has reached that stage, when a farm agent would be of incalculable value. May the effort now being made to secure a Farm Agent for Garrett county be a success.

GARRETT COUNTY BOARD OF TRADE

Some Facts and Suggestions Worth Most Careful Consideration.

In investigating the possibilities of Garrett county, officials of the Garrett County Board of Trade have made some surprising discoveries. For instance, Garrett county farmers do not produce buckwheat to meet the demands for buckwheat flour made in Garrett county. A miller, while in the office of the Board last week, said, "you must get the farmers to raise more buckwheat. I have the market and cannot supply the demand for flour, because I cannot get the buckwheat to grind." This statement was later confirmed by a shipper of buckwheat flour at Accident.

The farmers of Garrett county, at last report, on 5,440 acres sown to buckwheat, harvested a crop of 85,493 bushels. This amount ought to be doubled to meet the demand. This is seed time. Let each farmer get busy and sow an increased quantity of buckwheat. The demand will continue to increase.

Again, Garrett county produced 197,204 bushels of corn, and 248,390 bushels of oats. It is needed for home consumption.

The miller quoted, said also. "I have sent west since January 1, 1914, $21,000 to purchase oats and corn to meet the demand." This miller is located outside of Oakland.

Mr. Farmer, think what this means to Garrett county. The great loss of money it represents, money sent out of the county for two articles we can and ought to produce. It is a perfectly safe proposition to say that more than one hundred thousand dollars a year is sent out of the county for this purpose.

The Secretary of the Board is gathering statistics on this subject. It is a matter for most serious consideration.

More than one hundred thousand dollars sent away from the county that ought to be kept here.

The market is right here,—all about us and Garrett county farmers buying that which they ought to produce, sending their cash away from the State to increase the bank accounts of Western farmers.

The object of this article is to get the farmers of this county to think over this extravagance; to interest them in larger and better crops, more thorough farming. We want to be producers not only for home use, but for the market as well. Instead of shipping in corn and oats we ought to be shipping it out of the county.

The poultry business is growing and should continue to grow. It is a fine field for the boys and girls of the farm to look after. One of the objects of the Garrett County Board of Trade is to gather up facts and statistics relating to Garrett county, and present them to the public, to encourage Garrett countians to greater efforts in increasing the products and the bank account.

The poultry business is becoming a source of farm revenue, reaching for poultry and eggs $113,710. Dairy products amounted to $145,152. Butter milkers, better pasture, better care means increased revenue, which means bigger bank accounts,

Garrett county is growing, growing in population, growing in improved farms, better and larger crops, better stock, better church edifices, better roads, better schools, increased bank accounts, better horses, better home comforts and conveniences, better enjoyment of life. These all will improve and increase with the more thorough preparation of the soil for growing crops, more care and thought in stock and sheep raising, better care of the orchard.

The Garrett County Board of Trade is interested in this line of work and will do its part in helping in every way possible to bring about this day of exploiting Garrett county products to the outside world.

It will get busy in getting others busy, awakening a more general interest on the subject, calling into the county agricultural experts, in all departments, holding meetings and doing everything possible for a greater crop producing county, which means local prosperity and happiness. Where one bushel of potatoes, corn, oats, etc., now grow, let us plan and toil to make two or more bushels grow.

The Garrett County Board of Trade will boom the Garrett County fair, cooperate with the Fair Association. The annual exhibit of the farm products is an inspiration to better farming, a wonderful advertisement of Garrett county, a loud effectual call to the outside world to come and buy and grow up and prosper under such favorable conditions and possibilities.

The members of the Garrett County Board of Trade will be among the largest and best exhibitors at the fair. They will be prize winners.

The membership of the Garrett County Board of Trade is growing, and will continue to grow until it spreads all over the entire county. Swanton district, Friendsville district, Accident district, Bloomington district, Sang Run district, Deer Park district and districts Nos. 7, 8 and 14 have members in the Association.

We want a large membership; the larger the membership the better work we can do and better results will follow. Send six months dues, $1 to the secretary for points outside of Oakland and $1 for Oakland membership for 3 months.

Send this paper after you read it to some friend. Let them read about Garrett county; what we are doing and what we are going to do. Get your neighbor to subscribe for the paper. That is a good way to boost Garrett county.

When in town call at the office of the Board, Ravenscroft building. Come see us.

Old Landmark Being Torn Down.

The old Totten building at the corner of Second and Alder streets, is being torn down by the owner, Mr. S. A. Nally, who will erect in its stead a modern business block, connecting the proposed building with the Empire Theatre on the East and the garage building on the South. The new building will be a marked improvement over the old structure, which has been standing for more than fifty years.

Banks to Close Monday.

Sunday being Decoration Day and a legal holiday should it fall upon any other day of the week than Sunday, the banks will observe Monday as such and will be closed for that day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Mrs. Joseph Lee has rented her cottage to Mr. Bolgiano of Baltimore, for the summer.

Well, well, wonders never cease. We are to have Sunday trains this season. One of our hotels advertises, "Dancing and Cards." All this right in the Park. "The sun do move."

The season of 1915 will open next Tuesday. At night there will be an electric illumination in honor of the event, the electric lights will be turned on and the Mountain Lake Hotel will open its doors for guests.

The Loch Lynn Hotel is in the hands of painters, paper hangers and "help" and is being put in splendid shape, under the personal supervision of Mrs. L. B. C. List.

Mrs. J. L. Echard and son spent a day last week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Peddicord, in Oakland.

The C. & P. Telephone linemen have been busy the past week straightening up the line and installing phones in the Park.

The water question is the all absorbing topic. The effort to increase the water rate to $18 for meter service and 30 cents for every one thousand gallons of water passing through the meter, will prove a gigantic failure. The matter will go before the Public Service committee of Maryland and an investigation asked for. The voters of Garrett county voted the county dry from liquor. The Mountain Lake Water Company is trying to vote the Park dry on hydrant water, and they will succeed if they attempt to put in force their new rates. It is said that it was represented to the Public Service Commission that the plant cost $65,000. The tax assessors want to investigate this matter. If the statement is correct the Water Company's assessment needs to be raised several dollars.

Some one broke into the Assembly House and took all the silver ware. Who ever it was evidently had been sleeping in the house for several evenings. A candle, almost burned up was left on a stand, also a bottle that had contained liquor.

Rev. and Mrs. G. Blakesly will occupy their cottage on E street this season.

The post office in Cumberland closed last Thursday from 3:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. to give the fellow associates of John Waugh deceased, an opportunity to attend his funeral.

The Elberson is now ready for guests and fortunate indeed will be those who find a home at this house.

The Civic Club are brightening up the Park, here and there, with flower beds. My what a good thing it would be, if they had charge of the Park and its program for a year or two. Then there would be something doing.

At the Methodist church next Sunday Pastor McKain will preach a sermon appropriate to Decoration Day, at 10:30 a. m. At night Dr. Hare, the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, will occupy the pulpit.

Mrs. Maize Schill is visiting homefolks in this place for a few days.

Word has reached here of the death of Miss Amanda Smith, the colored evangelist, well known to the Park camp meeting people.

Mr. Charles Tower and family, of Cumberland, are fitting up the Assembly House for guests.

All trains stop here week days and Sunday, except numbers 55 and 16 on Sunday. The new schedule went into effect last Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Carr, of Fairmont, W. Va., are guests of Dr. and Mrs. Logan Carr. Doctor Hugh is getting along nicely, by using a cane, and will soon be ready for active work in his profession, in which he ranks very high.

The sale of the water works of Mountain Lake Park was postponed because there were no bidders. The receivers will continue in charge. It is rumored that the rates announced to take effect June 15 will be withdrawn. This question will be taken before the Public Service Commission of the State and a hearing held at the Park shortly.

Mrs. Susan M. Carskadon, the mother of Mrs. B. L. Harmison, of the Park, died at her home at Headsville, W. Va., on Monday morning, May 17, 1915, at 1:30 o'clock. The funeral took place Wednesday. Mrs Carskadon was a regular summer visitor at the Park.

A VERY DESTRUCTIVE FIRE WAS NARROWLY AVERTED

Last Friday Morning When the Mill of Dixon & Kelso Was Threatened.

At three o'clock last Friday morning the large flouring mill and combined warehouse of Messrs. Dixon & Kelso, located on Liberty street, in Oakland, was discovered to be on fire by members of Mr. A. C. Whetsell's family, who live in the property adjoining, and who promptly gave the alarm which was responded to with the usual alacrity of Oakland's populace.

Within a few moments afterwards the fire was located in the basement which seemed to be burning in a dozen or more places, its spreading being due no doubt to the mass of dust which had accumulated upon every beam and timber in the structure.

For more than an hour the flames resisted the efforts of the firemen who no sooner quenched the fire in one spot than it broke out in another. At times the flames shot out on the third floor but with the usual pluck and tenacity of the local fire fighters they never gave up and eventually saved the building.

The machinery as well as nearly every piece of belting connected with it was more or less damaged. The grain conveyors, which ran from the basement up through the different floors to the individual machines which they supplied, acted as flues and with but very few exceptions these were burned out as well as the woodwork of the mills with which they were connected, entailing quite a heavy loss upon the proprietors. In addition to the loss sustained on account of the fire, water did much additional damage. The figure of loss has not been set by Mr. Dixon nor can any estimate be made until the insurance is adjusted, which will be done in a short time.

The mill is located amidst a number of other large structures including the Naylor buildings and the Frantz hotel, and had the fire gained such headway as to become uncontrollable by the firemen there is every reason to believe that a portion of Liberty street on the South and probably several structures on Second street would have fallen victims of the flames.

In addition to the alarm given as stated above, the operators of the Garrett County and the Bell Telephone systems rendered invaluable aid in calling the different dwellings in which the companies have subscribers.

Venerated and Exalted.

Never before was there a Memorial day when so few veterans of the great war needed the proofs given of the underlying loyalty, gratitude and devotion of their countrymen. But never was there a Memorial day when so many Americans who never were soldiers had need of paying this tribute to the men who risked everything and often lost all that the nation might live in safety, power and glory and go on to wider service to the world, leading the march of mankind.

So the balance holds true. The ranks of the heroes are thinned by time, but the millions who reap where they sowed and rejoice in the fruits of their devotion and valor are a mightier host than ever. And in another sense there is an unfailing adjustment of changing conditions. There are fewer survivors of the heroic and terrible four years' struggle for the Union, but they are venerated and exalted as they never were when their ranks were full and their number made them a great power in the affairs of the nation.—Cecil Whig.

Offutt, trustees, advertise in the columns of The Republican today the sale of two pieces of real estate, one parcel being located in District No. 13, the same being a town lot in Kitzmiller which is improved by a dwelling house, blacksmith shop and stable, which will be sold in front of the Garrett National bank building in Oakland on Saturday, the 26th inst. The other is a small farm containing about sixty acres located in Election District No. 3, which will be sold in front of the National Hotel at Grantsville on Tuesday, the 29th inst.

The Man Who Advertises.

There are but two classes of merchants—those who advertise and those who do not. The man who advertises has the best of the deal. He keeps himself before the public—he keeps his wares before the public—and he keeps their quality and price uppermost in the public mind. People talk about a man who advertises, because they know he has something worth advertising—or he wouldn't advertise.

THE MONTH OF MAY HAD BUT EIGHT CLEAR DAYS

Rain Fell Eighteen Days Out of The Thirty-One During Past Month.

"The old saying, 'April showers bring May flowers,' fell just one month late this year," complains the Grafton Sentinel of yesterday, "and of course a new record has been established."

April to all intents and purposes was a pleasant month, as all in this community will remember, and some very summerish weather prevailed during a great part of that month, but the month of flowers, all agree, fell short in so far as the requirements for the month of May are concerned. There were flowers, there is no doubt, but the rain took first place with the flowers a bad second.

Instead of May being the month of flowers it might be re-christened the month of rain, as it surpassed all spring months in amount of precipitation this year. The month in its entirety was probably one of the most dreary that local people have experienced in many years. It was rain, rain, rain, day and night. Few days were there that rain did not fall, or there were not indications that "more" would follow soon.

During the period there were eighteen days on which rain fell in quantity, and one additional day when there was a trace of rain, that is, when there was some rain but not sufficient to record.

Of the thirty-one days in the month only eight were clear. There were seven that were partly cloudy and sixteen cloudy.

June, to judge by the days that have come and gone, promises to rival May. Thus far her average for rainy days has been one hundred per cent, and as Josh Billings says, "thet is a hummin' averidge."

Specialist in Penmanship, who will spend next week at the Oakland Summer Normal School, giving the teachers special instructions in that subject. The Palmer business system of Penmanship is the style Mr. McAndrew will advocate.

Pupils of the Oakland High School are facing this week their final examinations which fully explains the frowns and wrinkles they carry about on their faces.

Mr. Earl Savage, son of Mr. Charles Savage, made a business trip to Hagerstown Monday with the expectation of purchasing a motor truck and driving it home.

Mrs. Theodore Renninger, of Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived in Oakland Tuesday and will remain here some days as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Renninger.

Last Thursday's Bradford (Pa.) Star and Record contained the following concerning an Oakland lady who has been on a visit to relatives in that city: "Mrs. A. Beckman of No 72 Clarence street, entertained a number of her friends at 1 o'clock dinner yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Tekla Johnson, of Oakland, Md., who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Swan Cronwell of 78 Clarence street. Miss Johnson will leave today for her home. During her visit to Bradford, Miss Johnson made many friends who entertained in her honor."

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence V. Guard, of Friendsville, accompanied by their two children, and also by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. H. Friend, Jr., Orval A. Welch, cashier of the First National Bank, and Rev. A. S. Wolfe and son, a former minister of Friendsville, but now stationed at a point near Clarksburg, motored to Oakland Monday where Rev. Wolfe took the train for his home. The latter had been to Friendsville where on Sunday he delivered the memorial address to the Knights of Pythias of that town. The return to Friendsville was made Monday evening.

MT. LAKE WATER RATES.

Public Service Commission Will Take Matter Under Advisement.

As one of those interested in Mountain Lake Park, Mr. L. A. Rudisill, secretary of the Community, has received a letter from the Public Service Commission of Maryland stating that members of the Commission will be at the Park on or about June 15th, when a joint meeting of the Community Board, the Mountain Lake Park Association and representatives of the water company will be held for the purpose of taking testimony relative to the change of rates proposed in a recent circular issued by the receivers of the water company.

The rates in force will not be changed prior to July 1st, even should the Commission grant the increase demanded by the water people, which is not a probability in view of the service accorded the subscribers in years past.

Operated on At Sanatorium.

Last Friday afternoon three surgical operations were performed at the Home Sanatorium in Oakland by Dr. A. H. Hawkins, of Cumberland, assisted by Drs. McComas, Broadwater and Hinebaugh.

Frederick A. Thayer, Jr., underwent an operation for appendicitis and is doing exceptionally well. Miss Ella Beckwith was successfully operated upon for the relief of a trouble of long standing, and Mrs. Henry Shaffer, of near Mason school house was operated upon for a disease of the intestines. All of the patients are reported in excellent spirits this morning and well on the road toward recovery.

Band Concerts.

The Mountain City Band will give an open air concert next Tuesday evening if the weather permits. Recently a petition was circulated by members of the organization asking for the support of the citizens and it was very generously subscribed to. As a result of this encouragement concerts will be given on regular evenings all summer.

MEMORIAL DAY WAS TOO WET FOR PEOPLE

Resulting In It Being Almost Wholly Unobserved Except By A Few.

Sunday was Memorial Day and it had been arranged by the veterans and all others who usually take part in the observance of the day to follow the annual custom of marching to the cemetery and there decorate the graves of the dead, both soldier and civilian, but the day was one of perpetual rain, the water falling in torrents from long before daylight until well along into the evening which kept the people indoors except in a few instances.

At two o'clock about thirty members of the Knights of Pythias and a dozen or more members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., assembled at their respective lodge rooms in the Pythian building and after conducting the ritualistic services there they marched in a body to the cemetery and decorated the graves of their deceased brethren.

On Monday, the weather having cleared, a detail of veterans and a few of the members of the Sons of Veterans, went to the cemetery and after erecting a flag staff and running the colors into position on it, the graves of the dead soldiers were decorated.

Civilians who have members of their families buried in the grave-yards generously strewed flowers over the mounds covering their loved ones and as a result of their work coupled with that done by the organizations mentioned above, the cemeteries presented beautiful appearances.

WELLER IS OUT FOR GOVERNOR

Chairman Of State Roads Commission Has Decided To Run.

CANDIDATE OF NO FACTION

Will Ask For Direct Support Of Republican Party Rank And File.

IS SUPPORTED BY LEADERS

O. E. Weller, of Baltimore county, chairman of the State Roads Commission, Friday night announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor. The announcement was not entirely unexpected, as Mr. Weller has been communicated with during the past several weeks by many party people of all sections of the state, including Baltimore city, who urged him to enter the contest.

During Thursday he consulted with many of his friends and prominent Republicans and then decided not to withhold his annouucement any longer. The announcement was made in a formal statement, in which Mr. Weller explained that he was not the candidate of any faction of the party; that his candidacy is in compliance with the wishes of many voters throughout the state, and that he would appeal for support directly to the rank and file of the party.

He reserved until a later date the announcement of his platform, which will be along constructive lines and with the aim of giving the state an effective and businesslike administration. His declaration this far ahead of the primary election, Mr. Weller explained, is because of his intention to conduct an active campaign, to meet the voters personally and to prepare at once for the general election next November.

His formal statement setting forth his candidacy is as follows:

MR. WELLER'S STATEMENT.

"At the request of many voters in every section of the State, including Baltimore city, and after due consideration and reflection, I have decided to announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor of Maryland. I am making this declaration weeks in advance of the primary election because it is my intention to conduct an active campaign, and I desire to meet the voters personally and prepare for the general election next November.

"Later I shall announce my platform, which will be on constructive lines and with the aim of giving the State an efficient and businesslike administration. It is sufficient to say at this time that I shall appeal for support to the rank and file of the Republican party in Maryland, and am the candidate of no faction of it.

"In addition to the many members of my own party who have urged me to become a candidate for the Governorship, I have been encouraged and influenced in reaching my decision by pledges of support in the general election from men in all walks of life who are not registered Republicans."

The first mention of Mr. Weller as available gubernatorial timber was made early last February while the candidate was in Florida. His name went from one end of the state to the other in his absence, and on his return in the spring the first formal offers of support were tendered him. At that time Mr. Weller explained to his friends that he was not a candidate, and that while he, as would any other citizen of the state, recognize the honor of being nominated, and, perhaps, elected governor of Maryland, that at the same time he was not seeking the nomination.

Despite his attitude the talk of his availiability continued and when the Democratic contest began to shape up additional appeals began to flow into the Roads Chairman, so that he consented to be a candidate. Many prominent leaders joined in these urgings, but it was not until Mr. Weller heard from numbers of the rank and file of the party that he really considered the matter seriously.

Former Senator William P. Jackson, the Republican national committeeman of Maryland, has also been in communication with many sections of the state of late, and it is said that, he too, asked to urged Mr. Weller.

For a time it was thought that Mr. Weller would make no public decision until after the return home of Governor Goldsborough. Within the past few days, however, the situation so developed as to necessitate him making a decision at once; in other words, it was plainly put to him to announce that he either would or would not be a candidate. Recognizing this situation, Mr. Weller then decided to make the announcement without further delay.

Beforehand, however, it is said, a telegram was sent to the Governor outlining the plan and expressing the hope that he would be in accord with the Weller candidacy. While he has made plain that he would appeal to the rank and file, it is understood that Mr. Weller will be supported by Senator Jackson, Conhressman Sidney E. Mudd and their friends on the Eastern Shore and in Southern Maryland; former Collector William F. Stone, Col. Edward C. Caraington, Charles H. Holtzman and Senator Zihlman, of Western Maryland, and by many other Republicans, who have of late been prominent in the affairs of their party. In addition, it is understood that a strong contingent among the Republican business element of the state stands strongly for Mr. Weller, believing that he has demonstrated that if elected Governor he will give the state a clean-cut business administration.

Col. Edward C. Carrington, Jr., aided in clarifying the Republican situation yesterday by announcing that he would support him. The Colonel refers to the fact that he had been urged to be a candidate himself, but that he was not inclined to enter the field. Explaining the position he has taken toward Mr. Weller, the Colonel in his statement said:

A number of my friends have been urging me to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, but I am not inclined at this time to do so. It is apparent, however, that the Republican party nominate a man behind whom all elements of our party can unite, and many prominent Republicans regard Mr. Weller as such a man. Should Mr. Weller conclude to become a candidate, I believe he can secure the united support of the party. Should he do so, I will support him with pleasure, and I believe if he is nominated he will be elected.

Many Republicans are hoping that there will be no primary election contest within their party. They believe that with the Democrats rent asunder the chances of G. O. P. success in the general election will be much greater if no primary sores are occasioned. William T. Warburton is now in the field and there has ben some talk that Governor Goldsborough is also ambitious of renomination.

Senator William P. Jackson of Salisbury, Republican National Committeeman for Maryland, is among a number of party leaders who have already issued, or who, it is stated, intend shortly to issue statements favoring Mr. Weller's candidacy. Senator Jackson's statement follows:

MR. JACKSON'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Jackson's statement is as follows:

"In an interview published on December 30, 1914, in which I stated my determination not to be a candidate for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination, I used these words:

"'I am deeply interested in the success of the Republican party, however, and to that end I shall do all in my power to bring about the selection of a candidate who can lead the party to victory. My faith in Republican national policies and my belief that the cause of good government and of the rejuvenation of this State into an efficient, progressive organism can best be promoted by Republican success have never wavered.

"'Our candidate must be a representative Republican who can attract the united and enthusiastic support of his party and also of the substantial citizens and business interests, irrespective of party affiliation. He must be able to inspire confidence as well as enthusiasm. He must be conspicuously better and abler than his opponent of the other party. I shall do all in my power to urge my party to select such a man, for only thus may party success and the triumph of those principles to which I am attached be secured.'

"Since then I have been studying the list of possible candidates. It is sufficient to say that I believe Mr. Weller more than possesses the qualifications I had concluded a successful candidate must have. He has a lifelong record of successful achievements. He stands for something. He is a representative of modern efficiency. I do not believe that another man can be found in the entire State who embodies so closely the ideal characteristics of a Governor.

"As Republican National Committeeman, it is pleasing to know that we have such an available candidate; as a citizen of Marvland, it is pleasing to know that the voters will have the opportunity to elect a man who will not fail to give the State a magnificent administration of the office.

"I shall do all in my power to make him victorious in the primaries and then in the general election."

THE CANDIDATE.

Mr. Weller, the candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, is a man of broad education and large experience in practical affairs.

He was born in Reisterstown on January 23, 1862, so that he now is 53 years of age. His early education was received in the public schools and he graduated from the Franklin High School, in Reisterstown, when 16 years old, in the first class to graduate from the school. He then successfully took a competitive examination for appointment to the Naval Academy.

Mr. Weller entered the Naval Academy in 1877 and was graduated in 1881, the youngest man in his class and the president of it.

He spent two years on a cruise and resigned from the navy in 1883. He took an examination under the then recently enacted civil service law and was appointed to the Postoffice Department at Washington, being the first man appointed to that Department under the law. While holding this position he studied law.

LAWYER AND FINANCIER.

In 1892 he moved to Boston and soon afterward became a member of the banking and brokerage firm of Hornblower & Weeks. He maintained that connection for about 10 years, and was in charge of the New York office of the firm during the latter part of the time. About 14 years ago he severed his connection with Hornblower & Weeks because of the condition of his health, and, having accumulated a comfortable fortune, returned to Maryland. He has a home, Glengyle, on Park Heights avenue, not far from his old home at Reisterstown.

After returning to Maryland Mr. Weller rested for a while. At the time Robert Garrett became the Republican candidate for Congress in the Second district, some years ago, Mr. Weller began to take an interest in politics and he managed Mr. Garrett's campaign. That brought him into touch with public affairs in the State, and when Governor Goldsborough looked around for a man to take charge of the State roads work three years ago Mr. Weller was recommended to him. His record as chairman of the State Roads Commission has been commended almost universally.

Mr. Weller married Miss Elizabeth B. Isaac, who was born and reared in Baltimore county.

UNFORTUNATE DEMOCRACY.

Specific Blunders In Laws Passed By Mr. Wilson's Congress.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—"As compared with the Republicans we are an untrained mob, with little knowledge of the rules."

Senator Tillman, Democratic senator from South Carolina, spoke these words in an address to the Uuited States Senate. In the light of subsequent events they have become a warning and a prophecy.

The laws enacted during the last two years are crude and faulty to the last degree. As illustrative of this fact, a few notable examples of the many blunders contained in the tariff bill alone have been hitherto published.

"Lest we forget," a brief summary of these examples follows, merely to emphasize the general principle of inaccuracy prevailing in the Democratic laws:

1. The tariff bill as a whole was a blunder, because it was a revenue measure that produced many millions of dollars less than were needed, a depleted Treasury being the result.

2. The provision for a five per cent discount in duties on merchandise imported in American vessels, involving millions of dollars, was declared inoperative by the Attorney General over a year ago, and went to the Court of Custom Appeals.

3. Another provision effecting hundreds of business concerns is before the same court because of the insertion of an obscure phrase that neither customs officials, lawyers nor business men affected could understand.

4. A vital provision in the income tax law, a part of the tariff bill, relating to deductions allowed in computing gross income, must go to the courts like hundreds of others.

5. The entire income tax provision has been pronounced by the Taxation Committee of the American Bar Association, a nonpartisan body, "as open to the gravest objections both in structure and specific defects," twenty-five imperfections being pointed out.

6. Necessity for amending this law has forced administration officials to the work of formulating a report of its crudities, as a basis for amendment by Congress.

On innumerable occasions during the debate on the tariff and other bills, Republican floor leader James R. Mann of Illinois, cautioned the majority to use greater care, and gave one reason for the dividing line between the two sides of the House as "a lack of information" on the part of the Democrats.

Like Senator Tillman's utterances, these words have assumed prophetic meaning. Literally hundreds of other blunders in the tariff bill might be cited. Typical examples have been referred to because they show the logical results that followed the employment of slovenly, inaccurate methods of legislation.

Practically every important statute passed by the present administration is likewise honeycombed with needless imperfections, that must be corrected by expensive legal procedure or legislative action. They are facts with which everyone should become familiar, and with that object in view the subject will be dealt with in future articles.

Seventeen Year Locust.

Brood VI of the cicada, commonly known as the seventeen-year locust, is expected to appear in May and June this year in scattered localities covering much of the northern and central States lying between the Hudson and Mississippi rivers, extending along the Appalachian elevated plateau into Northern Georgia and South Carolina. This particular brood made its last appearance in this territory in 1898.

Only five counties in Maryland are booked for a visitation this year. They are Carroll, Cecil, Montgomery, Prince George and Washington. Allegany and Garrett counties are not included.

The West Virginia counties adjoining Western Maryland will, however, harbor the locusts. Mineral and Preston together with Berkeley, Hardy, Grant, Jefferson, Morgan and Hampshire have been named by the Agricultural department as localities to be visited.

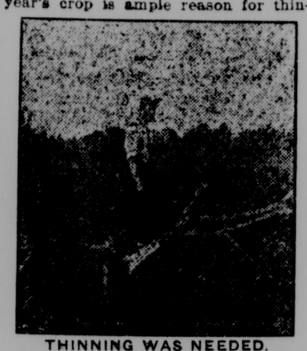
THINNING FRUIT IS A PAYING PROPOSITION.

Should Be Done Early In the Season. Extra Cost Is Little.

HERMAN BECKENSTRATER,
Maryland Agricultural College.

Present indications point to a heavy fruit crop the coming season. Culls will be plentiful and worthless. Therefore, prevent culls by thinning now. You will not then have to pick them this fall, when the good fruit should receive all your attention.

Although the increase in the current year's crop is ample reason for thinning, it is not the only benefit to be derived. By reducing the tree crop this year, there is more likelihood of a good crop next year. Much of the so-called habit of alternate bearing in apple trees is due to their overbearing one year and recuperating the next. Many broken limbs could be averted by proper thinning, and much labor saved in propping.



THINNING WAS NEEDED.

For the best results the thinning should commence immediately after the June drop. It is natural to expect that the sooner the remaining fruit has the entire support of the tree, the better the results will be. Broken limbs may be prevented if the thinning is done in August, but the other benefits will not be so pronounced. In other words, less of the trees energies will be thrown away and more turned to the remaining fruit if the thinning is done early in the season.

As to what extent the fruit should actually be thinned is very largely a local problem. It depends upon such conditions as soil, age of trees, varieties, cultivation and pruning.

Generally thinning the fruit to a minimum distance of 4 to 6 inches, gives satisfactory results. Thinned fruit is larger and usually better colored and flavored than unthinned fruit, and the yield is just is large in bulk and sells at a higher price. The fruit must all be picked some time, and the culls are more quickly and more easily removed at thinning time than at harvesting time. The average cost of thinning is about 10c. per tree."

BUSINESS RECORDS NECESSARY TO SUCCESSFUL FARMING.

Dairy Production Much Increased In Harford County Herd.

G. E. WOLCOTT,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The dairy farmer is a producer and a manufacturer. He produces the raw material in the form of feed; and from the feed manufactures a finished product. The finished product may be milk, cream or butter. The producing end of the business may be successful; that is the farmer may grow the crops cheaply enough so that the market price will show a profit over the cost of production. However, if business methods are not used in changing the raw material into the finished product enough may be lost to wipe out the profit from growing the crops. The crops when turned over to the dairy cow should be charged to her at their market value; and a system of records should be kept to determine whether she is using the feed so as to return a profit. The manufacturing end of dairy farming should be profitable as well as the producing end.

The individuality of the cow and the method of feeding her are the factors which, to a great extent, determine whether or not she is profitable. Where no records of production have been kept, there are sure to be some cows that do not return a profit for their feed. By disposing of these cows, the average production of the herd will be increased. Some cows are fed more than they require; others are fed less than they require. If the feed, if adjusted so that each cow is receiving the feed she requires, the production and profit will both be increased.

The advantages that may be expected when records of production are kept are shown by the results of the Harford County Cow Testing Association, which has completed three years' work in record keeping. The first year the average cow produced 4,786 pounds of milk, 234 pounds of fat, the profit above the cost of feed amounted to $56.86. During the first year the lowest producing cows were sold. Better methods of feeding and absence of the "poorest" cows increased the production the second year to 5,248 pounds of milk, 264 pounds of fat. The profit above the cost of feed was $68.38. The production the third year was still further increased, the average being 5,778 pounds of milk, 276 pounds of fat, with a profit above the cost of feed amounting to $76.80.

These records clearly show that the production and profit may be increased from year to year by using business methods in the manufacturing end of the dairy farming industry.

Many of the most modern farm implements are on display here. Stop in and look them over. While you're here let us show you a roofing that will give you lasting satisfaction. This roofing is

Pronounced "RU" as in RUBY
RU-BER-OID ROOFING
COSTS MORE - WEARS LONGER

RU-BER-OID costs a little more than imitations, but its first cost is practically the last. Customers who have used it for years tell us that RU-BER-OID puts an end to repairs, and that cheaper roofings that they have used begin to go to pieces after a few seasons.

RU-BER-OID (always spelled with one "R" and pronounced "Ru" as in "Ruby") is built to withstand all extremes of climate. It is permanently waterproofed.

Many RU-BER-OID roofs are still serviceable and watertight after more than 20 years of hard wear. We know the value of RU-BER-OID and we recommend it because it always gives satisfaction.

Beware of imitations. We sell the genuine, with the "Ru-ber-oid Man" (shown above) on every roll. It comes in slate gray or in attractive colors—Tile Red and Copper Green. Drop in, we'll be glad to show you the real RU-BER-OID.

"Here Is the Story of My Expense-Proof Farm—

"Before I built my new barn, the silo, the milk house, the feeding trough and other things, I sent for this book—"The Expense-Proof Farm." I found in it the story of Lehigh Cement Concrete—the story of structures that would last forever, that were fireproof and that would never need constant and expensive repairing.

"Then I built my new buildings of Lehigh Cement Concrete. I now have an Expense-Proof farm. The valuation of my property has been increased. My fire insurance rate has become neglible. My cattle have been improved in quality. My hogs are healthier. I have something that I can proudly pass on to the children.

If you intend to erect any new building or rebuild an old one, be sure to use concrete. No building material will give you better returns on your investment. Lehigh Cement Concrete increases in strength with age—has power to resist the elements and the weat of time. Progressive farmers are building everything of concrete.

The high quality of Lehigh Cement is manifested today on thousands of farms where it has been selected exclusively for concrete work—it should be your choice. The greatest care is taken in the manufacture of Lehigh Cement. Every bag comes up to our high standard. More than one tenth of all the cement used in this country is Lehigh. The remaining nine tenths being manufactured by over one hundred other companies.

Uniform qualities of strength, fineness and color—countrywide distributing facilities are reasons which make Lehigh—the National Cement.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The Pyramids.

SECOND LETTER.

In my last I mentioned some of the lessons we may learn from the wonderful pyramids.

Let me begin this article by reminding you that we may learn the lesson of Perseverance.

It took 100,000 men ten years to build the roads over which the stones were carried and then it took seventy years more to construct the great one. What patience! Scores of the workers would die in that time but others would take their place and the work went on showing that it did not depend on any one man or even on men. So goes the work in life, one man may be very successful in his work in the community, he may be very useful and a recognized leader, many may depend upon him, but when his time comes and the Lord calls he drops out of the race of life and some body else steps in and takes up the work where he laid it down. Have we a work to do? It may be very important, too, but it is necessary that we should stick to it. Perseverance overcomes apparently insuperable difficulties.

Always at it it wins the day. He that will not be beaten cannot be beaten. If you keep on pegging away, you will do it sooner or later.

"By many strokes the work is done,
Which cannot be performed at one."

A tailor's needle says, "I go through," you do the same. That is persevere. Don't be beaten and you'll have success.

"If bad be your prospects don't sit down and cry,
But jump up and say to yourself, "I will try."

We may note too, the failure of human purpose. Man may make his plans with great care, but he cannot always carry them out. "Man proposes but God, disposes."

If that mighty Pyramid was built for the preservation of the body of the King it failed.

The Tower of Babel, built to defy God was a miserable failure.

We may be sadly disappointed in our most cherished plans. We may educate our children; sacrifice everything for them only to be disappointed.

We are forcibly reminded that if the object for which it was built was not attained there was a waste of money as well as of talent. What good are they to the world today. They may impress these and other lessons on the mind of the thoughtful, if so they may not have been built in vain. However that may be, it is undoubtedly true that if we do not attain the object for which we were created it were better that we had not been born.

What is the object of our existence? That we may glorify the Lord, in our lives here, and enjoy Him forever. If we fail to reach the goal, heaven, then we are of all creatures the most miserable. There is only one door, enter while it is open. There is only one way, enter while you may.

This leads me to my last thought which is this, earth is not our permanent home. We are but for a while. It behaves us to make our home here happy, then we'll be happy at home. When one ceases to care for home it is a sure sign of moral sickness. Strange that so many care so little for home. Sometimes there is a reason for it, but how a man who has a good wife who tries to make his home a pleasant place for him, can turn his back upon it and prefer to loaf at the saloon, the pool room or the store is hard to understand. A good husband loves the fireside club best of all. He will get more real pleasure out of one evening at home with his family than out of a month in the smoking room of the club, or the companionship of the loafing center. Besides it is lots better for his boys and he will stand a better chance of seeing them go in the way of right and purity, in the way that ends at last in the celestial home. Better never to have lived at all than to live and miss heaven. It is grand to see the home gatherings of Thanksgiving and Christmas times, when the children come from all directions to enjoy the fellowship of the old home for a little while.

It is much the same as it used to be, only the circle is larger, but Father sits at the old place at the end of the table and Mother at her old place at the opposite end. They have put in all the leaves and made the table as long as possible, for the little folks are there to liven the scene and cheer Grand father and Mother. But soon the good-bys are said and they scatter to their own homes. Again we think of the home over there where "They are gathering homeward from every land,

One by one! one by one!
As their weary feet touch the shining strand,
Yes, one by one!
They rest with the Savionr, they wait their Crown,
Their travel stained garments are all laid down,
They wait the white raiments the Lord shall prepare
For all who the glory with Him shall shark."

You have, my friend, a work to do now. So live that you may complete your labor and leave a finished work, a work that in its results shall be far more permanent than the pyramids of Egypt.

JOHANNES.

FROM OAKLAND TO THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

A Description of the Trip Made By Marylanders.

FOURTH LETTER.

Well we left San Diego on Thursday, May 12, at 2 a. m., arrived at Los Angeles at 6 a. m. After taking breakfast at hotel Alexandria we were met by the Chamber of Commerce, with enough automobiles to take the entire party a trip over the city, which was enjoyed very much by every member of our party. In the afternoon the the party was taken out to the Mission plaza. I did not take in this trip, but went to Pasadena, "The city of flowers," instead. There I had the pleasure of taking dinner with Dr. E. H. McMillan, a former Garrett countain and from Accident. The Doctor has been here for the past six years. He has a good practice and I am glad to say is doing very well and seems to think California is the place to live in. After spending a very pleasant evening, I returned to Los Angeles and joined the party at the hotel.

The next morning our party was taken on a trip over the Pacific Electric railway to Pasadena, where we were met by the Board of Trade with automobiles and taken a trip over the city and surrounding country. Near this city is a mountain peak 6,000 feet high, with an automobile road to the top, where they have a magnificent hotel, right on the top of the peak. After the trip our entire party was entertained at luncheon at the Maryland Hotel. Here we met a number of Marylanders, among them were Benjamin Shep, William Wilburn and a sister of Mr. J. C. Cunningham, of Carroll County. Dr. McMillan, being a member of the Board of Trade, was with us at luncheon. After luncheon Mayor Hamilton, of Pasadena, was introduced by the President of the Board of Trade and gave us a short address. In his remarks he referred to Pasadena as the "Garden of Eden." The Mayor was followed by Senator Bulla, of Los Angeles, who referred to Los Angeles as the "City of the Angels," who have passed through the "Garden of Eden" and arisen.

We returned to Los Angeles at 3:15 p. m. Here I had the pleasure of taking dinner with Dr. A. F. Speicher another Garrett countian, whom many of you knew some years ago. The Doctor has been in this city twelve years and is now one of the leading physicions in the city. The doctor is very nicely located, and has a very pleasant home, which is located in one of the fashionable residential sections of the city. The doctor and his interesting family are perfectly happy and think this the country to live in, and when one stops to think of the beautiful flowers blooming all the year and the many, many miles of good roads, it does seem that it would be much more desirable to live in a land like this, than where we have at least six months of cold, wintry winds and frosts nearly every month in the year.

Left Los Angeles at 11:30 p. m., Friday; arrived at Santa Barbara at 5 a. m. next morning. Had breakfast at the Potter Hotel. This is a town of about 6,700 and principally Spanish and Indians mixed. Here we had another drive of about 25 miles over the surrounding country. We visited one of the old Missions, founded about 125 years ago. After leaving this place we went through a fine valley and then crossed a mountain range, with a grade of 250 feet to the mile, and through a tunnel 3000 feet long. After crossing this mountain we soon reached the Salimas valley, which is one of the most fertile valleys in California. This valley is about 150 miles in length. It is here that you see alfalfa grow in abundance. In this valley dairying is carried on very extensively. There are from 50 to 225 cows in a herd. They also raise quite a lot of sugar beets. Near Salimas is the largest sugar beet factory in the world. Salimas is a very pretty little town, located in the midst of this fertile valley and about 20 miles from DelMante where our party stopped for the night.

I stopped off at Salmas to pay Mr. and Mrs. Harne a short visit. Mrs. Harne is a Garrett county girl, who left Grantsville some years ago and came west to make her fortune. After spending a very pleasant night I left Salimas at 7:45 a. m. and joined our party at Del Monte, where we were given a fine drive along Monterey Bay and the Pacific Coast, a distance of twenty three miles. We left Del Monte at 12:10 Sunday. All along the way we saw people cultivating their orchards and plowing same as any other day in the week. It seems they do not regard the Sabbath but work every day and Sunday too.

Our next stop was at San Jose, where we were again met by the Board of Trade of that city and taken a trip through Gilroy valley, one of the finest fruit sections we have gone through since landing in California. San Jose has six banks, with a deposit of seventeen millions two hundred thousand dollars. The banks here get 7 per cent. interest, the building and loan association 7½ per cent. I had the pleasure to ride with Mr. G. E. Graffe, one of the boosters of this city and one of the early settlers. He told us of a deal he had just closed very recently, which was a lot he had bought six years ago for $19,000 and sold it for $75,000 cash. So you can imagine how fast this city is building up. We were driven to Los Altas, where we took our train for San Francisco arriving in this city at 6:30 p. m.

Yesterday was our first day at the fair and as usual, was a rainy day. We are told that it has rained here every day for a month. The Exposition is great, but the attendance did not seem large yesterday. This is Tuesday morning and the sun is shining nice and bright, but in less than an hour it may be raining. Last night our party was given a reception at the California building. Today 12:30 p. m. we will be be entertained at luncheon by President Moore. Tonight a reception at the Maryland building. So you see we are having plenty of entertainment. Well part of California is certainly fine and would be nice to live in, but San Francisco does not appeal to me. I believe from what I have seen of this city I would not want to live here and, in fact, I am still a loyal Marylander and believe in many respects we have the finest country in the world.

THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1915.

NATURE is not as green as she looks. It's the way she dresses herself.

THE Secretary of Agriculture is inspecting the government forests, preparing a nice hiding place for the Democrats next year.

"OUR Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; bur our country, right or wrong."—Stephen Decatur.

ITALIAN tests of plowing with electric motors demonstrated that it cost about half as much as if horses had been used and about two-thirds as much as steam plowing.

"Every time the country forgets., says President Wilson, "a Democrat is elected President." And has always been reminded of the evil consequences of absent mindedness.

There was hardly any likelihood anyhow that Mr. Wilson's unfortunate phrase, "Too proud to fight," would stick in the British vocabulary—not with '76 and 1812 in mind.—Boston Transcript.

1912 was a Republican year. Business failures in that year amounted to 14,000 with total liabilities of less than $200,000,000. Last year the total failures were 17,000 and liabilities almost $400,000,000.

THE President, when his automobile was halted, did not insist on his high prerogative, but immediately obeyed the policeman. Here is a lesson to all motorists which they should be prompt in heeding as the first man in the land was in giving.

THE condition of the United States Treasury at the close of business May 29 was: Net balance in general fund, $14,996,057. Total receipts, $3,182,063. Total payments, $720,400. The deficit this fiscal year is $105,903,059, against a deficit of $38,201,247 last year, exclusive of Panama Canal and public debt transactions.

NEW York is to inaugurate an Americanization Day to have patriotic exercises for naturalized citizens. It is a good idea to impress upon immigrants intending to make this country a home for themselves and for their children that loyalty to the American flag is a necessity as well as a duty, and that patriotism here is a sole and undivided obligation.

A REPUBLICAN PROGRAMME

The Republican party is now in an advantageous position and success is practically certain provided always that the national convention does its plain duty.

Never, perhaps, in our national history was the principle of protection more emphatically vindicated than it has been in the past year. Our national prosperity, which was at high tide during the Taft Administration, has crumbled and disappeared in the two years of the Wilson regime. That the Democratic tariff policy, combined with the impractical and harmful theroies of an Administration given to dreams and visions, has played havoc with the country's business, the great body of Americans are undoubtedly convinced. But the reduced tariff in itself would have been sufficient to wipe out prosperity, and that must be the central issue of the coming campaign. In reaffirming the protective principle lies the surest hope of the Republican party. There must also be pledges of a strong and definite foreign policy, re-establishment of governmental efficiency in all departments, encouragement of every form of legitimate enterprise, an end to faddism and bureaucratic harassments, and an emphatic demand for economy of administration. To these principles and issues every Republican delegate to the next convention should be committed.

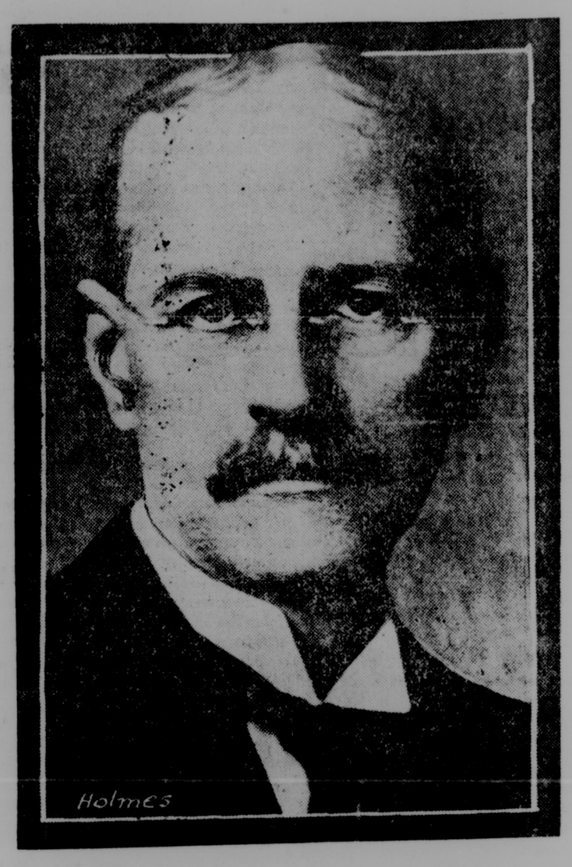
The Republican party is first of all a party of principles. Whatever its former weaknesses, it is now strong and united. Some of the professedly independent newspapers are asking anxiously what the Republicans propose to do by way of changing the conditions brought on by the Democrats. They are fraid of "reaction" to an extreme degree. But their fears are unnecessary. The Republican party was never a party of "reaction." All that has been accomplished of a forward nature in this country that was worth while has been done by the Republican party. There will be no tearing to pieces and no wholesale repeals of existing laws merely for destruction's sake. It is improbable that the Federal reserve banking law will be repealed, but it may be improved as experience suggests needed changes. Undoubtedly a large number of bureaus and commissions will be abolished, because they are useless and were formed to make trouble for business and to give "deserving Democrats" jobs.

Of one thing the county may be sure, Republican success will mean restoration of a high order of statesmanship in Washington. There will be no more Chautauqua entertainers in the Cabinet. Dignity, brains and manhood will be in evidence everywhere. Republican success will mean that the bank vaults will open and a golden flood flow through the arteries of commerce; that there will be plenty of work for all at good wages; that the farmers will receive good prices for their products, the demand for which will not depend upon foreign wars and bloodshed; that factories and mills will reopen and run on full time: that the transportation lines will be busy with the commerce of a thriving nation; and that confidence will lead to the extension and expansion of business in all directions. It is the party, not merely the candidate, that can do these things, and to which the people will look for such results. A Republican President and a Republican Congress are what the people need and what they are going to have, for they are determined that prosperity shall be restored.—Haverhill (Mass.) Gazette.

WONDERFUL AGE IN WHICH WE LIVE

The Governor of Maryland and party attending the Panama-Pacific Exposition talked home to an assembled company of some two hundred persons. The home folk gathered on the roof garden of the the Emerson Hotel, Baltimore, and for more than an hour talked to those assembled at San Francisco, a distance of 3,400 miles. Hobart Smock, the barytone singer, sang "Maryland, My Maryland" which could be heard by those assembled at the Maryland Building at San Francisco as clearly any distinctly as they could have heard the song had they been in the presence of the singer. It was a wonderful achievement and seems to indicate that in the near future it will be possible for one to talk to any part of the civilized world. Not long ago it was discovered that messages could be sent without wires and now science has enabled the human voice to instantly carry to the remotest corners of the earth. With these advances and discoveries does it not seem within the range of possibility that we shall soon hold converse with other worlds? To the religious does it not seem to bring a clearer realization of the spiritual? Through the medium of prayer, the soul in spiritual touch with God, has throughout the ages been able to waft its desires to the unseen world and to be in conscious relation thereto. In the present age distance and space are being annihilated. Truly we live in a wonderful age and still the uncovering by man of new wonders goes on.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.



Mr. O. E. Weller, of Baltimore county, and chairman of the State Roads Commission, on Friday last announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor. He says he is not the candidate of any faction of the party.

CHAPTER III.

Aftermath.

THROUGH the halls resounded the cacophonous clangor of a cracked gong announcing dinner. Sighing, P. Sybarite rose and knocked the ashes delicately from his pipe, saving the dottle for a good night whiff after the theater.

Being Saturday, it was the night on ham and beans. P. Sybarite loathed ham and beans with a deathly loathing. Nevertheless, he ate his dole of ham and beans. He sat on the landlady's right and was reluctant to hurt her feelings or incur her displeasure. Besides, he was hungry.

Miss Lessing sat on the same side of the main dining table, but half a dozen chairs away. P. Sybarite could not see her save by craning his neck. He refused to crane his neck—it might seem ostentatious.

Violet and her George occupied adjoining chairs at another and smaller table. Their attendance was occasionally manifested through the medium of giggles and guffaws. P. Sybarite envied them.

By custom the landlady relinquished her seat some minutes in advance of any guest. When P. Sybarite left the room he found her established at a desk in the basement hallway. Pausing, he delivered unto her the major portion of his week's wage. Setting aside another certain amount against the cost of laundry work, tobacco and incidentals, he had $5 left.

He wondered if he dared risk the extravagance of a modest supper after the theater, and knew he dared not—knew it in a wretchedness of spirit, cursing his fate.

There remained half an hour to be killed before time to start for the theater. George Bross joined him on the stoop.

They smoked pensively.

It was spring—the tenth spring P. Sybarite had watched from that self same spot.

Discontent bred in him a brooding despondency. He felt quite sure that the realists were right about life—it wasn't worth living, after all.

But presently Miss Prim and Miss Lessing appeared and changed all that in a twinkling.

* * * * * * *

"Well," observed Violet generously, "I thought little me was pretty well stage broke, but I gotta hand it to Otis. He's some actor. He had me going from the first snore."

"Some actor is right," affirmed Mr. Bross with conviction, "and some show, too, if you wanta know. I could sit through it twicet. Say, I couldn't quit thinkin' what a grand young time I'd start in this old burg if I could only con this 'Kismet' thing into slippin' me my day of days. Believe me or not, there would be a party."

"What would you do?" asked Molly Lessing, smiling.

"Well, the first flop I'd nail down all the coin that was handy, and then I'd buy me a flock of automobiles—and have a table reserved for me at the Knickerbocker for dinner every night—and"— Imagination flagged. "Well," he concluded defensively, "I can tell you one thing I wouldn't do."

"What?" demanded Violet.

"I wouldn't let any ward po'litician like that there Wazir, or whatever them A-rabs call him, kid me into trying to throw a bomb at Charlie Murphy—or anything like that."

"But, you bonehead," Violet argued candidly, "he had to. That was his part. It was written in the play."

"G'wan! If he'd just stalled round and refused to jump through the author'd've framed up some other way out. Why—blame it!—he'd've had to!"

"That will be about all for me," said Violet. "I don't feel strong enough tonight to stand any more of your dramatic criticism. Lead me home—and please talk baseball all the way."

With a resentful grunt Mr. Bross clamped a warm, moist hand round the plump arm of his charmer and with masterful address propelled her from the curb in front of the theater, where the little party had paused, to the northwest corner of Broadway. P. Sybarite, moving instinctively to follow, leaped back to the sidewalk barely in time to save his toes a crushing beneath the tires of a hurtling taxicab.

He smiled a furtive apology at Molly Lessing, who had demonstrated greater discretion, and she returned the smile in the friendliest manner. His head was buzzing, and her eyes were kind. Neither spoke, but for an instant he experienced a breathless sense of sympathetic isolation with her, there on that crowded corner.

The wonder and the romance of the play were still warm and vital in his imagination, infusing his thoughts with a roseate glamor of unreality wherein all things were possible.

For three hours he had forgotten his lowly world, had lived on the high peaks of romance, breathing only their rare atmosphere that never was on land or sea.

Difficult he found it now to divest his thoughts of that enthrallment, to descend to cold and sober reality, to remember he was a clerk, his companion a shopgirl, rather than a prince disguised as Calander esquiring a princess dedicated to fatal enchantment—that "Kismet" was a quaint fallacy, one with that whimsical conceit of orient fatalism which assigns to each and every man his day of days, wherein he shall range the skies and plumb the abyss of his destiny alternately lord and puppet.

But presently, with an effort, blinking, he pulled his wits together, and, a traffic policeman creating a favorable opening, the two scurried across and plunged into the comparative obscurity of West Thirty-eighth street, sturdy George and his modest Violet already a full block in advance.

"If we hurry we might catch up," suggested Molly Lessing.

"I don't miss 'em much," he admitted, without offering to mend the pace.

She laughed softly.

"Are they really in love?"

"George is," replied P. Sybarite, after taking thought.

"You mean she isn't?"

"To blush unseen is Violet's idea of nothing to do—not, at least, when one is a perfect thirty-eight and possesses a good digestion and an infinite capacity for amusement a la carte."

"That is to say"— the girl prompted.

"Violet will marry well if at all."

"Not Mr. Bross, then?"

"Nor any other poor man. I don't say she doesn't care for George, but before anything serious comes of it he'll have to make good use of his day of days—if 'Kismet' ever sends him one. I hope it will." P. Sybarite added sincerely.

"You don't believe—really"—

"Just now? With all my heart! I'm so full of romantic nonsense I can hardly think."

Again the girl laughed quietly to his humor.

"And since you're a true believer, Mr. Sybarite, tell me what use you would make of your day of days."

"I? Oh, I"— Smiling wistfully, he opened deprecatory palms. "Hard to say. I'm afraid I should prove a fatuous fool in George's esteem equally with old Hajj. I'm sure that, like him, the sunset of my day would see me proscribed, a price upon my head."

"But—why?"

"I'm afraid I'd try to use my power to right old wrongs."

After a pause she asked diffidently, "Your own?"

"Perhaps. Yes, my own, certainly. And possibly another's, not so old, but possibly quite as grievous."

"Somebody you care for a great deal?"

Thus tardily made to realize into what perils his fancy was leading him, he checked and weighed her question with his answer, gravely judgmatical.

"Perhaps I'd better not say that," he announced, a grin tempering his temerity. "But I'd go far for a friend, somebody who had been kind to me, and—ah—tolerant—if she were in trouble and could use my services."

He fancied her glance was quick and sharp and searching, but her voice when she spoke was even and lightly attuned to his whimsical mood.

"Then you're not even sure she—your friend—is in trouble?"

"I've an intuition. She wouldn't be where she is if she wasn't."

Her laughter at this absurdity was delightful. Whether with or at him, it was infectious. He echoed it without misgivings.

"But, seriously, you're not sure, are you, Mr. Sybarite?"

"Only, Miss Lessing," he said soberly, "of my futile, my painfully futile, good will."

She seemed to start to speak, to think of it, to fall silent in a sudden, shy constraint. Compunctions smote him. With his crude and clumsy banter he had contrived to turn her thoughts to sadness. He would have given worlds to undo that blunder, to show her that he had meant neither a rudeness nor a wish to desecrate her reticence, but only an indirect assurance of gratitude to her for suffering him and willingness to serve her.

He respected her silence and held his own in humility and mortification of spirit until they were near the dooryard of their boarding house. And even then it was the girl who loosed his tongue.

"Why, where are they?" she asked in surprise.

Startled out of the deeps of self contempt, P. Sybarite realized that she meant Violet and George, who were nowhere visible.

"Violet said something about a little supper in her room," explained the girl.

"I know," he replied. "Crackers and cheese, beer and badinage, our humble pleasures. You'll be bored to extinction. But you'll come, won't you?"

"Why, of course. I counted on it. But"—

"They must have hurried on to make things ready—Violet to set her room to rights, George to fetch the wash pitcher to the corner for beer. And very likely pending our arrival they're lingering at the head of the stairs for a kiss or two."

"Get rid of this microbe."

The girl paused at the gate. "Then we needn't hurry," she suggested, smiling. "Wait just a minute, Mr. Sybarite."

"As many as you wish," he laughed. "As a matter of fact, I loathe draft beer."

"Do be serious," she begged. "I want to thank you."

He was aware of a proffered hand, slender and fine, in a shabby glove, and took it in his own, uneasily conscious of a curious disturbance in his bosom.

"It was kind of you to come," he said jerkily in his embarrassment.

"I enjoyed every moment," she said warmly. "But that wasn't all I meant when I thanked you."

His eyebrows climbed with surprise. "What else, Miss Lessing?"

"Your delicacy in letting me know you understood"—

Disengaging her hand, she broke off with a startled movement and a low cry of surprise.

A taxicab, swinging into the street from Eighth avenue, had bolted up to the curb before the gate and, pausing, discharged a young man in a hurry.

In a stride this man crossed the sidewalk and pulled up in silence, trying to master the temper which was visibly shaking him. Tall, well proportioned, impressively turned out in evening clothes, he thrust forward a handsome face, marred by an evil, twisted mouth, and peered searchingly at the girl.

Instinctively she shrank back inside the fence, eying him with a look of fascinated dismay. As instinctively P. Sybarite bristled between them.

"Well?" he snapped at the intruder.

An impatient gesture of a hand, immaculately gloved in white, abolished him completely, as far at least as the other was concerned.

"Ah! Miss Lessing, I believe?"

The voice was strong and musical, but poisoned with a malicious triumph that grated upon the nerves of P. Sybarite. He declined to be abolished.

"Say the word," he suggested serenely to the girl, "and I'll bundle this animal back into that taxi and direct the driver to the nearest accident ward. I'd rather like to, really."

"Get rid of this microbe," interrupted the other savagely, "unless you want to see him buried between glass slides under a microscope."

The girl turned to P. Sybarite with pleading eyes and imploring hands.

"If you please, dear Mr. Sybarite," she begged in a tremulous voice, "I'm afraid I must speak alone with this"—there was a barely perceptible pause—"gentleman. If you won't mind waiting a moment—at the door"—

"If it pleases you, Miss Lessing, most certainly." He strutted back to the brown stone stoop, out of ear shot, but within easy hail.

Hearing nothing, he made little more of the guarded conference that began on his withdrawal. The man entering the doryard had cornered the girl in an angle of the fence. He seemed at once insistent, determined and thoroughly angry, while she exhibited perfect composure with some evident contempt and implacable obstinacy. Nevertheless, in a brace of minutes the fellow seemingly brought forth some telling argument. She wavered and her accents rose in doubt.

"Is that true?"

"You don't dare doubt me!"

"Very well," she said in a tone of resignation.

"You'll go?"

"Yes."

He moved aside to give her way through the gate, but she hung back, with a glance for P. Sybarite.

"One moment, please," she said. "I must leave a message."

"Nonsense!"

She showed displeasure in the lift of her chin. "I think I'm my own mistress—as yet."

He growled indistinguishably.

"You have my promise," she cut him short coldly. "Wait for me." And she turned back to the house.

Wondering, P. Sybarite went to meet her. Impulsively she gave him her hand a second time; with as little reflection he took it in both his own.

"Is there nothing I can do?"

Her voice was broken: "I don't know. I must go—it's imperative. Could you—I wonder?"

"Anything you ask," he asserted confidently.

Hesitating briefly, in a tone little above a whisper, "I must go," she repeated. "I can't refuse. But—alone. Do you understand?"

"You mean—without him?" P. Sybarite nodded toward the man fuming in the gateway.

"Yes, if you could suggest something to detain him long enough for me to get into the cab and say one word to the chauffeur"—

"Leave it to me," said P. Sybarite.

"Molly!" cried the man at the gate.

"Don't answer," P. Sybarite advised.

"Molly!"

"Do be quiet," suggested P. Sybarite, not altogether civilly.

The other started as if slapped and strode in to the stoop. "Do you know who you're talking to?" he demanded wrathfully, towering over P. Sybarite, momentarily forgetful of the girl.

Stepping aside, as if in alarm, she moved behind the fellow and darted through the gate.

"I don't," P. Sybarite admitted amiably, "but your nose annoys me."

"You impudent puppy!" stormed the other. "Who are you?"

"Who—me?" echoed P. Sybarite in surprise. The girl was now instructing the chauffeur. "Why," he drawled, "I'm the guy that put the point in disappointment. Surely you've heard of me?"

At the curb the door of the taxicab closed with a slam. Simultaneously the drone of the motor thickened to a rumble. The man with the twisted mouth turned just in time to see it drawing away.

"Hi!" he cried in surprise and dismay.

But the taxi didn't pause. To the contrary, it stretched out toward Ninth avenue at a quickening pace.

With profanity, appreciating the fact that he had been tricked, he picked up his heels in pursuit. But P. Sybarite had not finished with him. Deftly plucking the man back by the tail of his full skirted opera coat, he succeeded in arresting his flight before it was fairly started.

With a vicious snarl, the man turned and snatched at his coat. But P. Sybarite added implacably:

"We were discussing your nose," he persisted.

At discretion, he interrupted himself to duck beneath the swing of a powerful fist. And this last, failing to find a mark, threw its owner off his balance. Tripping awkwardly over the low curbing of the doryard walk, he reeled and went a-sprawl on his knees, while his hat fell off and (such is the impish habit of toppers) rolled and bounded several feet away.

Releasing the cloak, P. Sybarite withdrew to a respectful distance and held himself coolly alert against reprisals that never came. The other picked himself up quickly, cast about for the taxicab, discovered it swiftly making off, already forty yards distant, and with a howl of rage bounded through the gate and gave chase at the top of his speed as the taxi turned the northern corner.

Gravely, P. Sybarite retrieved the stranger's hat. Then he went back to the stoop and sat down.

Turning the affair over in his mind, P. Sybarite decided fairly enough that it was on the whole mysterious, ending at least some color of likelihood to George's gratuitous guesswork.

Certainly it would seem that one now had every right to assume Miss Molly Lessing to be other than as she chose to seem. She might very well be Marian Blessington after all!

In which case the man with the twisted mouth was, more probably than not, none other than that same Bayard Shaynon, whom the young lady was reported to have jilted.

Turning the topper over in his hands, it suddenly occurred to P. Sybarite to wonder if he did not in it hold a valuable clew to this enigma of identity. Promptly he took the hat indoors to find out, investigating it most thoroughly by the flickering, bluish glare of the lonely gas jet that burned in the hallway.

It was a handsome and heavy hat of English manufacture. It carried neither name nor initials on its lining, and lacked every least hint as to its ownership—or, as it seemed, until the prying fingers of P. Sybarite turned down the leather and permitted a visiting card concealed therein to flutter to the floor.

The hall rack was convenient. Hanging up the hat, P. Sybarite picked up the card. It displayed in conventional script the name Bailey Penfield, with the address, 97 West Forty-fifth street. One corner, moreover, bore a pencilled hieroglyphic which seemed to read, "O. K.—B. P."

"Whatever," P. Sybarite mused, "that may mean."

He turned the card over and examined its unmarked and taciturn reverse.

Stealthy footsteps on the stairs distracted his studious attention from the card. He looked up to see George descending with the wash pitcher wrapped in, but by no means disguised, by brown paper.

"Hel-lo! Where's Molly?"

"Miss Lessing?" P. Sybarite looked surprised. "Isn't she upstairs—with Violet?"

"No."

"That's funny."

"Why, when'd she leave you?"

"Oh, ten minutes ago or so."

"She must have stopped in her room for something."

"Perhaps."

"But why didn't you come up?"

"Well, you see, I met a man outside I wanted to talk to for a moment, so I left her at the door."

"Well, Vi's waitin'. Run on up. I won't be five minutes. And knock on Molly's door and see what's the matter."

"All right," returned P. Sybarite serenely.

CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Garage Man

The garage is a motor car clinic.

All kinds of cars with all kinds of symptoms and diseases come there to be cured.

Ask the surgeon in overalls about the Hupmobile.

He will tell you that many of them come for gas and oil.

"But mighty few," he will add, "for repairs."

"I have no reason to 'boost' Hupmobiles," he will say with a grin. "They don't particularly help my business."

After that admission, listen to what he has to say. He knows cars.

He will tell you that the Hupmobile is a wonder.

He will confirm what you already have come to believe—that the Hupmobile stands up under conditions that would kill a car less sturdy.

He will tell you that the Hupmobile motor is a wonder—a glutton for hard work.

The garage man is the friend of the Hupmobile in spite of the fact that it does not swell his income.

He is its friend because he loves a good car—and he can't help saying so. He is always a Hupmobile booster.

Let us add to his testimony with a Hupmobile demonstration.

BROWN ROT WILL RUIN PEACH CROP.

T. B. SYMONS,
Maryland Agricultural College.

Too much importance cannot be attached to the spraying for fruit protection against insects and disease. Often the whole crop is lost through injury by Curculio, followed by Brown Rot. The Curculio winters in the adult stage, appearing just as the foliage develops on peaches and plums. It feeds upon the foliage for a little while, then, the female beetle, laying her eggs, does the principal injury to the fruit by making a semi-circular cut in which its eggs are laid. The egg hatches in a short time and the small larva makes its way into the center of the fruit and there develops. The fruit rots and drops, the larva, escaping into the ground and later developing into the adult beetle.

The beetle is controlled by spraying with Arsenate of Lead at the rate of 2 pounds to 50 gallons of water. This poison is usually combined with the self-boiled lime sulphur wash, a fungicide which will control Brown Rot.

The self-boiled lime sulphur is made by slaking 8 pounds of lime in a sufficient amount of water, and adding 8 pounds of sulphur when the lime begins to slack. The mixture must be kept stirred and the water added as needed, to keep a pasty condition until the lime is all slaked. The heat generated by the slaking lime causes the sulphur to mix physically with the lime in a very fine state, but should not be continued long enough to form much of a sulphide compound as shown by the mixture taking on a yellow or brown color. The mixture is then strained into the spray barrel and the arsenate of lead added.

CAUTION:—The Concentrated Lime Sulphur Solution, such as is used in dormant or early spring spraying should not be used on peach or plum foliage under any circumstances.

Where Brown Rot has previously appeared, the first application of the above mixture should be made just after the fruit sets and before the shucks are off the peaches. A second application two weeks later is very necessary and a third treatment a month before the fruit is ripe is very desirable. Not only will this treatment prevent injury from Curculio and Brown Rot, but also from Peach Scab and other diseases.

ALL IS NOT LUCK IN BROODING

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

"What luck did you have brooding chickens?" How often we hear this question. "Oh I had the worst kind of luck, first the chicks became lousy and I lost about half of them and then the rats got most of what were left, some got drowned in the water bucket, etc., etc.

Far be it from me to say that there is no such thing as luck in raising chickens but I do believe that just about nine times out of ten the trouble arises because of a lack of attention to some minor detail or details.

For instance, if the old hen had been dusted two or three times while she was setting the young chicks wouldn't have gotten lice from her. If a raid had been made on the rats along about hatching time they wouldn't have bothered much. It has been my experience that rats are not very troublesome if kept on the defensive, to use a war term, but once let them get a taste of "chicken," then you have your hands full. It's also a simple matter to fix the drinking water so the chicks can't get into it. If you have to use a deep dish put a brick or rock or something into it so the chick can climb on and jump out if he tumbles in.

BARRELS ARE OFTEN USEFUL FOR BROOD COOPS.

There are other troubles also like gape worms, getting caught out in a storm, being killed by other hens, caught by crows or hawks, being trampled on by mother hen, etc., but even with each of these something can be done as a preventative. For instance, use new or clean land each year for the chicks or cultivate and clean up the old each season after brooding is done and there will not be much trouble from gapes. Have the shelter close by when the chicks are young so they can get in out of a storm. If you let them roam all over the place, having the shelter in one field and then in another, of course they will get soaked at the first storm if you don't get them in. In order to keep them from getting killed by other hens you can and should wherever possible keep the young chicks in yards away from the general flock.

If crows or hawks get after them I'll excuse you for calling it bad luck, but even here there is much that can be done if you will only stop to think. If you can't protect them any other way you can shut them up by themselves until they get a good start. A gun is a pretty good crow scarer, but crows are certainly "wise" and aim to come around when the gun is in the house. A couple of king birds or bee martins have nested in the orchard where we brood our chicks and they seem to be able to keep all bird enemies away from the chicks. If you don't want the chicks trampled on by the mother hen give her a good roomy coop with plenty of light.

KITZMILLER

We are glad to note that a number of our business and professional men have become live wires and boosters and have guaranteed us a three days Chautauqua the latterpart of July or the first of August and will have with us the well known Radcliffe Attractions of Washington, D. C.

The Fraternal Order of Eagles of this place will hold their seventh annual memorial service in the Maryland Theatre on next Sunday at 2.30 o'clock p. m. Hon. Samuel B. Montgomery, of Kingwood, W. Va., will deliver the oration and Dr. E. Judson Miller will give the eulogy. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. Edward J. Hamill, cashier of the First National Bank, is in Clarksburg, W. Va., a few days on pleasure and business.

Our high school has closed after a very successful term and we look forward for the return of Prof. Zeil, by name and ZEAL by nature, this fall, to reopen and push forward this noble cause.

Business is somewhat slow but we are looking forward for better times. For these times we do not know whom to blame.

Politics are very quiet hereabouts, notwithstanding we have three candidates in our midst.

The citizens are arranging to have a good road day in the near future.

The city is the Gibralter of civilization. It is a mixture of the best and the worst of things in the world. It is the greatest success and the greatest failure. It is the greatest battle ground between the good and the bad, between light and darkness, ignorance and wisdom, cleanliness and dirt, righteousness and crime.

About its three great functions of production, distribution and personal service, are gathered the most of the activities of modern society. About the first gather the farmers, the carpenters, the masons, the painters, machinists, factory men and day laborers. About the second gather the merchants, railway men, street car men, livery men, post men and express men. About the function of personal service gather the teachers, preachers, doctors, lawyers, dentists, policemen, firemen, undertakers, grave diggers and many others. Among all these gather the gamblers, the derelicts, the harlots and the parasites who suck a living from the life blood of the city and return for it nothing but destruction and death.

The chief difference between the city and the town is one of size. The problems and needs are the same in the town except they are not so great.

The town is more important than any private enterprise in it. If the town does not succeed the people who live in it cannot succeed as they ought.

What every town needs is a greater spirit of cooperation, more people who will unite to make their town a success. Every town needs leaders. If the people of visions and aggressive spirit could see this and would throw aside their timidity, load up with patience and go to work to develop the latent powers of leadership within them they would do a great thing for their town and would get a greater benefit to themselves.

Our live wires, "The Booster Boys," have guaranteed the coming to our town a Booster Chautauqua. This will afford a fine opportunity for the people of this community to get together and demonstrate that they can unite on a work of community uplift, and if the stronger men of our community who are occupying positions of leadership in smaller groups, such as schools, churches and lodges, will arise and unite with our strong and capable business men and professional men to make this Chautauqua the success it ought to be, it will advance our town and community more in three days than it will be advanced in three years without such an effort.

Let us awake, unite and do this very thing. There is nothing that will pay us so well as getting together and working together for higher and better things.

We read with pride the sparks from the live wires who our boosting our county in every way. Let us all join the boosting dub, and stop being knockers.

To Improve Pike in Pennsylvania.

Road Commissioner R. J. Cunningham, of Pennsylvania, will spend $160,000 for improvement of the Old National Turnpike in Pennsylvania between the Maryland and West Virginia State line.

Work was started last Monday. This will give an improved thoroughfare from Wheeling, W. Va., to the Maryland line, sixty miles.

The above is of local interest because the proposed improvement on the National road will carry out the plan of those who favor this route to the Pan-Amerian Exposition. This improvement to the National road in Pennsylvania means much to Maryland, especially to towns and cities on this division of the "Old Pike" in that it will attract tourists over this route, the most interesting, beautiful and historical of the two routes to the Pacific cost.

BLIGHT OF APPLE AND PEAR

Prof. Norton, of The Experiment Station, Gives Instructions For Its Control.

Blight is now prevalent on apple and pear trees in nearly all parts of Maryland. On some apple trees practically all the fruit has been destroyed. The loss in many orchards in the State is very serious.

This disease has been present to some extent ever since fruit was first grown in this country, but some years becomes worse than usual. It is also found on wild hawthorn, crab-apple, service berry and on many similar cultivated shrubs. It is very injurious to quinces.

The blight first appears in the blossoms, where the bacteria which causes it are carried by bees, or sometimes other insects. The germs multiply in the nectar of the flowers, and from a single such flower, bees may infect the whole orchard.

The disease spreads downward from the flowers between the wood and bark, killing two to ten inches of the twig a day, but later it progresses more slowly, and in apples usually dies out on the young twigs; but sometimes usually in pear, it keeps extending, killing large branches, or the whole tree, or forming cankers in the bark in which the bacteria begin to multiply in the exuding sap around the cankers, or sometimes in late infected twigs. This is the source of infection in the spring.

The blight often goes through short spurs, or sprouts, or wounds of any kind, into the body of the tree, even near or below the ground. Many trees or large branches are girdled and die in this way every year.

CONTROL.

The most effective treatment consists in cutting out the diseased parts. In young orchards and in nurseries where there is naturally but little blight and in old orchards in seasons when blight is not serious, by cutting out every blighted twig and canker as soon as possible, giving special attention to the body and base of the tree, a bad outbreak may be prevented in following years. It is also necessary to destroy all blight in the neighborhood on wild or cultivates trees may carry it long distances. Bees are, however, necessary to pollenate the flowers.

When old bearing trees are badly infected, winter is the best time to cut out the blight. The cuts on large branches or in the trunk should be brushed with a disinfectant and when dry protected by painting with white lead in linseed oil. In cutting blight in the growing season, it is important to wipe the prunning instrument after each cut on a cloth or sponge wet with either carbolic acid, cyncentrated lime-sulfur, 5 per cent. formalin, or other disinfectant to prevent reinfection of the next cut. Cut twigs several inches below where the blight shows, as in spring the germs extend much farther in than they show on the outside.

Keep water sprouts and all spurs off the trunk and main limbs of pear and and susceptible apple varieties so that one useless blighted spur or sprout may not girdle and destroy a whole branch of tree.

Some varieties, such as Yellow Transparent, Wealthy, York Imperial and Fall Pippin apple and Bartlett pear are very susceptible, others like Keiffer and Winesap are less injured.

It will be seen from the above that little can be done now in badly affected orchards to prevent further injury this season, but the community should organize to prevent the spread of this serious disease another year.

PROPER FEEDING IMPORTANT IN GROWING CHICKS.

Necessary Elements For Body Building Should Be Provided.

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Do your young chicks get the necessary bulk in their feed to keep their digestive organs in good trim? Do they get enough protein material for building up and repairing flesh? Do they get enough mineral matter with which to construct a frame work for their bodies?

These are very important things to consider at this time. If you do not have too large a flock and they run on free range they may get the necessary bulk from grass and other green feed on the range. They may get the protein required from the bugs, worms, etc., they are able to pick up. These insects may also supply the necessary mineral matter. All you have left to do then in the feeding line is to give some grain and see that they have water.

But supposing they cannot get these natural feeds. Supposing they are confined in small, bare runs or supposing the flock is so large that the natural feed will not go around. What will you do in this case? Will you keep on feeding simply grains which do not as a rule contain all the necessary elements, or will you give them some bran to supply bulk, meat meal to furnish the extra protein and ground bone to build up a frame work for their bodies?

TOO MUCH WATER.

A suggestive ration is as follows:

Grain or scratch feed fed 3 times daily.

Finely cracked corn, 1 part.
Cracked or whole wheat, 1 part.
Mash fed wet or dry twice daily:
Bran, 4 parts.
Wheat middlings, 2 parts.
Corn meal, 2 parts.
Meat scraps, 1 part.
Salt, ½ pound to each 100 pounds of mash.

Keep water and ground bone before the chicks at all times.

ORCHARDS SHOULD BE THOROUGHLY CULTIVATED DURING GROWING SEASON.

W. R. BALLARD,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Peach orchards should most certainly be thoroughly cultivated, but the methods will need to be modified in different parts of the State for a mountain orchard cannot be handled like an orchard on level land. If the orchard is not to be cropped its management is very simple on level or somewhat rolling land. It should be plowed in spring as soon as the ground is in good plowing condition and be thoroughly harrowed to work the soil into good tilth. Every ten days or two weeks the harrow should be run over the ground to loosen it up unless a heavy rain has packed it down in the meantime, and then it should be harrowed as soon as dry enough. The point is to keep a fine, loose dust mulch to prevent the evaporation of soil moisture.

This harrowing should be continued until about the first of August when as soon as weather conditions are favorable the cover crop seed should be sown. The commercial fertilizer should be applied and worked into the soil just before the cover crop seed is sown. In this way the cover crop gets the immediate effect of the fertilizer, and when this crop is plowed under the following spring it soon decays and makes available plant food for the trees. The cultivation for following years is about the same as mentioned for the first year.

It is a good practice to grow some early maturing hoed crop among the young trees until they begin to bear, but extra fertilizer or manure must be used for this crop so the trees will not be injured. Such crops are early potatoes, tomatoes, melons, sweet corn and anything which is not late in maturing, are best, because late cultivation for late maturing crops may cause late growth on the trees and if this growth fails to ripen it may be winter killed.

After the trees are in good bearing the orchard ought not to be planted to any other crop, yet this is done successfully if intelligently practiced and plenty of fertilizer or manure is used.

The small grains like wheat, rye and oats should never be allowed to mature in the orchard because they require so much moisture of which they rob the trees.

On many farms there is a tendency to be so busy planting corn or getting ready for harvest or planting cow peas and soy beans that the garden gets precious little attention at this time. A good habit to form is to take off Saturday afternoon for odd jobs around the place, especially in the garden. It's a good time to ease up a bit and [illegible]

OAKLAND HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

Were Held In Maryland Theatre Last Friday Evening.

With impressive exercises the largest class in the history of the local High School, numbering twenty, graduated before an audience of five hundred people in the Maryland Theatre last Friday evening.

The programme was opened with an invocation by Rev. A. D. Appleton, rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal church.

A prominent feature of the excellent programme was the splendid and eloquent address by Dr. Charles C. Ellis, Ph. D., of Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa., whose subject was "The Largest Word in the Dictionary, or Possibility." It was a very practical address and the speaker expounded interesting facts concerning education, its possibilities, and its relation to the world. Striking illustration were used, at times humorous, at other times pathetic. At the conclusion of his address Dr. Ellis received continued applause, and the people of Oakland feel that he has left with them some things well worth while, and that shall not be soon forgotten.

Short salutatory and valedictory orations were delivered preceding the addresses.

The piano duets by Miss Marion Hamilton of Altoona, Pa., and Mrs. C. Edward Bender were well received. Mrs. Gordon Mealy rendered two vocal solos in a very creditable manner. The selections by the orchestra were much appreciated by the enthusiastic audience.

Upon the presentation of diplomas and certificates of merit Superintendent F. E. Rathbun made a few helpful remarks and the programme was concluded by the benediction by Rev. J. C. Ely, of the Presbyterian church.

AN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Car of Assemblyman W. W. Savage Skidded and Threw Occupants Out.

The automobile of Mr. W. W. Savage, of Friendsville, which was being driven by the owner of the machine on the road leading from Oakland to the Park yesterday morning, skidded into the ditch alongside the road at a point near the residence of Mr. William Weber, and threw Mrs. Savage and her daughter from the rear seat into the roadway. The former was not injured in anyway, but the daughter was somewhat hurt, she being thrown with considerable force face downward into the roadway, escaping with a few slight bruises and scratches about her face.

At the point where the accident occurred there is a sharp twist in the road and at the side is a wet spot upon which the machine ran with such suddenness that it got beyond control of the drives, going into the ditch. Both wheels on the left side of the car were more or less damaged, seven or more spokes in each being either broken or splintered.

Mr. Savage and his family returned to their home in the car yesterday afternoon.

The Oakland Creamery.

The Oakland creamery owned by Mr. Truman Casteel, and under the management of L. W. Hopkins, is making good and becoming a valuable asset to the farmers of this vicinity. Mr. Hopkins paid out $800 last week for butter fat and made 4,000 pounds of prime butter. Mr. Hopkins reports an increase in the daily receipt of butter fat. He estimates that he will pay out during the month of June at least $4,000. Excellent pasturage increases the bank account.

With better markets than ever before, Garrett county farmers are showing much interest in dairying. A great many will remodel their barns during the coming summer, others will build silos, others will improve their herds by better breeding.

BANK CASHIER AT KITZMILLER HAS BEEN MISSING

From His Home Since Saturday, May 29th--Was Last Seen In Cumberland.

Mr. Edward J. Hamill, cashier of the First National Bank at Kitzmiller, Garrett county, who is also interested in coal operation at his town, being a stockholder and one of the directors of the Hamill Coal Mining Company, has been missing from his home ever since Saturday afternoon, May 29th, upon which day he left Kitzmiller with the intention of going to Clarksburg, W. Va., for the purpose of meeting a number of coal operators on business.

Mr. Hamill was last seen in the Windsor Hotel at Cumberland to which point he went direct from his home over the Western Maryland Railroad, arriving there in the afternoon of the day above mentioned. He remained at the hotel until 11:30 o'clock that night, but instead of doing so he left the hotel shortly afterward and notwithstanding every effort on the part of his friends and members of his family to locate him, his whereabouts still remain a mystery. His failure to fill his business appointment in Clarksburg caused his friends to make an effort to locate him.

For several months past Mr. Hamill has been suffering from the effects of a nervous breakdown due to overwork, but his condition was not thought to be serious, hence he continued to carry on business at the bank until the day of his disappearance.

While the officials of the bank placed every confidence in Mr. Hamill's intergity and never questioned his morals in the conduct of the business of the institution in which he was the head, they have caused a thorough examination of his books and accounts to be made with the result that everything was found intact and the accounts straight.

Mr. W. L. Thomas, assistant cashier of the First National Bank in Oakland, is now in charge of the Kitzmiller bank and will remain there until Mr. Hamill is located or his successor is chosen.

Memorial Service at Grantsville.

On last Sunday the members of the Grand Army of the Republic at Grantsville held their annual memorial service in which a very few survivors of that grand army which marched in 1861 remained to take part. It was the editor's privilage to be in Grantsville Sunday afternoon a few minutes before the veterans dispersed to their respective homes and it was indeed a pathetic sight to witness the decreptitude which has shattered the frames of those who were the bloom of the nation fifty years ago. On the street at Grantsville were less than half a score of those who wore the blue, they having just returned from the cemetery where they had honored their deceased comrades in the only manner left possible for them to do—by planting on their graves, a flag and strewing them with natures gifts, flowers which are just now growing in profusion in every nook and corner of the woods and gardens. The veterans were accompanied in their services by a delegation of the Modern Woodmen of the World and an armed escort of young men.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. SYLVESTER H. RYLAND.

Mrs. Sylvester H. Ryland, wife of one of Meyersdale's oldest and most highly respected residents, and mother of Dr. W. H. Ryland, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Younkin, at Grantsville, Md., at 2:30 o'clock last Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Ryland was a daughter of the late John Slicer, Sr., a former hotel-keeper of Grantsville. Her three brothers, William, John and Nathaniel, all deceased, were former hotel-keepers of Meyersdale. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. William Shafenberg and Miss Theresa Slicer, of Cumberland, Md.

JURY TERM OF THE CIRCUIT COURT CONVENED MONDAY

Very Little Business Claiming Attention Aside From the Grand Jury.

Judge Robert H. Henderson, of Cumberland opened the June term of the Circuit Court Monday at 10 a. m.

The grand jury, as follows: Thomas J. Johnson, Foreman, Ellsworth G. Moon, Christian C. Durst, Joseph F. Lewis, James A. Kelly, Scott Elliott, Cyrus E. Dewitt, William Wallace Schlossnagel, Albert C. Brenneman, Alfred G. Barrick, Paul E. Mitchell, Ralph Engle, Orville M. Meyers, James B. Frantz, Robert C. Townshend, William L. Thomas, secretary; Ezra H. Wolf, Herbert B. Paul, J. Arthur White, John H. Sanders, Willis S. Martin, Thomas Fike, William Harper Bartlet, was addressed by the Judge who briefly called their attention to the duties expected of them. He spoke of reports of illegal sale of liquors and requested a careful investigation of this subject.

The jury retired to their room and entered upon their duties. It is rumored that seventeen indictments were found Monday. A large number of witnesses were examined Tuesday and indictments followed.

The docket was called and a large number of cases reported settled and others continued.

The appeal docket was taken up.

W. C. Jones vs. Wm. F. Rodeheaver. E. R. Jones for plaintiff and F. A. Thayer for defendant. This trial consumed Monday's session. The Judge gave Mr. Rodeheaver $20 and assessed the costs to Mr. Jones.

Andrew Shartzer vs Charles Kidd was called. Renninger & Offutt for plaintiff and G. S. Hamill for defendant. Plaintiff filed motion for continuance to September term of court. Granted.

The trial docket was taken up.

The case of Hicks & Hogue Dry Goods Co., vs. Ferguson occupied the attention of the court Tuesday and Wednesday morning.

The Judge ordered Clerk Tower to issue summons on two or three witnesses whose breath indicated that they had been drinking liquors, to appear before the grand jury to tell where they got their drinks. To say that these men were surprised would be to state the case mildly.

Attorney Semmes, of Cumberland, was in attendance at court.

Postmaster Thomas B. Hinebaugh, of Fearer, was in Oakland yesterday attending court as a witness before the grand jury in a case wherein Mr. Hinebaugh's name had been forged to two checks by a young man giving his name as George Thomas.

Dr. H. P. Copland, of Kitzmiller, was in the city yesterday morning for a few hours, coming here on business. Dr. Copeland is also one of the Republican candidates for nomination for the House of Delegates and is contemplating making an active campaign very shortly.

G. B. M. Friend and Ernest Hilleary unloaded two 12 x 30 silos the latter part of last week and took them to their farms. Mr. Friend has taken up the last stump on his farm. Twenty years ago the farm was woodland, today there are 123 acres cleared and in use.

Miss Mary Martin, of this city, returned home yesterday from Baltimore where she visited relatives for the past three weeks. She was accompanied home by her cousin, Miss Bertha Sauerwald, who will spend the summer with her grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Wolfe.

Rev. A. Moore, D. D., had charge of the quarterly meeting exercises of the Howesville charge last Saturday and Sunday. It was also the occasion of the dedication of the new Methodist church at the Denver appointment. Dr. Moore preached the quarterly sermon Saturday night and the dedicatory sermon Sunday morning. Rev. W. W. Morris preached Sunday at 3 p. m. Large crowds of people attended the services Sunday. Dr. Moore's sermons are highly spoken of.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Gnagey of West Milton, O., who have spent several months visiting their son, J. Milton Gnagey, and family, will start for the annual meeting of the Church of the Brethren at Hershey, Pa., tomorrow, via Johnstown. They will be accompanied to the latter place by Mrs. Gnagey's blind aunt, Miss Mary Livengood, who will remain with her niece, Mrs. W. T. Williams, until Mr. and Mrs. Gnagey return from Hershey and take her with them to their home in Ohio for a prolonged visit, and perhaps to make her home with them permanently.—Meyersdale Commercial.

BAND CONCERT

First of a Series of Delightful Entertainments by Oakland Organization.

Tuesday evening the Mountain City Band, which was recently reorganized and which has been under the instruction of Prof. McIlwee, of Keyser, gave the first of a series of openair concerts to a large and most appreciative audience which gathered on Second street, following an announcement published in this paper last week.

The program rendered by the band Tuesday evening included a number of difficult selections, among which were numerous solo parts played in excellent style by its members.

Prof. McIlwee, their instructor, feels confident and so expressed himself Tuesday evening, that the band is making rapid progress and will soon excel any other similar organization in this section of the country.

The concert was highly appreciated by those who heard it and expression was given to the hope that the Oakland people may have the pleasure of being again entertained at an early date.

Should the weather be unsettled the fete will be conducted on the porch at the residence of Dr. Reed.

Mrs. Cora Rinard, of Kentland, Indiana, is in Oakland on a visit to her brother, Mr. Scott T. Jones, and members of his family. Mr. Jones, who has been quite ill for upwards of three weeks, is slightly improved this morning.

JUDGES MOON AND HARVEY OUT FOR REELECTION

Mr. George Warnick, of Bloomington, Also in the Race for Commissioner.

Judges J. Thomas Moon and Charles S. Harvey of the Orphan's Court Bench, are candidates for renomination as will be noticed by referring to the eighth page of The Republican today.

Both gentlemen have had valuable experience in the office for which they again aspire. Their qualification for the office has never been questioned and their nomination and reelection will insure to the people of the county a continued well conducted court where the affairs of those having business before it will be fairly and impartially determined.

For County Commissioner Mr. George Warnick, of Bloomington, where he is engaged in the general mercantile business, is the latest avowed candidate. Mr. Warnick's ability as a business man is well established. He has been a resident of the county his whole life and has been identified with the Republican party ever since he became of voting age. The office of County Commissioner is an important one, and the qualifications of Mr. Warnick for the careful, conscientious performance of the duties connected with it are beyond question.

Store Robbed at Friendsville.

The store building of Mr. W. W. Savage at Friendsville, was entered on the night of May 30th by a youth named Coddington where he was found by Mr. Savage about eleven o'clock that night, the alarm having been given by passers-by seeing a flash light in the main store room. The boy was searched and upon his person was found articles taken from the store of R. M. Holman. In addition to stealing various articles from Mr. Savage the cash drawer was also rifled and money amounting to the sum of about $13 was found in the building near the spot where the boy was captured.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS

Democratic Tariff Fallacy Still a Matter Unsettled.

Washington, D. C., June 8. The Court of Customs Appeals has just added another act to the comedy of errors in which the Democratic administration takes the star part.

The Court has rendered an opinion on the construction of the provision in the Underwood tariff law intended to give a five per cent discount in customs duties on merchandise imported in American vessels, and has virtually declared that the effect of the provision gives a wholesale discrimination in favor of ships of foreign countries.

In a recent article attention was directed to this classic blunder then pending before the Customs Court. The slovenly methods by which it was enacted were referred to, showing that the Democrats had a vague idea about aiding American shipping, adopted a vague method of extending such aid, and by careless guess work had thrown the whole matter into the courts. It was shown that during the debate in Congress Republicans had given repeated warnings that, apart from its policy, the phraseology of the five per cent section was meaningless and should be corrected to accomplish its purpose.

The decision of the Court of Customs Appeals completely confirms the statements, and rubs it in by saying:

"The wisdom or expediency of the policy is a matter into which we may not inquire nor have we the right to suspend the operation of the statute because we may think its purpose is not adequately accomplished."

It will be recalled that the language of the five per cent. discount section provided that "nothing herein shall be so construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of our treaties with foreign nations."

It appears from the opinion of the Customs Court that there are at least 5,500 treaty nation vessels in the American foreign trade, and that there are not over fifty American vessels. As a "favor" to our own ships the Democratic Congress, according to this decision, gave an EQUAL BOUNTY to 5,500 competing foreign vessels.

In its decision the Court referred to statistics showing that the discount provision reduces duties five per cent. upon considerably more than one-half of all our duitable imports. After all its labored adjustment of tariff rates the Democrats, in this single paragraph proposing a five per cent. discount, practically destroyed the effect of all preceding schedules, and in the same breath conferred upon foreign ships a valuable privilege intended only for our own ships.

In harmony with the decision of the Court of Customs Appeals there will be a refund of customs duties estimated at from twelve million to fifteen million dollars. Who gets the benefit of this refund? Eventually by far the larger part of it will find its way into the coffers of foreign manufacturers.

Unless the United States Supreme Court reverses the decision of the Court of Customs Appeals, these millions of dollars must come out of a treasury already facing a huge deficit resulting from gross mismanagement by the present administration.

Encourage Your Boy.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside a contributor advises parents in part as follows:

"Does the boy want to leave the farm? Well, whose fault is that?

"Has he been useful? Has he ever been told that he is useful?

"Has he an interest in the farming? Does he own any live stock? Does his father help the boy as cheerfully as he expects the boy to help him?

"To be sure, when I was a boy I had to work hard and didn't expect any pay for it. I was expected to obey my parents. I was up in the morning to build fires, and it was my frostbitten fingers that unlocked the barn door at daybreak.

"But that was a long time ago. In those days there wasn't a town every few miles with moving picture shows, street cars, and tempting jobs which pay real money. Things have changed."

A Great Home-Coming.

The Maryland State Normal School preparatory to leaving its present quarters—Carrollton and Lafayette Avenues—will have a home-coming night on the eleventh of June in the old building.

It is hoped that all of its graduates who can possibly come to the city will do so, and make this last grand rally in the old hall a memorial occasion.

There will be music—instrumental and vocal, and community singing for the quiet folks; dancing for those who wish to enjoy the mazy whirl, and refreshments for all.

Graduates who expect to attend the home-coming will apply to the school for cards of admission.

A roof goes on last but consider it first. Don't choose quickly. What looks like a saving at first cost may in a few years be a big expense. See our lines and prices.

FROM OAKLAND TO THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

A Description of the Trip Made By Marylanders.

Possibly you have said, "why are the Marylanders having such a good time and are being so royally entertained by the chambers of commerce and boards of trade?" California is known as the "land of sunshine and flowers." It is also the home of "Boosters."

The city of Los Angeles appropriate $300,000 to the chamber of commerce to entertain the tourists and delegations from all over the world, en route to the exposition.

You could place the states of New York, New Jersy, Maine, Massachusets, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island in the State of California and then have a big farm left.

The above states have an area of 155,328 square miles, and yet the state has less population than New Jersey. They are boosting to increase their population.

San Francisco received the delegation with open arms and gave us a gorgeous, good time every minute we were in the city. The dinners and receptions were most enjovable. We met many Marylanders, among them some pioneers of early days. It has been said that the Maryland delegation was accorded the greatest reception and given the most royal entertainment.

Californians are generous and hospitable. They know how to entertain, and what they do, they do well and they make you feel at home.

Anv person who is able to do so, and can spare the time should visit the Pacific coast this year, to see both the country and the exposition. One can see so much for so little money, the trip would never be regreted. It is an opportunity that may never come again.

Last night we bade farewell to San Francisco and began our homeward journey, our party reduced to 38. Some of the original party returned by a different route, and others to leave at later dates.

I do not boast, when I say, that the conductors on the Santa Fe and on the Southern Pacific R. R., remarked that they have been over all the main trunk lines and have been with all kinds of delegations and all kinds of parties on special trains and locals, but never have been with any delegation or party of tourists who were as congenial and well behaved as the Maryland party. They say and many of you know it is hard to select even a small delegation who don't have some one with a grouch on and dissatisfied with something, but in our parly there was not one word of complaint and every one seemed to enjoy every minute of the trip.

Last night we passed through Sacramento Valley and to day we are going up along the Sacramento River, with mountain ranges on both sides, covered with snow. We have just passed through Shasta Springs where we left the river and are now climbing up the mountain sides. We just passed the town of Sisson, ten miles from the timber line of Mt. Shasta, which is 14,424 feet above sea level and is completely covered with snow. It is a beautiful sight. It may seem almost unbelievable to many of you that here we are passing through this range of mountains, with the snow capped peaks on both sides, and the sun shining bright and flowers blooming all along the way. Mt. Shasta is 386 miles from San Francisco and 443 miles from Portland, Oregon. All along the river we saw the cabins of miners who are searching for gold. There were several washouts recently and one of the track walkers picked up a nugget worth $275, which was washed down from one of the small streams.

This is Sunday morning. We are three hours from Portland. After leaving California and crossing the mountain into Oregon our first stop was at Ashland, a beabtiful little town of 6,000. Here we were met by the mayor of the town, who had arranged to give us a 20 minute ride over their village. This we enjoyed very much after a long day's journey over the mountains.

We received a telegram last evening that arrangements were made to show us the city of Portland, where we will spend the day, leaving there about 12 p. m. tonight.

BAD MAN FROM FRIENDSVILLE

Set Confluence Jail on Fire After Futile Efforts to Deport Him.

A stranger hailing from Friendsville blew in here on Wednesday evening, and being of a convivial nature, before the night was over he got hilarious and made Rome howl. After a consultation among the town officials it was decided that the easiest way to get rid of him was to buy him a ticket to the Maryland town of Friendsville, which was done and he was put on board of the train, but he would not stay put. After the train left the station he was found meandering around the depot. A. L. Bird's auto was then requisitioned and a race was started with Capt. George Mickey's cannonball express, known on the time table as train No. 147. By hitting only the high spots the train was overtaken at the City of Charleston, Fayette county. Here he was again put on the train and bade bon voyage. But after the police returned to Confluence, they received a wireless message from the Mayor of Charleston, that the man they deported was still there and raising cain and unless they came and took him away it would be necessary to call out the Henry Clay Militia and Moccasin Drum Corps. So they brought him back and locked him up. After they left him in durance vile he attempted to burn the lock-up and had succeeded in burning a blanket when some children saw the smoke and gave the alarm. Friday morning he was sober, sorry and repentant and was told what the state department told the German minister of foreign affairs, to be very careful in future where he threw his bombs, as he might hurt some one. He was then sent home rejoicing.—Meyersdale Republican.

1915 Fair Notes.

Remember that when you make an exhibit at the Fair September 29, 30 and October first, you are helping to boost Garrett county,

You are encouraging your neighbor to better and more thorough farm work Example is the best teacher.

The grain exhibit at the coming fair should be much larger than that of 1915.

We would call the attention of the women of the homes of the county to the value of canning vegetables for home use. It is one way to reduce the cost of living. Use pint and quart Mason jars, according to the size of the family, and while engaged in this work set aside some jars to be exhibited at the fair.

A prize will be awarded for the largest and best exhibit of canned vegetables in glass jars.

For the largest and best exhibit of berries and fruit. The exhibits must be put up in 1915.

The prize in each exhibit will be cash, one dollar and blue ribbon; the second prize red ribbon and 50 cents cash. This will be in addition to the prize offered by the Fair Association.

This early notice is given to those who will exhibit, in order that they may get ready at once. Rhubarb will be classed with vegetables. The exhibit to consist of one quart jar of each kind of vegetable and fruit.

A special premium, outside of premium offered by the Fair Association, will be given to the boy or girl 15 years or under, who exhibits the largest and best assortment of vegetables grown by the exhibitor. Blue ribbon and two dollars cash; second best premium red ribbon, and one dollar cash.

Third best, yellow ribbon and 50 cents in silver. Remember all the above is in addition to the premiums offered by the Fair Association.

We want to encourage the boys and girls in personal work on the farm.

Get busy boys and girls. Fathers and mothers encourage your children to get busy.

If enough exhibits are presented a boys and girls department will be established, where all their exhibits will be placed. This would be a very interesting department. Shall we have it. What say you boys and girls? Have in it some big pumpkins, big heads of cabbage, etc., raised by the boys and girls of Garrett county, only.

Mr. Farmer, plow up a piece of ground for your boys and girls, harrow it, give them rich soil and they will do the rest. Of course a word of advice now and then should be given, to encourage them in the work.

This is the time to do the planning, after while it will be to late. In helping the children you will feel better. Make your family a blue ribbon prize winning family.

Carrying out this idea will develop your boy and girl into a good practical farm and home manager.

It will add greatly to the success of the fair and it will boost Garrett county. Boost the fair. Talk it up. Enthuse your neighbors on the subject. Make the fair of 1915 a great exposition of what Garrett county producers are doing.

Show the world what Garrett can do when it puts forth an effort to win.

SURE CATCH CROP FOR DRY SEASONS.

Sudan Grass Will Provide Plenty Of Roughage In A Short Hay Year.

NICHOLAS SCHMITZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Sudan Grass should not replace clover, alfalfa, or even timothy where these can be grown profitably, because owing to its quick growth and heavy yield, it is very exhausting upon the land. Its chief value is as a catch hay crop—something to be used for helping out in years when the regular crops of hay are short. The seedbed required is in every respect the same as that for corn. It should be firm and well-worked on the surface.

At the experiment station seedings have been made every two weeks from April 15th to August 1st. The results and experience thus obtained indicate that Sudan grass may be safely seeded any time between May 15th and July 15th, the best time lying between June 1st and July 1st. A good guide is to wait until after corn planting time. If seeded before this, there will be slow growth for the first few weeks, thus greatly helping weeds to get the start. When sown after July 1st, not more than one cutting can be expected.

For hay production, Sudan grass should be seeded broadcast. The best implement for seeding it is the grain drill. Good, clean seed feeds evenly through the wheat compartments of the drill at about the same rate wheat does; that is, if the drill is set to sow two pecks of wheat it will also sow approximately two pecks of Sudan grass. If the seed is not clean it is difficult to determine at what rate the drill should be set to seed the desired amount; in this case it may even be necessary to use the oat compartments. The seeding may also be done by hand or with one of the numerous broadcasting seeders on the market, and the seed then worked in. The best depth, everything considered, lies between one-half and one and one-half inches, depending upon the soil and the danger of baking after a heavy rain. Where baking is certain, planting between one-half and one inch is the best depth, but where the land does not become packed easily the seed readily forces its way through three inches of soil.

When seeding broadcast, 15 to 25 pounds of good seed is sufficient. Where the seedbed is firm, moist, and otherwise in good condition, and the soil is fairly fertile, 15 pounds is a plenty. If the land is rather poor and the seedbed is poorly prepared, then 25 pounds is better. For seeding in rows to be cultivated for seed, production, four to six pounds of seed will be sufficient.

BUILDING UP THE COMMUNITY WILL BE DISCUSSED AT COUNTRY LIFE CONFERENCE.

Ways and means of arousing their people to a deeper sense of obligation to build up community life and make their neighborhoods still more desirable places in which to live, will be the keynote of much of the discussion at the Country Life Conference for Rural Ministers, to be held at College Park, Aug. 3, 4 and 5. One of the most striking papers delivered at last year's Conference was on this very subject, of how the country might keep its own people, particularly the prosperous retired farmer and his family, who ought to be the most influential factors in building up a permaneat community life. Dr. Carver said:

"So long as the original farmer is on the ground, the man who himself built the farm, used the energy of his own muscles with which to improve it, watered it with the sweat of his own brow, he will not forget the old neighborhood. But when the third generation comes along, having none of these memories, and none of those interests, then the real tendency begins to show itself in its full measure. The farm becomes merely the place from which the money comes to be spent in town. There is no interest in the farm at all, except as a source of income. The life is lived elsewhere, and the money is spent elsewhere, and the schools and the churches in the town are built up with the money that comes from the farm."

The early summer season is the most favorable time of the year to study agriculture and allied subjects at the Maryland Agricultural College. The College Farm with its experimental gardens, orchards, field crops, and fertilizer plots is at its best. These opportunities for first hand study in addition to the outdoor life and the freedom from the care of the school room will make a few weeks spent at your Agricultural College delightful and profitable.

"Before I built my new barn, the silo, the milk house, the feeding trough and other things, I sent for this book—"The Expense-Proof Farm." I found in it the story of Lehigh Cement Concrete—the story of structures that would last forever, that were fireproof and that would never need constant and expensive repairing.

"Then I built my new buildings of Lehigh Cement Concrete. I now have an Expense-Proof farm. The valuation of my property has been increased. My fire insurance rate has become neglible. My cattle have been improved in quality. My hogs are healthier. I have something that I can proudly pass on to the children.

If you intend to erect any new building or rebuild an old one, be sure to use concrete. No building material will give you better returns on your investment. Lehigh Cement Concrete increases in strength with age—has power to resist the elements and the wear of time. Progressive farmers are building everything of concrete.

Lower the Cost of Living. Don't Use an Ax!

By MOSS.

"POWERFUL indeed is the empire of habit," wrote Publius Syrus along about the year 1.

Habit's the stuff life is made of.

You get into the habit of eating three meals a day, of a cold plunge in the morning, of wearing a favorite color, of following the business routine of the office, of talking about the weather, of being a grouch or an optimist. Yes, life is all a habit. A powerful empire, indeed, is habit.

Habit automatically solves many of our problems. The habit of forgetting cures anger and sorrow. The habit of saving prevents want and misery. The habit of remembering saves waste and inefficiency.

EFFICIENT shoppers get the habit of following the ads. in this paper closely and intelligently. They know just where they can buy what they want at any time at the lowest prices.

INEFFICIENT shoppers, loose of habit, look up the ads. only when they want something on the spur of the moment, or they even fail to do that. They lose, as a person of slovenly habits always loses.

Don't use an ax to lower the cost of living.

USE HABIT.

WEALTH.

If I knew a miser who gave up every kind of comfortable living, all the pleasure of doing good to others, all the esteem of his fellow citizens and the joys of benevolent friendship for the sake of accumulating wealth, poor man, say I, you do, indeed, pay too much for your whistle.—Benjamin Franklin.

Wealth is a weak anchor, and glory cannot support a man. This is the law of God—that virtue only is firm and cannot be shaken by a tempest.—Pythagoras.

If one have either the giftes of fortune, as greate riches or of nature, as seemly personage, he is to be despised in respect of learning.—Lyly.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Wonders.

We live in the midst of wonders. Indeed we are a wonder to ourselves. To declare the glories of the Creator must produce profoundest admiration. To declare His wonders produces awe. We stand in awe of one with such majesty and power, while the conception of His mighty power makes us feel like spreading abroad the knowledge of it. Let all know of the marvelous works of our Creator. An active self-denying christian should be intent in spreading this news abroad.

Look at the wonders of creation. Did you ever know of anything so wonderful in its construction. He placed the fires in the midst of it and the intense heat bursts forth while volcanic eruptions carry desolation in their track. These monstrous up-heavals leave mountains kissing the clouds while grass covered plains are sunk into the depths of the sea which is so troubled that mighty waves are tossed aloft until they lash each other into foam and its very depths are stirred. Yet these yield to the influence of the heavenly bodies. The moon, as in queenly majesty she sails through the heavens, so affects the expanse of water that they are stirred to their depths and follow an invisible hand, which in turn borrows its force from the king of day. But who placed the sun yonder as the center of planets. Who was it said let there be light, and darkness fled before the power of the chemical force which fills our valleys with fruits, covers our hills with grain, spreads over the land a velvet covering of a single blade of which all the skill and ingenuity of man could not make. It changed the vast accumulations of vegetable matter into coal,—bottled sunshine, that's what it is and so full of force is a piece which weighs three pounds, that it has as much power as the average man puts into a days work. Three tons of coal will shovel as much sand as the average man will in a life time.

Would you have an illustration of divine goodness and see the wonders of creation power, look at the atmosphere that surrounds the earth. The heat of the sun comes to the earth piercing the miles of our atmosphere, but if the air were as percious to the heat of the earth, this heat would fly away every night and the temperature would fall so low that we would be frozen.

What wonderful provision has been made for our comfort.

The sunshine says to the sea, rise up from your bed and through forces of gravitation pull it downward, millions of tons fly on the winds of the air and are poured upon distant mountains which in turn refresh the continent and are gathered into rivers fitted to bear the commerce of the nation. It gathers up immense quantities of mist to supply the mighty rivers of earth. The sun says to the winter clad earth, "Bloom again" and lo, the icy bands break, snows melt, vegetation springs up and singing birds welcome spring.

Gravitation yields to the higher power, the stronger force of the sun and this in turn yields to the power of mind and waters of the Red Sea divide and stand upright. Yes and water itself yields to and is licked up, when Elijah calls the fire from heaven.

We love to gaze at the starry heavens. We locate the dipper; we fancy we are sitting in the chair, we call the dog to us but he speeds on, we sail over the milky way and chase Tanvers over the vast plains of heaven. We guide our course by the North Star, the Mariner's friend, but it is so far away, that it takes a ray of light traveling at its marvelous speed, forty years to reach us. We fix our eye on some of the stars, little thinking that they are so far distant that a ray of light from it that just now falls on our eye left that star when Moses was rocked in his cradle of rushes. You have seen a little fly when you were riding in a car playing along outside, then it would dart off with such velocity that you could not see it. No eye could follow the course but it is estimated that if we could travel as fast as that insignificant insect does, you could travel around the earth before dinner.

If we had as much strength proportionality as an ant, we could tear up an oak by the root. We could lift the great rock and throw it as easily as the boy does his ball, or perhaps a small mountain. How wonderfully they are made. Sometimes in building the mountains they are folded, arched, doomed tilted, erupted or eroded. Ours affords us an illustration of the folded range in the western part of the U. S. They are arched. If you go to southern Utah you will find them doomed; the Sierra Nevadas are of the tilted construction; the Andes of the erupted. Some years ago a very strange thing in nature was found when a doctor from one of our eastern cities discovered the presence of diamonds in a large Mrteoric stone submitted to him for examination. These diamonds were so hard that several chisels were destroyed in the effort to release them from the stone and an emory wheel upon which they tried to polish the jewels.

There is only one other record of the finding of diamonds in meteors and that as recently as 1887. But enough now.

HUMAN LIFE IN RUSSIA IS NOT WORTH A BULLET

Hurl Men Into Face of Kaiser's Giant Artillery, Regardless of Loss.

ROME, May 29 (Mail to New York).—"What is the average price of a human being, not the over-refined, educated highly-productive human being, but the ignorant, low specimen? They tell me that some American juries have variously fixed the price of human life at ten, fifteen and twenty thousand dollars and more. But I know a country where a human being is not worth half that price, nay, a tenth of that price, nay, not even ten dollars. And that country is Russia. To be more explicit, I would say that there the life of a man is worth exactly nothing, not even the price of a cartridge."

This statement was made to me by Dr. Michele Scarfoglio, who was six months with the Austrian General Staff.

"What I have seen," Dr. Scarfoglio told me, "has filled me with such horror that I am powerless to express. It will last me as long as I live, and my contempt for Russian war methods is deep, intense, heartfelt, undying.

"I was at Czernowitz at the time of the first Russian advance, and was at Uzook and Dukla passes, and the scenes I have witnessed baffle description. I will give you only one instance of how the Russians waste the life of their men. One day, at the time of the second advance on the Carpathians, ten charges were made to capture a hill on the Uzook Pass defended by a triple line of quick-firing machines manned by men strongly entrenched, to say nothing of a large number of heavy field pieces the fire of which swept the eastern slope of the hill and made it almost impregnable.

"Added to that, the Russians could not protect their infantry by using their artillery, and so pave the way for the infantry attack. Just below the hill a thick forest extended for several miles and hid the crest of the hill. I was a short distance away, behind a rock where the telegraphic instruments were located.

"The Austrians were prepared for the attack, and as soon as the Russians appeared on the border of the forest the artillery opened a harmless fire which encouraged the Russian officers. The column approached, came nearer and nearer. When it reached the foot of the hill and began the ascent the fire became terribly intense and aim accurate, with the result that within a few minutes several hundred men lay on the ground. The column wavered, then took to flight repairing to the forest.

The Austrian fire slackened, the aim became inaccurate. The Russian officers gathered the men together and resumed the march onward. This time the Austrian artillery allowed them to come nearer, but only to open fire at a closer range.

"The plan worked fine, splendidly. When the charging Russians were half way up the hill a rain of bursting shells fell on them, and the Russians fled once more. But only five or six hundred reached the woods. The rest lay dead or writhing in the agony of death all the way down. At some points the ground was literally covered with bodies.

"The same thing had to be repeated six or seven times before the Russians could understand that the capture of that particular hill was sheer madness. While the fourth charge was going on and the Austrian artillery systematically mowed down the second regiment, the colonel commanding the position came behind the rock to send out some messages.

"Adressing me he said:

"'You see? This is way we get them. They have around here fifty or seventy thousand more men than we have, but several tons less of brains. Why, they coulden't get here even if they renewed their charge fifty times in succession, and if they took the hill they could not hold it for more than half an hour.'

"'Look there' he continued, pointing to a number of ridges from two to four miles away, 'the fire of our masked batteries would annihilate them. The key to this position is thirty or forty miles below. They don't know the topography of the country or else we would not be here. They are like flies who break their heads bumping against a thick pane of glass and overlook the open transom above through which they could easily pass.'"

Talking of the Russian army's morals, Dr. Scarfoglio said that while the plain soldiers fight only because he is ordered to fight, a conversation with the officers soon convinces one that this war is merely in the interest of France.

"A Russian major who was wounded and taken prisoner at Czernowiz frankly admitted that it was the military party that precipitated events and brought about the war. The members of this party are paying a debt of gratitude to France, as it was France that furnished the millions for armaments out of which a thousand high officials made fortunes. The Russian nationalists honestly believe Russia is fighting for the triumph of the Slav race, but this is only incidental. First of all, Russia needs the inexhaustible "French financial market for her periodical loans."

GOVERNMENT FACILITIES

How The Farmers May Use United States Department of Agriculture.

It is the function of the laboratories of the Dairy Division to ascertain the correctness or error of dairy practices and to solve the new problems which are constantly coming up in all phases of the dairy industry. This covers everything from feeding the cow to the utilization of the by-products and disposal of wastes from the manufacture of butter and cheese.

Connected with the division's farm is a laboratory in which physiologists and chemists will study the fundamental process of the cow's body involved in the secretion of milk.

The bacteriologists of the division, in their studies of the types of bacteria which contaminate milk and its products, strive to discover means of preventing the entrance of undesirable forms of bacteria and of destroying, by heat, those which are unavoidably present. In the laboratories at Washington and in the experimental creamery are studied the chemical and bacteriological principles involved in the manufacture of ice cream, condensed milk, butter, and various kinds of cheese.

Provision is made for conducting these investigations on a small scale in the laboratory and, when the results warrant it, for a test in any new process under commercial conditions. When, for instance, a method of making casein from buttermilk is developed in the laboratory, it is tested in the experimental creamery under conditions which permit an exact determination of the cost as well as a test of the product.

One half of the experimental farm of the Bureau of Animal Industry at Beltsville, Md., is devoted to the study of problems in dairying. A dairy herd is maintained and feed is raised for it. Milk is produced for the Dairy Division laboratories and for the Hygienic Laboratory of the Public Health Service.

The work of this section is largely educational, with the object of putting into actual practice the knowledge obtained from scientific research and from a study of the methods and practices used in the manufacture of dairy products.

By means of correspondence and by sending men into the field, assistance is given to creameries in improving the methods of manufacturing butter, in preventing the losses which frequently occur, and in keeping of accurate records (with a view to helping the creameries to operate on a more economical and profitable basis.) Assistance is also given in establishing creameries where there are good prospects that such plants will be successful; a similar effort is put forth to discourage the establishment of creameries where it is apparent that they can not be successful. While most of the work has been done in the dairy sections, recently a great demand for assistance of this kind has developed in the southern States and there now appears to be an opportunity to render similar service in that region.

A general survey is being made to determine whether there are localities outside the regular cheese-making districts where cheese-making may be profitably undertaken and what varieties of cheese are best adapted to such localities. It is expected that, when desirable places are found, personal assistance will be given and demonstrations will be made to encourage and develop cheese making there.

A study has been made of the possibilities of improving the quality of butter made on the farms. In localities where butter is poor the prices received for this product are low. The work already shows that in many instances the selling price of the butter may be increased by 50 per cent. or more.

Factories which produce renovated butter are supervised and inspected. The inspectors are required to examine the materials used in the manufacture of renovated butter and the product made, to determine that no unwholesome materials are used. Inspectors are also required to see that proper sanitary conditions are maintained in the factories. Renovated butter for export is inspected to determine its purity, quality, and grade, and if found pure and properly branded and marked, a certificate is issued setting forth these facts.

Dairy Division supervises the manufacture of 500,000 to 900,000 pounds of butter each year for the Navy. According to specifications prepared by this division, this butter is made from pasteurized sweet cream and packed both in hermetically sealed cans holding 5 pounds each and in tubs holding 60 pounds each. This butter is made especially for storage purposes and is used aboard ships at sea, where its keeping quality is of great importance. The handling of this work has afforded the division an opportunity to control conditions so that the methods of manufacture and storage could be studied. The methods now used have been largely developed as a result of these studies.

BITTER FIGHT BEGINS IN DEMOCRATIC RANKS

Senator Lee Attacks the Methods of His Opponents—Denies Deal With Preston.

In a prepared statement issued by him Friday, Senator Lee denies in the most positive terms having made any deal with Mayor Preston which brought the latter to his support. In this connection he takes occasion to criticise the attempts he charges the Smith-Harrington people are making to line up the counties against the city. He goes on to say:

That this unworthy attempt to stir up strife and prejudice between the counties and the city is a studied scheme put out from some central source, is shown by the fact that substantially the same statement appears in the last week's issue of practically all of the papers allied with my opponents on the Eastern Shore.

That Lee's opponents would make capital of the indorsement of his candidacy by the city administration was not unexpected. Indeed, immediately after the Mayor announced his preference, the Harrington people said that, as Lee had tied up with the city, he would have to fight the counties.

The fact, as Senator Lee states, that the arraying of the counties against the city it doing the counties as great an injury as it would the city, to say nothing of the effect which success on such an issue might have upon the prospects of the Democratic party, will not, however, deter the Eastern Shore combination from pursuing this policy. They are determined to defeat Lee, what ever may be the cost.

Nor is this the only means to be employed. In all of the tidewater counties the oystermen will be advised that Lee favored the original Haman bill, while Harrington was the consistent friend of those who opposed it. Attention will be directed to the part Harrington played in securing the enactment of the law passed by the last General Assembly, which resulted in restoring much of the oyster ground to the state.

A third argument which is expected to carry weight in Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties is the city extension proposition. It is being impressed on the voters in both counties that Lee will favor the city in its efforts to expand, those responsible for putting out this statement expecting it will influence Democratic voter to oppose Lee's candidacy.

Before the campaign is well under way, other charges will be sprung to make it appear that the city is endeavoring to control the state administration, with the view of uniting the counties, as against the municipality. That Harrington would not profit by such methods should he secure the nomination cannot be denied, especiall when Baltimore is expected to furnish the Democratic candidate with the votes necessary to win.

The bitterness is increasing on both sides and the champions of either candidate may be expected to furnish the Republican standard bearer with plenty of ammunition, which may be used to advantage in the fight to follow.

State Athletics Meet.

About 600 husky athletes, the very pick of Maryland, will go to Baltimore on Juue 11 from all parts of the State to take part in the first State-wide meet to be held under the auspices of the Public Athletic League in connection with the school authorities. They will win the honor of representing their counties by becoming the winners in the series of county athletic meets that have been arranged for in nearly every county and which are now going on.

The visitors will begin arriving in Baltimore on June 10 and will probably leave the city immediately after the meet or the next day. While in Baltimore they will be the guests of the schoolboys of Baltimore and will be entertained in the homes of the young athletics of that city.

This feature of the meet is expected to be one of the most delightful phases of the whole affair. It will result in the boys of the counties and of the city being brought together in homes, and it is expected that many warm friendships will be established; and as the meets go on from year to year, result in building up a stronger and better feeling between the city and the counties.

IN his bereavement Governor Goldsborough has the sympathy and heart interest of the people of Maryland irrespective of divisions of any kind. May the loss of his mother be lightened by a merciful Father.

"A SAINT is a man who is on time, who keeps his word, who spreads good cheer, and who, while having his own opinion about things, gives everybody else the privilege of having theirs"—No wonder so few are canonized.

GIVE a solar plexus blow to disease by having your garbage removed regularly, (burn it if you can), by cutting down weeds, by doing away with the rubbish heap, by keeping the stable clean. Use lime and whitewash freely, and remember, for the sake of your children, that the fly and the mosquito carry millions of disease germs.

THE greatest wheat crop the county ever has known is in prospect for the coming harvest. In its forecast today, based on the condition of winter wheat and spring wheat on June 1, the federal crop reporting board placed the prospective wheat crop at 950,000,000 bushels. With continued good growing conditions the crop might reach a billion bushels.

FEW Marylanders know that this state has furnished more Attorneys-General of the United States than any other, seven having held that important office. This state, too, furnished the only man who ever declined the chief Justiceship of the Supreme Court. The next most famous Chief Justice after John Marshall was a Marylander, and in every field of National activity the leaders of this commonwealth have played a brilliant part.

CONGRESSMAN David J. Lewis of the Sixth Maryland district, may think he is immune from the visit of suffragists in the mountain fastness of his Allegany county home. But if he nurses such a hope, the Honorable Mr. Lewis will live to see that it is a terrible mistake. At this moment the suffrage hosts are getting ready to swoop down upon him and learn from his own lips whether the gentleman from Maryland is in favor of a national suffrage amendment or against it. Mr. Lewis voted no. The ladies will visit him June 19th.

THE GOVERNORS' LOSS.

Bereavement often finds unpropitious times to manifest its always unwelcome and distressing appearance. The circumstances of the bereavement of the Governor of Maryland will cauae the people of the state to enter the more keenly into his sorrow. This is his private loss and grief and no one would seek to penetrate the veil of his deprivation through the sudden death of his mother, save those who by the intimacies of life have a right to share this sorrow.

But the people of the state keenly sympathize and would have Mr. Goldsborough know that they feel deeply the loss of his parent upon his return to the state, after an official tour to the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The fact that he could not even see his mother again in life causes the bereavement to have almost tragic aspects.

Mrs. Henrietta Goldsborsugh died Saturday noon, aged 72 years. The interment took place Tuesday.

Messrs. Andrew Gonder, Policeman Nethkin, Frank Westlake, Harry Rasche and Vernon Lyon have been summoned to appear before the court at Washington, Pa., on the 15th inst., as witnesses in a B. & O. case.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Mr. William E. Walsh, One of The Receivers of The Mountain Lake Water and Light Company, Makes A Formal Statement.

To the Editor of The Republican,
Oakland, Md.

MY DEAR MR. SINCELL:—The publication by the Receivers of the Mt. Lake Water & Light Co., of a new scale of water rates has quite naturally stirred up a good deal of comment and not a little opposition, and the situation created is a somewhat delicate one, it must be confessed.

An adequate and constant supply of water, or rather the want of it, has long been a serious matter at Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn —a drawback to those places, an annoyance to their people, a menace to the safety of property in case of fire. Complaints were many and incessant during the "season" and at last formal complaint was made to the Public Service Commission. The Commission investigated, and then ordered certain reparations of the plant in order to effect good service. There was no money with which to defray the cost of making them. Receivers were appointed, made enough improvements to give fairly satisfactory service through the winter, planned making permanent betterments this spring, and then found out they could not borrow money to pay for what had been done, much less for what had been planned. At last the court ordered a sale of the Company's property, which could not be made for want of bidders. The summer is at hand, the water supply inadequate for the needs and comfort of the people who otherwise would flock to the Park and Loch Lynn.

The Receivers ascertained that the Company was running behind at the old water rates, so they proposed an increase calculated to put the Company's property in the best of shape for all time and assure the people a constant and copious supply of water under all circumstances. The comfort and convenience of the people depends in a large measure upon a dependable supply of water, whilst the life of the Water Company depends upon enough being paid for that supply to enable the Company to keep up its property and meet all its obligations promptly. The interest of the people and of the company is reciprocal and interdependent, not antagonistic, and upon both depends the welfare and progress of the Park and Loch Lynn.

This is apparent to those who have acquaintance with the intimate facts of the situation and have given them due consideration. In order that all may be fully informed in the premises and a frank discussion had of whatever bears on the matter, so that the interests of all may be safeguarded and furthered, a meeting will be held in the Park Auditorium at 10 a. m. on Saturday, 19th instant. This meeting is the outgrowth of conferences with the President of the Association, of the Community, and of others vitally interested. I shall be much obliged if you will kindly call attention to it in your paper.

Very truly yours,
W. E. WALSH.

Mrs. W. A. Sturgiss and little daughter left Oakland Tuesday for Myersdale, Pa., where they will visit relatives for a short time, going from thence to Pittsburgh before returning to Oakland.

Sunday Mr. William Edgar and Mr. Joseph Rathbun while out driving on the State road had a collision. The car of Mr. Edgar had an axle bent and Mr. Rathbun's car had one lamp broken and the fenders damaged.

Mr. William Sines, one of Garrett county's oldest citizens, aged 95 years, accompanied by his grand child and great grand child, both young men, dined at Hinebaugh's restaurant Tuesday. Mr. Sines used no cane, no spectacles and was as pert as a cricket.

Tuesday noon a large, well equipped car, having W. Va., license No. 2551, carrying C. W. Raese, J. C. Raese, of Davis, W. Va., Charles Adams, of Hockingtown, Va., and Eli Schilanske, Thomas, W. CHAPTER IV.

Wheels of Chance.

HIS constructive mendacity light upon his conscience, P. Sybarite permitted George time enough to leave the house and gain Clancy's, then quietly followed as far as the gate, from which point he cut across the southern sidewalk, turned west to Ninth avenue and then north to Forty-second street. Here he boarded a crosstown car.

This was quite the most insane freak in which he had indulged himself these many years, and, frankly admitting this much, he was rather pleased than otherwise. He was bound to call on Bailey Penfield and inform that gentleman where he might find his hat. Incidentally he hoped to surprise something or other informing with regard to the fortunes of Miss Lessing.

Alighting at Sixth avenue, he walked to Forty-fifth street, turned off toward Fifth avenue and in another moment was at a standstill in the extremest bewilderment before No. 97.

By every normal indication the house was closed and tenantless. From roof to basement its every window was blind with shades close drawn. The front doors were closed, the basement grating likewise.

Disappointed in the conviction that he had drawn a false lead, the little man strolled on eastward a little distance; then, on sheer impulse, gave up his project and, swinging about, started to go home.

But now as he approached No. 97 the second time a taxicab turned in from Sixth avenue, slid to the curb before that dwelling and set down a smallish young man dressed in the extreme of fashion, who, negligently handing a bill to the chauffeur, ran nimbly up the steps, rang the doorbell and, promptly letting himself into the dark vestibule, closed the door behind him.

The taxicab swung round and disappeared. Not so P. Sybarite. Profoundly intrigued, he waited hopefully for this second midnight caller to reappear, as baffled as himself. But, though he dawdled away a patient five minutes, nothing of the sort occurred.

Here was mystery within mystery indeed! Why (P. Sybarite asked himself with impatience) need he remain outside when another entered the house without let or hindrance?

Upon this thought he turned boldly up the steps, pressed the bell button, laid hold of the doorknob and entered into a vestibule as dark as his bewilderment and as empty as the palm of his hand, proving that the young gentleman of fashion had experienced no difficulty in penetrating farther into fastnesses of this singular establishment. In reflecting that where one had gone another might follow, P. Sybarite pulled the door behind him.

"Well, what do you want?"

Instantly the bare and narrow vestibule was flooded with the merciless glare of half a dozen electric bulbs, and at the same time he found himself sustaining the intent scrutiny of a pair of inhospitable dark eyes set in an impassive dark face, which last was abruptly disclosed in the frame of a small grill in one of the inner doors.

"Well," he was gruffly asked, "what do you want?"

Irritating discourtesy inhered in the speaker's tone. P. Sybarite stiffened his neck.

"To see Bailey Penfield," he returned firmly, "of course."

"No such party here," was the answer. The man drew back and made as if to shut the grill.

"Nonsense!" P. Sybarite insisted sharply. "I have his card with this number. Got it from him only tonight."

"Card?" The face returned to the grill.

P. Sybarite made no bones about displaying his alleged credential.

"I believe you'll find that authentic," he observed with asperity.

By way of answer the grill closed with a snap. But his inclination to kick the door was nullified when without further delay it opened to admit him. Nose in air, he strutted in, and the door banged behind him.

He stood in the main hall of an old fashioned residence. To his right a double doorway revealed a drawing room luxuriously furnished, but, as far as he could determine, quite untenanted. On the left a long staircase hugged the wall, with a glow of warm light at its head. To the rear the hall ended in a single doorway, through which he could see a handsome mahogany buffet, elaborately arranged with shimmering damask, silver and crystal.

"It's all right," announced the warden of the grill, his suspicions to all seeming completely allayed. "Mr. Penfield ain't in just at present, but"—here he grinned shrewdly—"I reckon you ain't so dead set on seein' him as you made out. Will you go right on up, or would you like a bite of somethin' to eat first?"

At the mere hint of food a frightful pang of hunger transfixed P. Sybarite.

Abandoning false pride, P. Sybarite yielded:

"I don't mind if I do, thank you."

"Straight on back; Pete'll take care of you all right."

A thumb indicated the door in the rear of the hall. P. Sybarite found the back room one of good proportions, whatever the architect's original intention, now serving as a combined lounge and grill; richly and comfortably furnished in sober, masculine fashion, boasting in all three buffets set forth with a lavish display of food and drink. In one of many deeply upholstered club chairs a gentleman of mature years and heavy body, with a scarlet face and a crumpled, wine stained shirt bosom, was slumbering serenely; two-thirds of an extravagant cigar cold between his fingers. In others two young men were confabulating quietly, but with a most dissipated air, heads together over a brace of glasses. At a corner service table a negro in a white jacket was busy with a silver chafing dish, which exhaled a tantalizing aroma.

"Yas-suh—comin'!" he gabbled. "It's sho' a pleasure to see you' again."

"At least," suggested P. Sybarite, dropping into a chair, "it will be, next time."

"That's right, suh—that's the troof!" The negro placed a small table adjacent to his elbow. "Tha's what Ah allus says to strange gemmen fust time they comes hyeh, suh; makes 'em feel more at home like. Jus' lemme know what Ah kin do for yo' tonight. That 'ere lobstuh Newburg's jus' about prime fo' eatin' this very minute, ef yo' feel a bit peckish."

"I do," P. Sybarite admitted. "Just a spoonful"—

"An' uh lil drink, suh? Jus' one lil innercent cocktail to fix yo' mouth right?"

"If you insist, Pete—if you insist."

"Yas-suh; and wif the lobstuh, suh, Ah venture to suggest a nice, cold lil ha'f pint of champagne?"

The negro waddled away, returned and offered the guest a glass brimming with amber tinted liquid.

Tender morsels of lobster smothered in cream and sherry, piping hot; daintiest possible wafers of bread and butter embracing leaves of pale lettuce; a hollow stemmed glass effervescent with liquid sunlight of a most excellent bouquet—and then another; these served not in the least to subdue P. Sybarite's internal jubilation.

Finally "the house," through the medium of its servitor, insisted that he top off with a cigar.

Ten years since his teeth had gripped a Fancy Tales of Smoke!

Now, it mustn't be understood that P. Sybarite entertained any misapprehensions as to the nature of the institution into which he had stumbled. He had not needed the sound, sometimes in quieter moments audible from upstairs, of a prolonged whir, ending in several staccato clicks, to make him shrewdly cognizant of its questionable character.

So at length, satiate and a little weary—drawn by curiosity besides—he rose, endowed Pete lavishly with a handful of small change, something over 50 cents—all he had in the world aside from his cherished $5—and slowly ascended to the second floor.

Here in remodeling the house for its present purposes partitions had arbitrarily been dispensed with. Aside from that inclosing the well of the stairway, the floor was one large room wholly devoted to some half a dozen games of chance.

Upon all the gaming tables massive electric domes concentrated their light. The walls, otherwise severely unadorned, were covered with lustrous golden fabric; the windows were ineffectually draped in splendid golden hangings; the carpet, golden brown in tone, was of a velvet pile so heavy that it completely muffled the sound of footsteps. Indeed, the room was singularly silent for one that harbored some twoscore players in addition to a full corps of dealers, croupiers, watchers and waiters. The warmth of the room was noticeable.

A brief survey of the gathering convinced P. Sybarite that, barring the servants, he was a lonely exception to the rule of evening dress. But this discovery discomfited him not at all. With an eye alert for the man with the twisted mouth he strutted from table to table ostensibly as little ill at ease as a press agent in a theater lobby.

A few minutes sufficed to demonstrate that the owner of the abandoned hat was not among those present, which fact, coupled with the doorkeeper's averment that Mr. Bailey Penfield was not, persuaded P. Sybarite that the former was neither more nor less than the proprietor of this gaming house.

But this conclusion perturbed him. He couldn't imagine either Miss Lessing or Miss Marian Blessington in any way involved with a common or even proper gambler.

His tour brought him finally to a pause by the roulette table in the rear of the room. Curious to watch the game in being, he lingered there. There were perhaps half a dozen players round the board, four on one wing, two on the other. Of the latter one was that very young man who had been responsible for P. Sybarite's change of mind with regard to going home. With a bored air this prodigal was frittering away five dollar notes on the colors, the columns and the dozens, his ill success stupendous, his apparent indifference whether he won or lost positively magnificent. But in the course of the few minutes that P. Sybarite watched him he either grew weary or succeeded in emptying his pockets and ceased to play.

"Five on the red," it said distinctly, with an effect of extravagant apathy.

A thought later he caught the croupier's eye and drove the wager home with a nod. His heart stopped beating.

Five dollars! All he had in the world.

"Three, red"— the croupier began his chant.

P. Sybarite failed to hear the rest. The croupier tossed him a chocolate token. He was conscious that he touched it with numb and witless fingers, mechanically pushing it upon the red diamond.

Ensued another awful, soul sickening minute of suspense.

"Twenty-five, red"—

A second brown chip appeared magically on top of the first. P. Sybarite regarded them stupidly. Afraid to touch them, his brain communicated to his hand the impulse to remove the chips ere it was too late, but the hand hung moveless in listless mutiny.

"Thirty-four, red"—

Two more chips were added to his stack.

And this time his brain sulked. If his body wouldn't heed its plain and sagacious admonition—very well! It just wouldn't bother itself to signal any further advice.

But quite instinctively his hand moved out, tenderly embraced the four brown chips and transferred them to the green area dominated by the black diamond.

"Twelve, black"—

Forty dollars was represented by that stunted pillar of brown wafers! P. Sybarite experienced an effect of coming to his senses after an abbreviated and, to tell the truth, somewhat nightmarish nap. Aping the manner of one or two other players whom he had observed before this madness possessed him, he thrust the chips out of the charmed circle of chance and nodded again (with what a seasoned air!) to the croupier.

"Cash or chips?" inquired that functionary.

"Oh, cash, thank you."

The chips gathered into the company of their brethren. Two twenty dollar bills replaced them.

Stuffing these last into his pocket, P. Sybarite turned and strolled indifferently toward the door.

"Better get away before it's too late," intelligence counseled.

"Sensible of you," intelligence approved.

"Still," suggested the small, but clear voice of greed before he could gain the head of the stairs, "you've got your original $5 yet to lose. Be a sport. Don't go away without turning in a cent to the house. It wouldn't look pretty."

"There's something in that," admitted P. Sybarite.

Nevertheless he never quite understood how it was that his feet carried him to the other roulette table at the end of the room opposite that at which he had been playing or how it was that his fingers produced one of the twenty dollar notes rather than the modest five he had meant to risk and coolly handed it over the board.

"How many?" asked the new croupier pleasantly.

Before he could make up his mind exactly twenty white counters were meted out to him.

"What are these worth?" he demanded incredulously, dropping into a chair.

"One dollar each," he was informed.

"Indeed!" he replied, politely smothering a slight yawn.

To save his face now he'd have to go through his twenty. But after that—exit.

He made this promise to himself.

Prying a single chip apart from its fellows, he tossed it heedlessly upon the numbered squares. It landed upon its rim, rolled toward the wheel and fainted gracefully upon the green compartment numered 00.

The croupier cocked an eyebrow at him, as if questioning his intention, at the instant the ivory ball began to sing its one long sustained note. Abruptly it was chattering; in another instant it was still.

"The double 0," announced a voice.

A player next P. Sybarite swore soulfully.

Thirty-five white chips were stacked alongside the winning stake. With unbecoming haste P. Sybarite removed them.

"Well," he sighed privately, "there's one thing certain—this can't last. But I don't like to seem a piker. I'll just make sure of this one. It can't win. And at that I'm $15 in."

Deliberately he shifted the nineteen remaining of his original stack to keep company with his winning chip on the double 0.

A minute or so later the man at his elbow said excitedly: "I'll be hanged if it didn't repeat! Can you beat that?"

P. Sybarite stared stupidly.

"How's that?" he said.

"Double 0," the croupier answered "the second time."

"This is becoming uncanny," P. Sybarite observed to himself, and "Cash!" said he, with cold derision.

Seven new hundred dollar certificates were placed in his hand. In a daze he counted, folded and pocketed them. While thus engaged he heard the ball spin again. His original $20 remained upon the double 0. Ten turned up. His stake was gathered in.

"You've had enough," intelligence advised.

"Perfectly true," P. Sybarite admitted.

"He ain't come in yet," said the latter, "but he's liable to be here any minute now."

"Oh, yes," said P. Sybarite brightly after a brief pause—"Mr. Penfield, of course. Sorry I can't wait."

"Well, you'll want your hat before you go, won't you?"

Placing an incredulous hand upon the crown of his head, P. Sybarite realized that it was covered exclusively with hair.

"I must have put it down somewhere upstairs," he murmured in panic.

"Mebbe you left it with Pete before you went up."

"Perhaps I did."

Turning back to the lounge, he entered to find it deserted save for the somnolent old gentleman and the hospitable Pete, but for whose drinks P. Sybarite would probably never have known the delirious joy of internal celebration or found the courage to risk his first bet.

And suddenly the fifty cent tip previously bestowed upon the servitor seemed to one unexpectedly fallen heir to the princely fortune then in P. Sybarite's pockets the very nadir of beggarliness.

"Pete," said he with owlish gravity, "I begin to see that I have done you an inexcusable injustice."

Giggling, the negro scratched his head.

"Well, suh," he admitted, "Ah finds that gemmun gen'ly does change they min's erbout me aftuh they done cut er melon like."

With the air of an emperor P. Sybarite presented the negro with one $20 bill.

"And now"—he cut short a storm of thanks—"if you'll be good enough to give me just one more glass of champagne I think I'll totter home."

"Yas-suh!"

In a twinkling a glass was in his hand. As if it were so much water—in short, indifferently—P. Sybarite tossed it off.

"And my hat."

"Yo' hat?" Pete iterated in surprise. "Yo' didn't leaf yo' hat wif me, suh. Yo' done tak it wif yo' when yo' went upstahs."

"Oh!" murmured P. Sybarite, dashed. He turned to the door, hesitated, turned back and solemnly sat himself down.

"Pete," said he, extending his right foot, "I wish you'd do something for me."

"Yassuh!"

"Take off my shoe."

Staring with naive incredulity until his vision assured him of this gentleman's complete seriousness, the negro plumped down upon his knees, unlaced and removed the shoe.

"It's a shocking shoe," observed P. Sybarite dreamily.

Bending forward, he tucked his original five dollar note into the toe of the despised footwear.

"I am not going home broke," he explained to Pete, "as I certainly shall if I go upstairs to find my hat."

"I'd just as leave's not go fetch yo' hat," said Pete.

"You needn't bother," P. Sybarite returned, with dignity.

CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Farmer

The average farmer judges the average man by his capacity for hard work—his productiveness.

And the qualities he admires in a man he admires—and finds—in a Hupmobile.

He likes the strong pull of the long-stroke motor.

He has proved that the Hupmobile will stand hard knocks and rough going. It is always ready for service.

He knows that it is as nearly trouble-proof as a motor can be.

He knows that it will ask him next to nothing for its board and keep. Repair expense is almost zero.

He needs no technical knowledge to make such simple adjustments as the Hupmobile may require.

Hupmobile history can be summed up as one good car after another—each season a bigger value.

He figures that mighty few motor cars can show so clean a record.

His own experience is backed up by the experience of farmer friends and neighbors. They are all Hupmobile boosters.

So he keeps on buying one Hupmobile after another—always getting a high second-hand price when he sells—always getting a better Hupmobile when he buys.

He is one of the best friends the Hupmobile has in America.

The Hupmobile case is safe in his hands. Ask him about Hupmobile; and see the cars at our showrooms.

SUMMER SPRAYING NECESSARY FOR PERFECT FRUIT.

How To Prepare Self-Boiled Lime Sulphur—Time For Applications.

T. B. SYMONS,
Maryland Agricultural College.

The wise grower will aim to secure the very highest quality of fruit possible. In securing such fruit, the importance of summer spraying cannot be over-estimated. We have hundreds of instances where the hopes of remuneration from a good peach crop have been blasted by brown rot, and good sized peaches have brought poor returns, owing to a bad infection of scab. Moreover, it is a common sight to see apples seriously affected by one or more disease, making the crop from many trees practically unsalable. In order to prevent these losses, growers should practice late spring and summer spraying.

In this connection, the adoption of the lime and sulphur mixture as a fungicidal treatment for fruit trees in foliage, especially for peach, can well be considered one of the greatest modern advances in preventive treatment of disease. It can be prepared by the grower in the following manner:

Use eight pounds of flowers or flour of sulphur, eight pounds of stone lime, to fifty gallons of water. The mixture should be made in a kettle, barrel, or receptacle of sufficient size. Better results can be obtained with larger quantities. The necessary amount of unslaked lime should be placed in the receptacle and sufficient amount of water poured on the lime to start it slaking. When the lime begins to slake, add the eight pounds of sulphur. Stir the mixture and add water as needed to keep a pasty condition until the lime is all slaked. Do not allow any dark, yellow color to form, as it will, if the heat becomes too great at any point. If the sulphur is lump, it may be put in a finely divided condition by passing it through a fine mesh sieve. The heat generated by the slacking lime causes the sulphur to mix physically with the lime in very fine state, but should not be continued to form much of the sulfide combination indicated by the yellow or brown color. Therefore, it is essential that the proper amount of water be added to cause a violent boiling of the mixture for a few minutes and as soon as the lime is well slaked, add cold water to make the required amount. The self-boiled lime sulphur is now ready for use. The time to allow the mixture to boil will vary accordingly to the lime used, as some lime will slake more quickly than others. It should show only a faint yellow color before diluting.

Unless you have an especially fine male bird with your flock of hens it is nearing time now for you to dispose of him. There are several reasons for getting him out of the flock. He isn't necessary unless you are going to hatch some late chickens. The space he takes up might better be used by a laying hen. It is not strict economy to feed him while getting no returns from him. And what is most important, the eggs laid by a flock in which no male bird is kept, are of better quality. They will keep longer especially in warm weather.

All who have ever operated an incubator know that the infertile eggs will come out of the machine on the fifth or seventh day apparently perfectly fresh. Furthermore, most incubator operators keep these infertile eggs until the machine hatches and then boil them up for feeding the young chicks. This, to my mind, is rather good proof of their keeping qualities.

If you can't get rid of your "roaster" in any other way, boil him and make a meal of him. If he is especially valuable as a breeder, fix him a small run away from the hens. Keep him out of the flock if possible.

What is needed and should be required of every rural teacher in either experience or training which acquaints them with the facts about farm crops, soils, farm animals, sanitation, and the best methods of presenting them in the school. Our Agricultural College is helping to solve this problem through its summer training school for country teachers, which opens for a six weeks' session June the 21st.

LASSEN VOLCANO UNDER OBSERVATION

Forest Service Cooperates with Geological Survey in Recording Dangerous Peak's Activity as Basis for Scientific Study.

Mt. Lassen, California, whose violent eruption of May 19 places it in the first rank of volcanoes now dangerously active, has become the subject of an informal cooperative study by the geological survey and the forest service. At the request of the survey, a telegram has been sent from Washington instructing the officers of the Lassen national forest, in which the peak stands, to continue observations of the volcano's activity and keep a record to be used as a basis for a scientific investigation by J. S. Diller, a government geologist, who is expected at Lassen early in July.

The observations are being made by forest rangers at the scene and from a fire loookout tower on Brokeoff Mountain, a few miles north of the crater, where the forest service last year kept watch on the numerous eruptions which occurred from May to September.

It is not known whether a cloudburst started the last eruption by precipitating rain down upon the molten lava in the crater, or whether melting of the snow on the peak, with consequent flowing of water into the crater, caused the accumulation of steam which blew a river of mud out of the mountain. Mr. Diller, who made a study of the volcano last year, said that he inclined toward the melted snow theory, adding that the bright flow reported as appearing on the clouds of smoke and steam over the crater is a reflection of the red-hot matter uncovered by the eruption, indicating that the volcano is in a more or less dangerous mood.

The river of mud which was shot out of the north side of the crater and down Hat creek has damaged government and private property, says a wire to the forest service from San Francisco, destroying bridges which were necessary to permit the entrance of livestock that are grazed on the forest range during the summer. Some 12,000 cattle and 30,000 sheep are grazed on the Lassen forest every year.

Mt. Lassen is regarded as exceptionally interesting from a scientific viewpoint, according to the geological survey, inasmuch as it is the only active volcano in the United States proper, is very accessible to observers, and appears to be full of dangerous possibilities. There is much that is not known about volcanoes, and Lassen is expected by geologists to furnish a considerable addition to existing information on the subject.

FIXING A DATE FOR PRIMARIES

Party Leaders Hope to Avoid a Legal Holiday.

Because of the constant tinkering with the election laws of the state many of the voters have been misinformed as to the date on which the fall primaries are held. In 1912 the General Assembly passed an act which provided that all such elections must be held not earlier than the 8th and not later than the 15th of September. Except in presidential year when delegates to the state convention which names delegates to the national convention, are elected on the first Monday in May.

The governing bodies of the two leading parties must agree on a day for the state primaries within the period fixed by law and they may select any day, except Sunday, between the dates mentioned above. Should they be unable to agree, then the law directs they must be held on the second Monday in September.

This year the alternative day will be September 13. As September 12 is a legal holiday and falling on Sunday must be celebrated the following day, the primaries may be held on the day Defenders' Day is celebrated. There is little doubt, however, that the committee chairmen will reach an agreement and that the election will probably be held on Tuesday, September 14. The selection of this day is also preferred by the election officials who would otherwise be obliged to make final preparations on Sunday.

Still another objection to Monday is that party managers would be obliged to line up their forces on Sunday and disburse the funds usually distributed for campaign purposes. This last objection will carry more weight than any other with the party leaders who prefer a working day on which to complete preparations.

The supplemental registration this fall will begin September 21, or six weeks before the general election. Persons not yet on the books may then be enrolled and those who have moved must apply for transfers. As the primary election occurs before the registration begins all voters must appear at the polls in the precincts in which they are registered regardless of their places of abode. Only those now on the books and affiliated may participate.

Wanted—City and Town Builders.

Athens in the age of Pericles developed in many respects the most wonderful city that has so far existed in the world.

This was done because the task of making a great city was placed before that of individual momey getting All the citizens were often called on to take part in discussing the problems of the city. Good city government is one of the greatest powers for righteousness at the disposal of men. Every town ought to have a good city charter. There ought to be a copy of it in every home, it ought to be a text book in the school of the town or city. Every citizens, ought to know what the duties and responsibilities of the private citizen, ought to know what the duties and responsibilities of the town officials. The town itself ought to be as well managed as its schools or any private business in it.

Every town ought to have a board or committee to look after the health and sanitation, another to look after and take steps to provide a park and playground, another to look after and take steps to provide a park and playground, another to look atter the amusement, recreation and education of the people who are not in active touch with the public schools, and to provide some form of social center that is designed to be more up-lifting than the saloon or the street corners. It is just as important to stamp out a moral poison as it is to stamp out the contagion of smallpox. It is just as important to quarantine against gambling as it is against scarlet fever. To be satisfied with things as they are is often the worst kind of sin. If the people of our town could see clearly what our town is now, and put that in contrast with the town it would be if all our citizens would unite in making it the town it ought to be and might become, they would weep over it as Jesus did over Jerusalem.

It would seem that the time is ripe for the churches of our town to unite more along the lines of our common welfare. The churches should keep to the front all things that make for the higher life of our town. They should be a sort of John the Baptist calling the people to consider the great things of their town and of the kingdom of God.

There is coming to our town a Booster Chautauqua in the near future that will furnish us an opportunity to begin to do some of these great things for our town and community. The first is to get together and make it a great success. We can do this by a united, enthusiastic effort. We can discover men and women among us who have the gifts of leadership, we can discover our ability to cooperate on a matter of community welfare. If we will do this it will be worth ten times what it will cost us and it may be the beginning of great things for our town and community.

May we measure up to this opportunity and the ability to meet and repeat,

"If you want to live in the kind of a town
Like the kind of a town you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.

You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new,
It's a knock at yourself when you knock at your town,
It isn't your town—it's you.

Real towns are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead.
When evervone works and nobody shirks
You can raise a town from the dead.

And if, while you make you personal stake
Your neighbor can make one too,
Your town will be what you want to see,
It isn't your town—its YOU."

"MORE ANON."

Oh list: Do you hear, the Nightingale's tune
To the beautiful, smiling, leafy June?

B. & O. MEN TO MEET SOON AT DEER PARK

Third Staff Gathering Expected to Take Place at Mountain Resort.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 8.—Encouraged by the good results that have followed the two previous gatherings, President Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, has under consideration the advisability of calling another staff meeting, which will probably be held this month at Deer Park. There are more than 500 officials of the railroad, and the chief executive believes that much good can be accomplished by these men getting together every now and then to exchange ideas and to discuss matters looking to the betterment of the service.

Mr. Willard expects every man connected in an official capacity with the Baltimore & Ohio to attend, and the gatherings have been among the most important conferences held by the representatives of any of the large systems in the country.

Staff meetings were introduced shortly after President Willard came to Baltimore in 1910. Since he has been the guiding spirit of the road two meetings have been held at Deer Park, the last in 1913 with the chief executive as the presiding officer. There wasn't much hilarity at these assemblages. Each man went there in a serious frame of mind and listened attentively to addresses made by Mr. Willard and other officials of the company.

But the high officials did not monopolize the time in speech-making. The man lower down was expected to get up and tell his superior what he thinks of this or that phase of the company's affairs, whether operatious could be improved or whether different lines could be followed in going after business. It is said that many of the suggestions made by the subordinates have been accepted and applied by their superiors with surprising results.

The Baltimore & Ohio has recently launched a campaign to improve sanitary conditions all over its entire system. A pamphlet has been issued and distributed among the thousands of employes, containing articles on railway sanitation written by Dr. E. M. Parlett, who is connected with the safety committee of the road. In this pamphlet the company says:

"It is desired that the Baltimore & Ohio be recognized for a strict observance of sanitary principles and it is hoped that the employes will cooperate with the management in every possible manner to bring about a condition that can be pointed to with pride as an exhibition of the attention given this important matter, which will better provide for the comfort, convenience and health of patrons and employes.

"Our stations, yards, equipment, etc., are constantly under the scrutiny of the traveling public, who must suffer through our neglect and ignorance when we permit unsanitary conditions to exist. The average taveler's opinion of a railroad is usually formed from the appearance of passenger coaches, yards and surroundings of the stations and the sanitary aspects thereof, or lack of them. These conditions, or lack of them, having the faculty of attracting the keenest sensibilities of the critical traveler, so that it behooves us to live up to them for proper and good reasons, economic and aesthetic, for their importance cannot be overstimated.

"If the public is quick to condemn it is likewise on the alert to applaud any innovation of the artistic in the way of safety devices or added comfort a railroad may inaugurate."

CONFERENCE ADJOURNED

Last Night After A Two Day's Session Held in Oakland.

The fourth annual conference of the Synod of West Virginia of the Evangelical Lutheran church adjourned last night after a session of two days held in St. Mark's church in Oakland.

The conference convened Tuesday afternoon and was opened by devotional services conducted by the Rev. P. L. Miller, pastor of New Haven church.

At this session new officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Rev. H. F. Baugman; vice president, Rev. O A. Bremer; secretary and treasurer, Rev. B. K. Young.

During the sessions various lines of church work were taken up and discussed very ably and fully by those who had part in the program. Especially was this true in the subject discussed, which became general, yesterday afternoon, the subject being "A Closer Approach of the General Bodies," which was introduced by the Rev. A. F. Richardson, pastor of the Grafton church.

Tuesday evening the Rev. W. S. Dysinger, of Wheeling, preached a strong sermon to a large congregation, and last night Rev. G. O. Ritter, of Westernport church, delivered the closing sermon.

In all about twenty-five ministers and laymen were present. On Tuesday afternoon they were taken down over the pike in automobiles as far as Accident.

At the closing session the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, that the sincere thanks of the conference are due and are hereby extended to the pastor and the members of St. Mark's Lutheran church of Oakland for the very kind and generous hospitality which has been extended to us during this meeting.

L. K. PROBST,
H. E. H. SLOOP,
CHARLES DOWNING.

Sheriff Scott went to Kitzmiller Friday and spent Saturday in that village, calling on a number of citizens requesting their attendance at court.

Stable Fired.

Yesterday afternoon the stable at the residence of Mr. J. B. Cheuvront was discovered to be on fire and an alarm given, but before the reel hose arrived neighbors had extinguished the blaze by the application of a few buckets of water.

Bible Conference at Mt. Lake Park August 1-8.

The dates of the Bible Conference at Mountain Lake Park, Md., this season are August 1-8, and the program will be in charge of the Rev. James M. Bray, D. D., dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Dr. Bray was present at the conference last year and there was a strong desire to have him return. He will have associated with him Prof. M. G. Kyle, the distinguished archaeologist, of Philadelphia, Evangelist Bob Jones, of the Methodist Church, South, Prof. E. O. Sellers, a specialist in Sunday school work and men's meetings, Mr. Fred L. Rosemond, of Cambridge, Ohio; Miss Angy Manning Taylor, well known throughout Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and Ohio as a Bible teacher in colleges for women and elsewhere, Gray himself will speak on prophetic themes of current interest. It is planned to make admission to the conference this year entirely free.

Every business man should see to it that every scrap of paper in front of his place of business is removed and that filth of every kind is raked up and removed.

C. R. Savedge last week purchased 25 tons of baled hay from George Shartzer. Mr. Savedge shipped 3 tons of hay Tuesday to H. Glotfelty at Schell, W. Va.

Mrs. H. A. Loraditch, of Oakland, came down last Saturday and on Sunday accompanied by Mrs. W. S. Davis went to Blaine to visit friends.—Echo, Keyser, W. Va.

Misses Maud Boal, Bessie Ross, Anna Shaw, Ivy Bucklew, Patsy Gannon and Margaret Athey, of Barton, Md., are attending Garrett County Summer Normal School in this city.

CRIMINAL COURT ON.

Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd Is Holding Court This Week.

Monday morning, following adjournment of the civil court last Friday afternoon at the conclusion of the docket in that branch of the Circuit Court, Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd, of Cumberland, owing to the illness of Judge Henderson, occupied the bench when the criminal docket was taken up and cases to the time this paper goes to press were disposed of as follows:

State vs. P. P. McAndrews; obstructing the public highway; guilty; fined $10 and costs.

State vs. Harry J. Edwards; plea of guilty; parolled.

State vs. Charles Ringer; assault and battery; plea of guilty; parolled.

State vs. Ernest J. Wolf; bastardy; jury trial; guilty; ordered to pay $4 per month for 12 years.

State vs. Dewey Welch: forgery; plea of guilty; parolled.

State vs. Edward Dasher; unlawful sale of liquor; plea of guilty; fined $50 and costs and committed to jail in default.

State vs. Edward J. Frantz; sale of liquor to minors; not guilty.

State vs. Edward Harvey; disorderly house; guilty.

State vs. Nick Kokier; selling liquor without license; four cases; guilty; fined $60 and costs.

Late yesterday afternoon the case of State vs. Peter Dobovinski, indicted for taking orders and making delivery of intoxicating liquors in the vicinity of Kitzmiller, was taken up. This case is the first under the Speicher Local Option Law and is being tried before a jury. The progress of the case is being watched with much interest. The information upon which the indictment was found was made by Oakey Hall to Constable Craver of Kitzmiller, who followed the case up and arrested the defendant, at the same time seizing several hundred bottles of liquors which were found in the woods and near an unfrequented road. The indictment charges the traverser with having taken orders for the liquor and after having it shipped to him that he delivered the same and collected the money upon delivery. The state introduced three witnesses yesterday and it was resumed this morning at nine o'clock when additional witnesses will be heard.

The grand jury, after filing its usual report, adjourned on Friday morning. The jury found forty indictments, the major portion being for violations of the liquor law, with one or two of a more serious character.

In all probability Court will adjourn tomorrow as it is thought the criminal docket will be completed by that time.

Farmer's Meeting Successful.

The farmer's meeting held in the court house last Thursday night was a most interesting occasion. The first speaker was G. H. Alford, a progressive, practical farmer, who for years has been developing a most successful farm in southern Maryland. He was followed by Brigham, State lecturer of the Farmer's Grange, and one of the leaders of the boys' corn club movement. Mr. Brigham explained this new movement and gave illustrations of its development of greater interest in farm life, the boys are becoming greatly interested in farm work, and through their labor and skill whole counties are securing better seed corn, larger results per acre and a better grade of corn.

It is a great pity that more farmers were not present to hear these gentlemen, who dealt in facts of great importance to successful farming and who followed these facts by undeniable proof of their truthfulness. These gentlemen are not "book farmers," but genuine tillers of the soil, who know whereof they speak.

There were farmers present from near Wilson, Eagle Rock, Deer Park and the vicinity of Oakland. The speakers were introduced by Secretary L. A. Rudisill, of the Board of Trade.

Similiar meetings should be held all over Garrett county. It was developed at this meeting that less than one-half of the acreage of Garrett county was under cultivation and that the average farm, under cultivation was a fraction over 59 acres.

It was also stated that Garrett county was sending out of the county in cold cash over $200,000 a year for feed for live stock. The Republican believes the farmers of Garrett county will remedy this evil and soon become shippers of feed stuff, rather than importers of it. May this glad day hasten.

Mrs. A. S. Teats, of Columbus, Ohio, who spent the past six months in Oakland, returned to her home Sunday. She was accompanied by Johnny Davis, who will visit his aunt in that city for some time.

PEACHES TO GLUT MARKET

Western Maryland Railroad Has Big Transportation Job Ahead.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 13.—Jabob F. Good, the wide-awake horticulturist and Western Maryland Railway agent at Midvale, tells today that the peach crop in that section bids fair to exceed by many thousands of bushels all former records, and that it will take 500 cars to move the shipments from Midvale alone.

One larger grower, Aaron Newcomer, will have not less than 100,000 baskets, and other growers will have crops in proportion.

So extensive will be the tax on the shipping facilities at Midvale that the Western Maryland Railway will be obliged to put down an additional siding at that station, plans for which are now in progress.

The basket and package problem for the enormous crop is the problem that is now confronting the growers of that section.

Mr. Good has to date placed orders for 35 carloads of bushel baskets for apples, and half-bushel baskets for peaches, and has an option on five more carloads. Individual orchardists have also ordered direct. Mr. Good believes that it will take 60 carloads of baskets to care for the crop in his immediate vicinity.

Just now the problem is to reduce the crop of peaches. The trees put forth an enormous setting, far beyond the capacity of the trees to bring to a fine perfection. The crop must be trimmed out from 50 to 75 per cent., and this involves an enormous amount of work for the orchardists.

Married.

FOLK—DURST—Frederick W. Folk and Miss Bessie Ellen Durst, both of Grantsville, Md., were married yesterday morning at the First M. P. parsonage, by the pastor, Rev. J. L. Ward, Cumberland.

Va., when their daughter, Miss Ethel May, was united in marriage with Mr. Roy Gibbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. P. Gibbs, in the presence of a large number of guests. The bride was handsomely attired in white satin. The wedding march was played by Prof. W. T. Laughlands. The groom holds a lucrative position with the Parson Pulp and Paper Co. at Dobbin, at which place the couple will be at home. The attendants were Mr. Walter Bear and Miss Hazel Jack. Following the ceremony an elaborate dinner was served. Rev. Isaac W. Abernathy performed the ceremonev.

SMYTH—AULT—At the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ault, adjoining Oakland, last night at six o'clock, their second daughter, Miss Bessie May, became the bride of Mr. John Ludlow Smyth, of Fairmont, the ring ceremony of the Lutheran church being used, Rev. O. A. Bremer, pastor of the local church, officiating. The ceremony occurred in the parlor of the home, which was decorated with ferns and daisies. The bride wore a gown of white crepe meteor and trimmed in embroidery, chiffon and pearls and carried a bouquet of orchids and roses and was attended by her sister, Miss Norine Ault as maid of honor and by Miss Mary West as bride's maid, who were gowned in pink and carried bouquets of pink roses. The groom had as his best man Mr. Loury Smith, a brother. Miss Grace Falkenstein played Lohengrin's wedding march. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate families of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends of the family. Following the nupitals an elaborate dinner was served. The couple left for their wedding trip on train No. 12 and will be at home in Fairmont after July 1st. Those who witnessed the weddidg were Mrs. D. P. Smyth, Mr. and Mrs. John Ault, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bowman, Misses Ruth Michael, Clara Mitchell, Mr. Frank G. Smyth, Mr. A. R. Smallwood, Mr. Walter Kahl and Mr. Arthur Naylor.

A SPLENDID LECTURE

Delivered Monday Before Lutheran Brotherhood by Mr. Jos. E. Harned

At the monthly meeting of the Lutheran Brotherhood of St. Mark's church in Oakland, held Monday evening of this week, Mr. Joseph E. Harned, who has gained an enviable reputation during the past few years as a naturalist of more than ordinary ability, delivered an illustrated lecture, his theme being "God in Nature."

Many of the thoughts expressed by the speaker were entirely new to the audience which listened to him with rapt attention and were the result of patient study in the fields and woods where nature is all abloom and most lavish in her splendor.

The lesson sought to be impressed upon his auditors was that the Creator is supreme in everything; that by His hand the world was formed and without His ever-presence the world would very soon cease to exist, or at least animate objects would become inanimate and their bodies return to that state from which they were formed.

The lecture was most impressive and the speaker was highly complimented for the address by members of the Brotherhood as well as by numerous visitors.

Philip F. Filsinger of Deer Park, this county, and Miss Mary Ruge, of Eckhart, Md., took out a marriage license at Cumberland.

Forty years ago today all the money necessary for the purchase of the land required to complete the 25 acres to be used for the site of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's hotel at Oakland was raised. The grounds are with us but the hotel is no more.

A young man in Missouri has hair coming down to his waist because his father vowed when the son was a small child that he should not get the latter's hair cut until Bryan is elected President. The unfortunate young man faces a long-haired future, which can end only in circus sideshows or the grave, if the vow holds good and his filial piety holds out.

GET DOWN AND PUSH.

An Appeal to the Citizens of Garrett County.

Every county has its men of wealth—its prominent citizens—people who are looked upon as the community leaders.

And as they lead, so will the community be.

If YOU have accumulated a competency and are enjoying that life of ease to which you are entitled, it is time for you to think of your community, of your children, of your neighbor's little ones.

Your county needs your strength, your assistance.

GET DOWN AND PUSH.

The generation that is passing away started you on the road to affluence, pushed you along life's pathway, headed you for that goal which you now enjoy.

They gave you a push, and your own energy, and perseverance and determination did the rest.

Now you are on top and a new generation is springing up, and they have an ambition to achieve.

But their goal is a long way up, and the road is steep, and there are many obstacles to be overcome before your children and your neighbor's children may hope to reach the goal of their ambition.

The community standard in vogue when you were a boy was doubtless high for these times, but the same standard is hopeless today—a relic of the past—an impossibility of the future.

To maintain its relative position in the world your community must prosper, and grow, and expand.

And your children are confronted with these changing conditions.

To hold your county and town down to the early standard is like cutting the throat of your faithful dog, or casting your bank book into the flames.

But advancing its material interests is like casting the loaves and fishes to the hungry multitudes.

You are successful—the past has enriched you of its wealth—the future is one of peace for you.

But what of the children of today—what of those growing to manhood and womanhood only to be forced to meet the serious problems of a few years hence?

What of the future of your own descendants?

A retarded commercial spirit, a throttled community growth, all portend a struggle with adversity in the years to come.

Other men of means and prominence will act, and other communities will forge to the front and prosper—and if your community simply remains stationery it will soon be subsisting on the crumbs that others cast aside.

What are you going to do about it—you men of means and the ability to act?

Are you going to get down and push?

Are you going to assist your children, as your father assisted you?

Are you going to give your county and your town a shove to the front—a boost that will mean prosperity for the future?

A town that is worth living in is worth boosting.

And all good citizens are boosters.

This world is moving at a rapid pace, and America leads the van, in the position of honor—or would you prefer to see them ambling along in the dust of more progressive people?

The great opportunity for commercial and community advancement is here now—is looking for word of encouragement from you—is waiting for your action.

But by the time your sons reach man's estate opportunity will have marched on—and into the waiting embrace of other communities.

That is, unless you act now, and to some purpose.

One hand may not raise a stone, but many hands make light work of the heaviest burdens.

There are many hands in your community—hands capable of performing wonderful feats in community building.

Perhaps yours are two of those hands.

But what are the many hands doing?

Are they pushing—shoving—boosting to the front?

Or are they pulling—dragging—retarding the growth of your community, and your people?

What are your hands doing, brother?

Will You Help Us?

Don't knock, only on the door. Speak well or keep still. Be busy and boost Garrett county.

The Garrett County Board of Trade want specimens of fire clay, brick clay, and minerals of Garrett county for exhibition purposes. Also pictures of county homes, views of mountains and valleys and farm scenes.

DEMOCRATIC BLUNDERS

The Courts Again Called Upon to Untangle Discrepancies.

Washington, D. C. June 16. The charge of inexcusable carelessness in the enactment of an important statute has again been sustained against the Democratic administration.

The error occurs in a statute directly affecting the safety of human lives. The "safety at sea" act, passed to "promote the welfare of American seamen" and to prevent if possible a repetition of the "Titanic" steamship disaster with its appalling loss of life a little over three years ago, failed to clearly fix the date it should become effective. Two different days were named for enforcement, one four months later than the other.

Section 14 of the act revises the regulations regarding lifeboats, life rafts, life belts and similar equipment for preventing loss of life in case of accident, and declares that the regulations must be enforced and obeyed "on and after July 1, 1915 on steamers navigating the ocean or any lake, bay or sound of the United States."

Section 18 of the same act contains a squarely contradictory provision declaring that "this act shall take effect, as to all vessels of the United States, eight months after its passage," etc.

Two conflicting opinions have been rendered by legal officers of the administration on this statute. The Solicitor of the Department of Commerce first found July 1, 1915, as the date Congress intended the law to operate as to American vessels. The Attorney General reversed this opinion and ruled that Congress intended November the 4, 1915, as the time for enforcement.

When the "Titanic" sank and carried so many hundreds to an ocean grave, the world was shocked to discover the inadequacy of laws the enforcement of which would have greatly reduced the number of fatalities. There was a universal demand for the immediate enactment of better laws to safeguard ocean travel.

It is shocking now to find that in the statute enacted in response to this demand there is an error that leaves in doubt the time of its operation, and has made it necessary for an individual rather than Congress to determine when the law shall be enforced.

A blunder of this type is monumental. In all parliamentary procedure it is elementary that a definite date for the enforcement of the law is practically as important as the signature of the President. Combined, the two constitute the electric current which permits the machinery of the law to be set in motion.

Many members of Congress and others familiar with the history of this "safety at sea" act believed that it would go into effect July 1, and are surprised and disappointed that under the opinion of the Attorney General it will not begin to operate until November, after the season for water travel is over.

In most instances a failure to fix definitely the date a statute shall be enforced involves only financial considerations. But in a law designed for the protection of humanity, lives are at stake and the necessity for the highest degree of care becomes imperative.

NORTH GLADE

The young men of our neighborhood gave a box supper and festival Friday evening June 11th, which was a success financially, with a fairly good attendance. The proceeds is for the benefit of the band which the boys are organizing and as this will be a benefit to the neighborhood generally all should contribute who are interested in home enterprise. "Be a Booster for North Glade" and help us along.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Moon after spending a week with their parents here, returned to their home in Cleveland, Ohio. After leaving here they spent a few days in Fairmont, their former home.

Our Children's Day Services will be the first Sunday in July, which is July 4th. There will be all day services. We extend an invitation to all. Come and bring well filled baskets and spend the day.

Miss Della Savage, of Hoyes, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Moon, and other friends here.

Rev. McCamic preached another of his excellent sermons for us on Wednesday evening to an attentive and appreciative congregation. On this same evening after returning from church services, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Moon were given a serenade by the boys.

The stork visited Mr. and Mrs. A. Baker and left them a baby girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Moon, who had been visiting parents here for the past two weeks, returned to their home in Washington, D. C., Saturday evening.

A WAY TO STOP A GREAT LEAK

Facts Worthy the Most Earnest Consideration of All Garrett Countians.

Garrett county has 265,220 acres of land, less than one-half of which is under cultivation or is improved farm land, viz.: 121,318 acres. True several thousand of acres of this unimproved land is mountain land, not fit for the plow or harrow, but well adapted for the sheep industry and should be put into use at the earliest day.

Much of this unimproved land is good soil and adapted to farm purposes. Statistics show that fifty seven and a fraction acres is the average amount of land in a Garrett county farm under cultivation.

We complain of high taxation. Cannot we account for high taxes by the above figures? We are paying taxes on 140,902 acres of unimproved, non-producing land. In other words, we are getting our living, paying taxes and accumulating some wealth from the products of less than one half of our possessions, and paying taxes on idle property and possibly are under the expense of fencing and keeping up the fencing on the idle lands.

There is great need of more farm land under cultivation. Garrett county is sending yearly, in cold cash, over two hundred thousand dollars out of the county to enrich the farmers of Indiana and Illinois to buy feed for live stock, such as corn, oats and other grain.

These figures are not guess work, but are actual facts, worthy our most earnest consideration.

True, much of this feed is sold to lumbermen and miners, yet a very large portion of it is sold to farmers. One dealer located in a farming community of Garrett county, sent out of the county within the past eighteen months the sum of twenty-one thousand dollars for feed for live stock. There were two other dealers in the same village who bought feed by the car load.

Garrett county should produce this feed and keep these two hundred thousand dollars at home. That we can do it there is no question. Think of it! The interest on $200,000 is $12,000. This sum, yearly, would build a few miles of good roads or several model school houses, or pay the expenses of the Orphans' Court including the salaries of the Judges and Clerk and leave some money in the treasury.

Need we say that if the farmers of Garrett county would increase their acreage of improved farm land, increase the producing power of each acre now in cultivation, this loss would cease.

This $200,000 sent out of Garrett county would pay the general road levy, the appropriation for public schools, build the new roads provided for this year, pay the expenses of elections, pay off the court house bonds due this year, pay for the supervision of assessments, the appropriations for bridges and leave at least $75,000 in the County treasury.

Or, this $200,000 kept in the county would pay the entire levy made by the County Commissioners for 1915, and leave in the treasury $64,191 for new roads and other purposes of improvement.

The Republicon presents these facts to the farmers of Garrett county for their most earnest consideration. They are startling facts. They indicate a great waste or loss this county cannot afford.

There is no reflection cast upon the farmers because this condition exists. This article is written to awaken an interest in increasing the acreage of cultivated land and securing if possible, settlers to purchase land not in practical use. We bespeak a careful thoughtful consideration of this article, hoping that it may be the means of interesting many of Garrett county's farmers in a movement to save this large sum of money for their own comfort and happiness.

We should be producers and not buyers.

"SIGN OF THE SON OF MAN IN HEAVEN"

"Then All the Tribes of the Earth Shall Mourn."

The Character of the Sign—Its Effect Upon the Whole World—Why Mourn, if Messiah's Kingdom Brings Blessings—The Day of Trouble a Plowshare to Prepare the Hearts of Mankind—This Severity Is In Mercy Designed to Prepare For Blessing.

August 23.—The beauty and instructiveness of The Photo-Drama of Creation are more and more appreciated by the public as time passes. This wonderful combination of Biblical illustrations completely outlines the Scriptures and lays a good foundation for intelligent Bible study.

Pastor Russell's topic today was from the text, "Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—Matthew 24:30.

The speaker pointed out various suggestions made by scholars respecting the import of this prophecy—some guessing that the sign would be a cross in the sky; others, that it would be Christ Himself, appearing in some wrathful form to humanity, causing dismay, etc. He surmised that his audience had read published reports of his recent sermon respecting Christ's Second Coming in its two phases—the Parousia, or invisible presence, followed by the Epiphania, or bright-shining in flaming fire, or judgment. He could not say that the Sign of the Son of Man would be His Parousia; for Christ's Parousia will not be known except to the most saintly of His Church. Consequently it must stand related to His Epiphania, or shining forth in judgments, which the whole world will recognize.

The hearers were reminded that a sign is merely an indication; for instance, crepe is a sign of mourning, the cross represents Christianity, the crescent Mohammedanism. So the sign of the Son of Man in heaven would properly be some indication that He has taken His great power and begun to reign.

Mourning Because of Him.

To the question, How could such a sign appear in the sky, the heavens? the Pastor replied that this is not the thought. He reminded his audience that the Bible repeatedly uses the words heaven, earth, mountain, sea, in a symbolic sense—the earth representing organized society, mountains representing kingdoms, seas the restless classes of humanity. Then he showed that in the same symbolic usage the heavens represent ecclesiastical powers—churchianity. The sign in the heavens, he believes, signifies that the flaming fire of judgments will first manifest itself in ecclesiastical circles.

Gradually mankind will realize that a new government is in control, and that justice will be laid to the line and righteousness to the plummet. Since unrighteousness is everywhere prevalent because of man's fallen condition, the consciences of the whole world will be awakened, the speaker declared. Fear will come upon men everywhere, not only because they will see Christ's righteous judgments in religious circles, but because they will see Him coming and will recognize that shortly they, too, must be involved.

The Pastor reminded his audience that mankind have very crude and incorrect views of the object of Messiah's Second Coming and Kingdom. "Doctrines of devils," brought into the creeds during the Dark Ages, have made so void the Word of God that the majority of mankind dread God as their Almighty Foe, instead of realizing Him to be the Father of mercies. Not knowing of the glorious blessings which the Kingdom will bring mankind, they will be apprehensive as they perceive Christ's righteous judgments encircling the earth.

"The Heavens Being on Fire."

Next was discussed at length St. Peter's words, "The heavens being on fire," and "the earth and the works therein will be burned up." These the Pastor believes describe the sign of the Son of Man. He warned his hearers against making the mistake of our forefathers in supposing that these words refer to a literal burning of the literal earth and sky, and explained that while the symbolic heavens and earth will catch "fire" and pass away with a great commotion, the physical earth will remain practically as it is, and begin to undergo the transforming influences of Restitution.

The speaker then demonstrated that the flaming fire of Divine judgments will appear in the heavens—ecclesiasticism—and subsequently reach the earth, purifying society from everything sinful, selfish, unjust, and preparing men's hearts for Divine blessings. "The elements will melt with fervent heat." We see the capitalistic and the laboring element separating. We see preparations for the great Time of Trouble. Things are getting so hot that presently spontaneous combustion will set in, and clear the way for Messiah's Kingdom.

FIBS AND FABLES.

A Former Oakland Resident Contributes a Column of Truths.

Mr. Leo J. Rasche, of Grafton, brother of Editor Harry H. Rasche, of the Mountain Democrat of Oakland, contributed the following under the head of "Fibs and Fables" to the columns of the Grafton Sentinel of last Friday:

It has been some time since I have contributed to your columns, but I have been induced to erupt a brain storm by reason of many fibs and fables circulating about the city as thick as Germans in Belgium. These fibs and fables begin often innocently enough, but through the evolutionary process of passing on from person to person, they often gain in magnitude, like the rolling ball of snow, until they eventually evolve into injurious stories that can be characterized by nothing less than the short and ugly word.

Asked recently to comment on something that was none of his concern, Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison, who, by the way, has it all over the rest of the cabinet, with the possible exception of Mr. Lane, like a chautauqua tent, replied:

"When I was a boy my father once pointed out a gentlemen to me and said: 'There goes a man who has made a success attending to his own business.'"

Personally I don't know of any one who has made a great success in attending to the other fellow's business, and those who circulate false stories without knowing of their truth or falsity, are dangerous people. Why wouldn't it be better, in the spirit of gentle charity, to just say nothing at all if we can't say something praiseworthy? Why pray at church on Sunday and then go round the rest of the week with a viperous, scorpion tongue, as sharp as a butcher's stilletto at a pig sticking, spreading perfidious poison? No matter how small the fib, by constant repetition, it soon develops until it finally looks as big as a no-trumper hand at whist. Did you ever hear a story teller trying to lessen the importance of his narrative? Not on your life! It's always added to. Each repeater puts on just a few more trimmings.

These gossip jugglers usually know the hand writing of every girl in seven states and are a greater menace to connubial felicity than seven evenings a week spent at the club. They usually have a polished, receding forehead that fades away like a $2 bill in a poker game and a nose for gossip that flutters like a rabbit's when they scent some new delectable morsel to discuss and with which to disgust. They have a solemn, secretive manner and a way of arching the eye-brows whenever they put over a strictly confidental story. Then they pass the confidence on to Jones, Brown, Smith and the rest of the neighborhood in like manner. They are vivid, lurid word-painters and can take the most innocent occurrence and distort the facts in a manner that in the weaving of their yarn, would jolt a fond mother into hysterics. They have an enlargement of imagination that would make Edgar Allen Poe, Rider Haggard, Jules Verne or Conan Doyle green-eyed with jealousy, and a bump of curiosity that would make Pike's Peak look like a mole-hill. They usually have flap-jack-like protruding ears that wiggle with a sense of supreme satisfaction whenever they listen to a private conversation from which they gather innocent, harmless facts which they jostle into a yarn resembling the truth just as much as a scrambled egg resembles a giraffe, and they remind one very much of the one-eyed fellow of the story book. They know all the favorite diseases of the people of the community and have small, bead-like eyes like a—well, lets not defame the small animal by the comparison. They are self-appointed keepers of the public morals and have as much kindliness of spirit as a Mexican avenger when he sees blood on the moon: and as much morality and compunction of conscience as a bad bunch of pirates marooning a captive on a desert island.

"Who steals my purse steals trash," wrote the great bard, "but he who robs me of my good name takes that which he cannot repay." "A lie kills the self-respect of the liar," says Confucius, the great Chinese philosopher, and Israel Zangwill, the incomparable Jewish author says: "A lie is a libel against the character of the liar." We all know T. R.'s opinion of the character-assasin, and Elbert Hubbard wrote: "A falsehood huckster is one who would spread poison to kill innocent puppies."

Seems to me these spreaders of false tales would have as much chance of entering the pearly gates as the camel that leaped through the eye of a needle in a straw stack and broke his back on a bale of hay.

What a terrible waste of time is that time taken in injurious gossip! And what a futile task is that of character defaming! No character can be harmed in the remotest degree by gossip. Reputation? True. Reputation can be injured by others, but character never. Character can be injured only by its possessor. No matter what the reverses; no matter what the stories circulated; no matter what ill winds of fortune may blow, or what prosperity may come, we can never, never change our character. That remains. If we have character it cheers us in adversity, and aids us in prosperity. If we lack it, no station in life—even the loftiest—is worth while. "Lincoln was not great because he was president, but the president was great because he was Lincoln." Attempting to kill character is waste of time that might be better employed. Reputation, only, suffers injury, and all of those big enough and broad enough to bear the "stings and arrows of outrageous fortune," may stand at full height and with Henley say:

"It matters not how straight the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul."

So no matter what comes or goes lets be ourselves, lets be cheerful; let us not condemn those who circulate false stories; let us pity them and be sorry for them and let us hope that they may see the wrong they do as we forget and forgive them. Let us say something good or nothing at all.

Let us get together and be a community of interests. Let us forget fibs and fables, let us brighten up and cheer up, and sing with Riley:

"For, we know, not every morrow
Can be sad;
So, forgetting all the sorrow
We have had,
Let us fold away our fears
And put by our foolish tears
And through all the coming years
Just be glad."

Considerable alarm and uneasiness was occasioned at the home of Samuel Hershberger, one of the most highly respected of the Amish brethren, by the disappearance of his only son, John, who had been sent out to repair fence in the fields, and who when night came did not return. The lad, who is but 15 years old, is a very obedient youth and fears of foul play or sudden illness were entertained. A search was made over the grounds and through all the adjoining community, the neighbors joining in the search with lanterns when darkness fell. Friends at Meyersdale and other points were telephoned to and the boy was found the next morning in one of the railroad stations at Meyersdale, presumably waiting to board a train for points unknown. When questioned, he gave very unsatisfactory replies and his real motive is not known. His mother's health has not been good for years, and the occurence was a great shock to her. Much sympathy was manifested for the parents over the fright and anxiety they underwent until the boy's return.

Misses Ethel Broadwater, Hazel Engle, Mrs. C. B. Getty, and Olin Broadwater were recent visitors at Frostburg.

The multiplication of county-wide Chautauqua, has practically put the old originals out of business. Few of them are now running profitably, and some, not at all—for lack of patronage—because, as a rule, when people can get a thing at home, they will not go away to get it, after it becomes common at home, they are not apt to care for it there—the novelty has worn off—especialy in busy seasons when work, and not entertainment, demands first attention.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Wonders.

Let me speak of some of the wonders of Providence. We are apt to think little of this but it is a power in the world. We see it in the history of Israel. They were led into captivity to correct their errors, to cure them of idolatry, to make of them an independent nation and when God's time came they were marvelously delivered while heathen nations felt the Divine power was ready to burst forth in fire and flood for the protection of Israel. The mightiest elements of nature wrought for the chosen race, impressing on them the fact that the secret of their greatness and success depended, not on chariots and horses, but on personal and unwavering reliance of the Word.

When in the history of any people is Providential interposition more marked than at the Red Sea.

Three days march from Egypt found them encamped in a plain, walled in by ranges of mountains on either side with the sea in front. They must move forward to the sea or go backward the way they came or pass through the opening toward the west leading back to the capitol of Pharaoh.

They were in straits. They are ignorant as to why they are led into this net of difficulties unless it be to entrap them, till their enraged master can overtake and drive them back to bondage. The joy of escape from bondage has subsided, while the terrors of the desert, the weariness, hunger and thirst of the march make hated Egypt and its grevious bondage seem attractive.

This horde, with its flocks and herds is lost among the barren hills and desert plains. Their hopes have given place to despair, which is completed as they discover the Egyptian host after them. Their flashing armor and tossing plumes rise over the ridges of sand and gleam out in the dust clouds made by the terrible war chariots, led by the proud and impious King himself, Egypts pride and power can ride down this disorderly multitude of fugitive slaves with their weapons and discipline, as the eagle swoops down upon the lamb in the field.

They see the situation, they are weary with the march, so they resolved to encamp for the night and await the light of day before they rush to the slaughter or capture.

The cry of the Israelites was frantic. They had forgotten the miracles by Moses in Egypt.

They had no idea that the rod which changed the Sacred Nile into blood can smite the Red Sea and make a dry path for them to pass through. With sublime faith their leader tries to calm their fears, for he knew that Jehovah would not forsake him now amidst two and a half millions of excited credulous and impulsive people unaccustomed to habits or order and self-control. They are in what seems to be a death trap. How came they to turn in the opposite direction and march, as if infatuated, into this wilderness of burning sand and barren mountains. Wonder of Providence! On the morning of the third day of the march a mysterious cloud is in the van of the host, a lofty column, like the smoke of some mighty sacrifice so high that it could be seen for miles, yet so low that it could be followed as a guide. It did not melt in the heat of the sun; it could not be driven away by the wind. The Hebrews followed it as it moved in silent majesty across the plain and thus they had been mysteriously drawn out of their course into this valley, hemmed in by mountains and sea, but as darkness comes on as if to quiet the fears and frenzied cries of the host that rose higher than the roar of the sea, this divine pillar majestically lifts itself into the air passes over the host and settles between them and their pursuers, hiding them from each other. There it stood against the strong sea wind, black as midnight to the enemy, but emitting cheering light over the Hebrews. Now is the time for the Lord to work, so Moses with his wonder working rod cleaves a highway in the channel of the deep for the millions to pass through dry shod. At the command "Go forward" all night the tramp of the multitude is heard between the walls of waters, while the strange cloud sends its wierd light to show the way, and when the last one has entered the sea, the cloud moves behind. The light of the moon reveals to the Egytian sentinels the deserted encampment, the alarm is given, the trumpet sounds to arms and soon the host rushes madly after the fleeing Israelites.

They can hear the voice in the distance; they can easily trace their line of march, yet see naught but the cloud. They follow on thinking they will soon burst through the cloud and fall upon their prey, yet ignorant of the fact that they are marching into the jaws of death. On they drive all night long, as men in a dream, the panting host on the verge of seizing the Hebrews yet always defeated. When the morning dawned upon those Arabian hills and the last of the Israelites were safely through, the cloud changed to the Egyptians. It is a column of fire as high as heaven, shooting out lightnings and making earth tremble with thunders. The orderly host was seized with panic and strange fears took hold upon them, for it seemed that an awful eye was gazing on them out of the darkness and livid with anger. Horses dash against each other, scythe armed axles are dragged over the helpless who have fallen, charioteers and footmen are trampled in the mire, but in the midst of the agonizing struggle for life and the wild confusion that has seized the host, irresitible waves sweep over them all and when the sea has subsided the haughty king and his host, the pride and power of Egypt are gone forever. With the roaring of the sea, which at every surge heaves Egypts proud sons on shore, is mingled the voice of the Israelites as with timbrels and dances they sing the song of triumph for the wonders of Providence. A tide was kept back for twelve hours and a host of Christians were saved from slaughter by the Duke of Alba.

The invincible Arunda was scattered to the winds and sent to the bottom of the North Sea by the great storm that struck it.

Yet this mighty Deliverer is our God, who keeps the walls of our habitation from crushing our sleeping forms, as truly as He restrained the water from submerging Israel.

What may we think of those who enjoy the safety and sleep of their homes yet go to their daily occupations in the morning without a word of prayer and thanksgiving for the mercy that has preserved them; to Him whose wonderful providences are daily manisested that we may confide in Him as a faithful guide, who alone can lead us safely through life's journey, that we may not be helpless when the hour of supreme peril comes.

CHARACTER OF EXPORTS

If the April rate of exports keeps up, there is no question but what the so-called balance of trade in our favor will soon reach the amount predicted by Secretary Redfield—one billion dollars. Ordinarily this would indicate extravagantly prosperous times in the United States, but these tremendous figures lose their significance when the character of the exports that contribute to this balance are considered. The Department of Commerce figures for April show that the exports of breadstuffs, food animals, meat and dairy products, with cotton, amounted to more than $136,000,000, while in the same month in 1914 the exportation of the same articles amounted to only $58,000,000.

During April, 1915, the exports of breadstuffs alone increased $58,000,000 over the same month last year. The exports of corn increased by more than fourteen times; of wheat, by more than seven times; of flour, nearly doubled; of canned beef, by more than twenty-five times; of fresh beef, nearly fifty times. Thus it will be seen that our exports are chiefly dominated by agricultural products, and that the great demand for these products was occasioned solely by the European war. If this war had not intervened this country would have been in a sorry plight through Democratic mismanagement. As it is, the home markets continue dull, although slightly relieved by the war and in spite of the Democratic economic policies. Any prosperity that has come to us has been through the barrier erected by the war, which for the time being, acts as a protective tariff.

Advertising vs. Praying.

The small daughter of a Little Rock family had been praying each evening at bedtime for a baby sister. The other morning her mother reading the paper, exclaimed:

"I see Mrs. Smith has a little daughter."

"How do you know that," asked the child.

"I read it in the paper," answered the mother.

"Read it to me," said the daughter.

The mother read:

"Born—on March—to Mr. and Mrs. ——Smith, a daughter."

The child thought a moment, then said:

"I know what I am going to do. I am going to quit praying and begin advertising."—National Monthly.

FROM OAKLAND TO THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

A description of the Trip Made By Marylanders.

We arrived at Portland Oregon 6 a. m., May 23. After having breakfast, at Hotel Benson, we were given a trip over the city by the Chamber of Commerce.

Portland is a very interesting and hustling city. Lumbering is the principal industry. The residential part of the city is fine. Here we met a number of Marylanders, among them was a King Wilson who came to Portland from Allegany county and is now one of the leading attorneys of Portland.

We left Portland at midnight for Seattle, Washington, arrived there at 7 a. m. After breakfast at Hotel Benson, we were given a fine motor trip over the city by the Chamber of Commerce. All along the line we find them boosting for their city. They seem to think they live in the best city in the world. In the afternoon we were given a boat trip across Lake Washington. Seattle, it seems, feels the effect more keenly of the depressed business conditions of the country than some of the other coast cities.

We left Seattle at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday May 25 for Victoria, B. C., arriving at 12:30 p. m. After lunch at the famous Empress Hotel, we were given a Tally Ho trip over the city. This is a very nice little city, situated on Vancover Island, and before the war broke out had a population of about 75000, of all nationalities, since then about 25000 left the city. You can imagine how this would effect a city of this size. Everything is very quiet and the whole city seems to be in mourning. At one time 4,000 soldiers left here and out of that number, it is said, all have been killed and wounded, but about 1000.

The next morning we visited the Hall of Parliament, which is quite a building. We left Victoria at 1:45 p. m., May 26, for Vancouver, had a very delightful trip through Lake Georgia. We came by boat all the way from "Seattle" to Vancouver, which city we left by rail Wednesday evening at 9:30. We are now passing along the Swap Lake which is 50 miles in length, and right in the Cascade mountains. The scenery is fine and a very nice bright morning. We can look out of the window and see more snow capped mountains. This was one of the days we spent looking at the picturesque scenery of the Canadian mountains, its lakes and rivers. About 2.30 p. m., we came to the Canadian Rockies, which for mountain scenery, far excells any thing we have seen on our trip. The many high snow covered peaks certainly presents one of the finest views in the world. With us is a party who has traveled through the Alps in Switzerland and he says the Alps look like toys compared with the Rockies and had he known there were such mountains in this country he would never have gone abroad for scenery.

At Field "Alberta," the train stopped 10 minutes to give us a view of the first glacier we saw. Here the snow stays all the year, and last winter at one time was 8 feet deep. In all they had about 40 feet of snow.

We reached Lake Louise 10 p. m., where we spent the night at the hotel and yesterday in sight seeing, leaving Lake Louise as 8:40 and arriving at Bauff 10:50 p. m.

The setting of the sun in the snow capped mountains last evening about 8 p. m., certainly presented a beautiful sight. At 9:15 p. m., we could read a paper without a light and it gets daylight at 2 a. m. So you see one who works from daylight until dark can get in a long day. We are now at the famous Bauff Springs Hotel. After breakfast we will take a sight seeing trip and do some fishing before leaving.

I forgot to mention about the cub bear we saw at Field, that had just been caught and put in a box and brought to the station for sale and was sold to a lady in Minneapolis, Minn. Just before our train arrived, we were told that about 20 miles from this place there were seven bears killed in the past week and that "Teddy" was booked for a hunt here in October.

The Editor's Always Quick At Repartee.

An old gossip recently remarked that the Review man was "a poor stick." You're quite right madam. Your opinion is valuable and you should be a good judge, as your male kin are about as degenerated and depraved a lot of unhung reptiles as are permitted out of State prison.—Alba (Mich) Review.
